FOREWORD

THE NEGRO YEAR BOOK for 1921-1922 is the sixth annual edition, no edition for 1919-1920 being published. The historical material in previous editions has been brought down to date and re-arranged as far as the addition of new material and changes in the significance of the topics relating to the Negro seemed to demand. There is a mass of material in the review of the events relating to the Negro, 1919-1921, interpreting the attitude of the Negro. This data is compiled from every available source and has been supplemented by the researches of the editor, especially with reference to Lynchings, Riots, Migration, the Negro in Politics, Race-relations and Inter-racial Co-operation.

The Negro Year Book is the standard book of reference on all matters relating to the Negro and is the most extensively used compendium of information on this subject. It circulates widely in every part of the United States and to a considerable extent in Canada, the West Indies, Central America, South America, Europe, Asia, and Africa.

The present edition contains new information about the attitude of the African, what he wants in both West and South Africa, and contains a map showing the territorial changes and distribution according to existing mandates. In the section on the Negro Population in the United States the reader will find new material on Migration on Black Counties, the black and mulatto elements in the population, changes in land-tenure, and comparative statistics of the Negro and white population in cities of 2,000 or more inhabitants

This edition of the Negro Year Book has the most extensive and up-to-date bibliography which has yet been put out on the Negro in the United States. In addition to the topically arranged bibliographies at the end of the book, the reader will find throughout the volume, in connection with special topics, further references to the subjects discussed. This is especially helpful to the student who wishes to pursue further the investigation of any particular topic.

The price of the Negro Year Book, postpaid, is, paper cover, 50c; board cover, $1.00. Special rates to agents.

Review of Events Affecting the Negro 1919-1921

The Period 1919-1921 Notable for Conflicting Progressive and Retrogressive Tendencies. Negro Nevertheless Continues to make Progress.

In the review which follows the Editor of the Year Book has summarized the results of a comprehensive investigation of the events affecting the Negro since the close of the World War.

The period 1919-1921 was one of the most notable in the history of the Negroes of the United States since their emancipation. It was in many respects a second Reconstruction Period. Unlike the old Reconstruction Period of 1865-1875, however, it was not a readjustment of recently emancipated slaves to the conditions of free men but instead it was a readjustment to the better economic, educational and social conditions which had been brought about as a result of the World War.

The period 1919-1921 found the Negroes occupying in the industrial field, positions which before the World War had been closed to them. There was also a marked improvement in their educational facilities both for elementary, secondary and higher education. It was during this period that the greatest movement for racial re-adjustment and cooperation took on a practical basis. While these progressive tendencies were operating there were working at the same time a number of retrogressive tendencies which found expression in an increase in many quarters of prejudice and discriminations. It was during this time that four of the worst riots in the history of the country occurred.

Are Conditions As they affect the Negro Growing Better or Worse?

The happenings of the period 1919-1921 as they related to the Negro caused many to ask whether the conditions affecting them were growing better or worse. Among the reasons for this question were: race prejudice appeared to be increasing; as compared with 1916 and 1917, when the number of lynchings reported were 54 and 38 respectively, the number reported for 1918, 1919, 1920 and 1921 were 64, 83, 61 and 64.

There was in 1919 the agitation concerning the alleged growth of radicalism among Negroes, an aftermath of the unfounded charges made during the World War that through German propaganda they were being made disloyal.

To further confirm the idea that conditions were growing worse there were the bloody riots of Washington, Chicago, Elaine and Tulsa. On the other hand it was found that during the period 1919-1921 there were the most liberal appropriations yet made by Southern States for the education of the Negro; there was the rise and growth of the Inter-Racial Co-operation Movement, and notably the beginning of the effort of Negro women and Southern white women to cooperate for improved race relations. It was also found that at no time since their emancipation did the Negroes make greater progress along all lines as in education, in property owning, in business and in systematic religious work than they did during the period 1919-1921.

Inter-Racial Co-operation Develops From Spirit Co-operation During The War.

During the war white people and black people cooperated in subscribing to liberty loans, in the purchasing of war saving stamps, the production and conservation of food and other war work activities. From the various communities the white and black soldiers were sent away with the same hearty Godspeed and in many instances under the auspices of the same citizens committee.

The result of this working together in war work activities brought whites and Negroes into a more helpful relationship. It was discovered that there was in every community, intelligent Negroes whose judgment and wisdom could be trusted and who gladly cooperated with the whites. It was out of the spirit of the war cooperation that the after-war inter-racial cooperation developed.

Some Programs Proposed For Inter-Racial Co-operation.

During 1919 a number of programs for inter-racial cooperation were proposed. Important among these were the programs of the Memphis Chamber of Commerce, the Nashville Commercial Club, and the Industrial Welfare Committee at Greenville, Mississippi. The program of the Memphis Chamber of Commerce included: "An endeavor to secure for the Negroes a square deal at the hands of all employers and public officials, in particular as relates to: the segregation laws (to which there are no objections as to the laws, but complaints as to the manner of enforcement) the collection of poll taxes, road taxes, the handling of garnishments, etc; the loan shark evil; the enforcement of sanitary laws; the creation of better housing conditions; park facilities; better schools, especially along vocational lines."

The program of the Nashville Commercial Club covers six points:

"Humane treatment by the police when arrests are made, with fair and impartial trial at the petty city court and the deputy magistrate's court; correction of unfair discrimination on street cars whereby colored passengers do not receive the same treatment as is given white passengers; equal salaries in schools and equal wages for equal work; improvement and development of parks and playgrounds for colored people; courteous treatment at railway ticket offices and other places, where Negroes must go in attending to routine business affairs; a correction of unkind statements in the press with suppression of unsubstantiated stories of Negro crime."

Southern Sociological Congress Presents Program Racial Cooperation To Conference of Governors.

At the Conference of Governors of states held at Salt Lake City, Utah, August 20, 1919, the Secretary and President of the Southern Sociological Congress presented the following program for the improvement of race relations.

"First—That the Negro should be liberated from the blighting fear of injustice and mob violence. To this end it is imperatively urgent that lynching be prevented:—By the enlistment of Negroes themselves in preventing crimes that provoke mob violence ; by prompt trial and speedy execution of persons guilty of heinous crimes; by legislation that will make it unnecessary for a woman who has been assaulted to appear in court to testify publicly, by legislation that will give the governor authority to dismiss a sheriff for failure to protect a prisoner in his charge."

"Second—That the citizenship rights of the Negro should be safeguarded, particularly by securing proper traveling accommodations; by providing better housing conditions and preventing extortionate rents; by providing adequate educational and recreational facilities."

"Third—That closer cooperation between white and colored citizens should be promoted, (without encouraging any violation of race integrity); by organizing local committees, both white and colored, in as many communities as possible for the consideration of inter-racial problems; by the employment of Negro physicians, nurses and policemen as far as practicable in work for sanitation, public health and law enforcement among their own people; by enlisting all agencies possible in fostering justice, good-will and kindliness in all individual dealings of the members of one race with members of the other; by the appointment of a standing Committee by the Governor of each State for the purpose of making a careful study of the causes underlying race friction with the view of recommending proper means for their removal."

International Convention Young Men's Christian Association Appoints Commission Colored Work.

At the 1919 International Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association, a commission on colored work was appointed. It was composed of Northern white men, Southern white men, and colored men from both sections. Some of the findings of the commission were:

"That more adequately trained leadership for various departments of the association should be provided; that a nation-wide plan to provide funds for developing the work among colored men and boys must be found; that a new sense of confidence between white and colored leaders must be promoted; That the Negro should be given a larger share of self-determination in the association movement.

A comment on these findings stated that: "The commission felt that in most cases where the association was doing work for both white and colored men that the boards of directors were ready to welcome the fullest voice of Negro representatives on boards, and to work with the Negroes of the local communities in developing the most efficient service to Negro men and boys. This is rather a radical departure, and bids fair to do more than almost anything else to bring about full confidence between the two races."

As a method of putting this spirit into practice two Negroes, Robert R. Moton, Principal of Tuskegee Institute and R. E. Jones, Bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church were placed on the International Committee of the Association. On July 6, 1920, Mr. Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago, renewed his offer to contribute $25,000 to any city raising not less than $125,000 for a Young Men's Christian Association Building for Negroes. A limit of two years was set in which qualifications for this offer might be made.

The After War Program National War Work Council Southeastern Department Y. M. C. A.

"Early in 1918 the National War Work Council of the Southeastern Department of the Y. M. C. A., included as a part of its after war program a plan of work for promoting racial adjustment. This plan was later extended to include all the Southern states. The plan included the using of both white and Negro workers in the several counties of the South. A two weeks' training course for white workers was conducted at Blue Ridge, N. C., and for Negro workers at Gammon Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Georgia. The program of field work included the following: "Study and Investigations of Conditions;" "Public Meetings of White and Colored;" "The Use of Newspapers and Other Publicity to Promote Inter-Racial Cooperation;" "A Program of United Community Service;" "A Program of Civic Administration;" and "A Program of Economic Justice."

Group of Southern Men Organize Commission On Inter-Racial Cooperation.

In November 1918, a group of Southern men organized the Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation. These men had had an unusual opportunity to study the relation of the races in the South, in the Army Camps, at home and overseas and had become convinced that the war would result in greatly improving race relations in the South if the best spirit which had been manifested between the races during the period of the war could be preserved.

An appeal was made to various organizations for finances, and finally the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. undertook to finance the plans of the Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation.

The Commission undertook to organize small committees of influential white and colored leaders in local communities who would come together for conference on things pertaining to race relations in that community needing attention, and who would cooperate on programs of improvement agreed upon in such conferences. The beginnings of such organizations have been made in something like eight hundred counties. In many of the counties these committees are meeting with regularity and have demonstrated that race relations can be improved, whenever white and colored leaders will take time for frank conference and will work earnestly together for the common good.

In most of the Southern states small State Inter-Racial Committees have been formed. In these it has been endeavored to bring together the leaders of those state-wide organizations, white and colored, whose activities affect race relation, with a few additional white and colored leaders from the state at large.

Christian Leaders of South Hold Conference On Inter-Racial Co-operation.

A conference of leaders in the church work of the South was held at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, August 18-21, 1920. The following appeal was issued to the Christian people of the South:

"We, a group of white Christian men and women of the South, absolutely loyal to the best traditions and convictions of the South, and especially to the principle of racial integrity, voluntarily assembled upon the invitation of the Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation, and after prayerful and careful consideration of prevailing inter-racial relations and conditions, do deliberately declare it to be our profound conviction that the real responsibility for the solution of inter-racial problems in the South rests directly upon the hearts and consciences of the Christian forces of our land."

"We are also persuaded that the best method by which to approach the consideration and solution of such problems is through local organizations, composed of the recognized Christian leaders of both races, organizations similar to the Christian Council formed and functioning so effectively under the inter-racial Christian leadership of Atlanta, Ga."

"It is a matter of common knowledge that grave injustices are often suffered by members of the Negro race in matters of legal procedure, traveling facilities, educational facilities, the public press, domestic service, child welfare, and in other relations of life. Therefore, we venture to make the following observations and suggestions."

Christian Forces of South Urged to Combat Lynching Evil And to Stand For Justice to Negro.

"1. We unhesitatingly declare LYNCHING to be a crime against the honor of our nation. We rejoice to know that many Southern governors and other Christian leaders have taken very high ground on this question and have by their attitude and action reduced the crime of lynching in their respective states. We believe the Christian people of the South are unalterably opposed to this savage practice. We, therefore recommend that in the pulpit, in the religious press and denominational literature, and in every other possible way, the Christian forces of the South unhesitatingly and uncompromisingly condemn and oppose all mob violence and that the voice of our United Christian effort be steadfastly raised in the defense of the sacredness of life and of law and order."

"2. In the matter of LEGAL JUSTICE, we urge our ministers and laymen throughout the South, by frequent visitation, to keep in close touch with the administration of justice in their local courts, particularly in the petit courts. In this connection we express the hope that "Legal Aid Societies" will be formed in all cities and larger towns, and that the service of competent lawyers will be enlisted by such Legal Aid Societies to the end that the poor and unprivileged of all races shall have justice."

"3. In the matter of TRAVELING FACILITIES, we recognize that frequently inadequate provision is made by the railroads for Negro passengers. We, therefore, urge that the Negro race under the laws of separation pertaining to public transportation, be strictly observed and safe-guarded in the provision of adequate and equitable arrangements for the safety and comfort of travelers of the Negro race. Particularly, do we urge that necessary provision be made for the privacy of colored women and for their protection from possible insult."

"4. In regard to the problems of SANITATION AND HOUSING, we deplore the sanitary and bad housing conditions which prevail in many sections of the South, and we call upon the Christian people of our land to cooperate actively in fighting such conditions in respective communities for the protection of both races from possible detrimental reaction from such conditions, as well as to safeguard the health and efficiency of the Negro race in particular. Especially do we feel that rooming accommodations for those employed in domestic service should be such as to insure the maximum of moral as well as physical protection."

It is Urged That
In all Relations With Negroes
Christian Principles Be Applied.

"5. In the matter of EDUCATION, we hold to the conviction that ignorance breeds disorder, vice and crime, and that an effectual remedy is the enlightened Christian intelligence and conscience, which can be secured by education under Christian direction and auspices. We rejoice in the worthy efforts of the several Christian denominations to provide schools of the higher grades for the training of Negro ministers, doctors, teachers, etc., and we express the hope that such beneficent efforts will be enlarged and multiplied in the ever-advancing programs of the Christian forces of the South. In the matter of public and elementary schools, we urge the white Christian leadership of the South to see to it that adequate buildings and equipment are provided for the public schools of the Negro race, that to this end an equitable distribution of school funds be had, and that more adequate provision be made in the public school system for the training of Negro teachers."

"6. We urge the ministers of our churches to preach to and teach their people on these vital inter-racial issues and to exhort them to an immediate and practical application of CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLES in all of their relations with the colored race."

"7. We call on all the Christian forces of our land, local and general, as individuals or as organizations, to lend their support and their cooperation to the humanitarian and Christian effort of the Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation for the cultivation of a better understanding and MORE SYMPATHETIC AND EQUITABLE relations between the races.

"8. We recommend that the ministry and leaders of the local churches of both races cooperate in the promotion of local Inter-Racial Committees for the purpose of securing better inter-racial relations to the end that PEACE AND JUSTICE may be conserved for all."

"9. We respectfully, but very earnestly request that the several official and denominational organizations of both races in the South, make a thorough and efficient study of the inter-racial situation in their respective fields, and that they formulate WORTHY and ADEQUATE PROGRAMS within the fields and scope of their respective denominational and educational activities by which they can all make most valuable contributions to the end that this much-to-be-desired better understanding and spirit of cooperation be secured between the races for their mutual benefit."

"Reiterating our loyalty to the best traditions and convictions of the white people of the South and our unswerving and unalterable adherence to both the principle and the practice of race integrity, we call upon our fellow-Christians of both races throughout the South to unite in a SINCERE and IMMEDIATE EFFORT to solve our inter-racial problems with the spirit of Christ, ACCORDING TO THE PRINCIPLES OF THE GOSPEL and for the highest interest and benefit of all concerned."

Conference Southern White Women Issue Statement Relative To Womanhood And Childhood Negro Race.

Under the auspices of, and with the financial assistance of the "Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation," the Women's Council of the M. E. Church South, held a conference of Southern women on Race Relations, at Memphis, October 6 and 7, 1920. There were present the members of the Council and the presidents and social service superintendents of those conferences of the denomination where there are numbers of Negroes living.

There were also present by invitation, general and state officers of all women's missionary organizations of all the white denominations in the South and the representatives of other groups of the best leadership of the women of the South. Four colored women were also present by invitation. They were: Mrs. Booker T. Washington, Mrs. Robert R. Moton, Mrs. Charlotte Hawkins Brown and Mrs. George E. Haynes. The conference issued the following:

"We, a company of Southern white women, in conference assembled on the invitation of the Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation, find ourselves with a deep sense of responsibility to the womanhood and childhood of the Negro race, and also with a great desire for a Christian settlement of the problems that overshadow the homes of both races."

Women Believe That Exercise Of Justice, Consideration And Sympathetic Co-operation Will Largely Remove Racial Friction.

"We recognize and deplore the fact that there is friction between the races, but we believe that this can be largely removed by the exercise of justice, consideration and sympathetic cooperation."

"In order that the results of this conference may be perpetuated and enlarged, we recommend:

COOPERATION.

"That a Continuation Committee be appointed to devise ways and means for carrying out the work considered by this conference; that this committee be composed of one woman from each denomination and Christian agency here represented, and that it be empowered to add to its membership as may seem necessary; that each local community form a Woman's Inter-Racial Committee, which may include representatives from all religious, civil and social service bodies working in the community, and that this Continuation Committee recommend plans by which this may be accomplished."

CONSTRUCTIVE MEASURES.

"Desiring that everything that hinders the establishment of confidence peace justice and righteousness in our land shall be removed in order that there shall be better understanding and good will in our midst, we call attention to the following points as possible causes of friction, which if corrected, may go far toward creating a better day."

"DOMESTIC SERVICE—We acknowledge our responsibility for the protection of the Negro women and girls in our homes and on the streets. We therefore recommend: That the domestic service be classed as an occupation and coordinated with other world service in order that better relations may be established by both employer and employee."

Women Pledge Themselves to Strive to Secure Respect for Womanhood Regardless of Race or Color.

"CHILD WELFARE—We are persuaded that the conservation of the life and health of Negro children is of the utmost importance to the community. We therefore urge: That day nurseries and kindergartens be established in local communities for the protection, care and training of children of Negro mothers who go out to work; that free baby clinics be established and that government leaflets on child welfare be distributed to expectant mothers, thus teaching the proper care of themselves and their children; that adequate playgrounds and recreational facilities be established for Negro children and young people."

"SANITATION AND HOUSING.—Since good housing and proper sanitation are necessary for both physical and moral life, we recommend: That a survey of housing and sanitary conditions be made in the Negro section in each local community, followed by an appeal to the proper authorities for improvements when needed."

"EDUCATION—Since sacredness of personality is the basis for all civilization, we urge: That every agency touching the child life of the nation shall strive to create mutual respect in the hearts of the children of different races. We are convinced that the establishment of a single standard of morals for men and women, both black and white, is necessary for the life and safety of a nation. We therefore pledge ourselves to strive to secure respect and protection for womanhood everywhere, regardless of race or color. Since provision for the education of Negro children is still inadequate, we recommend: More equitable division of the school fund, suitable school buildings and equipment, longer school terms, higher standards and increased pay for teachers.

The Newspapers Asked To Give Prominence To Worthy Constructive Efforts And Not To Crimes Of Negroes.

"TRAVEL.—Since colored people frequently do not receive fair treatment on street cars, on railroads and in railway stations and recognizing this as one of the chief causes of friction between the races, we urge: That immediate steps be taken to provide for them adequate accommodations and courteous treatment at the hands of street car and railway officials."

"LYNCHING—As women, we urge those who are charged with the administration of the law to prevent lynching at any cost. We are persuaded that the proper determination on the part of the constituted officials, upheld by public sentiment, would result in the detection and prosecution of those guilty of this crime. Therefore we pledge ourselves to endeavor to create a public sentiment which will uphold these officials in the execution of justice."

"JUSTICE IN THE COURTS—We recommend: That our women everywhere raise their voices against all acts of violence to property and person, wherever and for whatever cause occurring. We further recommend: That competent legal assistance be made available for colored people in the local communities in order to insure to them the protection of their rights in the courts."

"PUBLIC PRESS—Since the public press often gives undue prominence to the criminal element among Negroes, and neglects the worthy and constructive efforts of law-abiding citizens, we pledge ourselves to cooperate with the men committees in endeavoring to correct this injustice, and to create a fair attitude to Negroes and Negro news."

Suggested Line Of Work In Inter-Racial Co-operation For Women's Christian Agencies.

The Conference of Southern Women on Race Relations, suggested that in every local Christian organization of women there should be an inter-racial committee whose duty should be:

"To seek a knowledge of the Negro leaders among the women of the community, that a sympathetic basis of cooperation may be established. To direct a study of Negro community life in matters of housing, sanitation, neighborhood conditions, and the needs of Negro women and children. To adopt methods of cooperation with other agencies and with colored women, so that a constructive program of community betterment may be accomplished. To lead the society in a study of Negro achievement in literature, poetry, music, art and other lines of endeavor, that there may be a sympathetic appreciation of the Negro's contribution to American life in these lines. To represent the society in any local cooperative work that may be undertaken in the community and to have membership in Community Inter-racial Committees when organized.

Georgia Women Declare Mob Violence Not Necessary For Protection Womanhood.

The Georgia Woman's Inter-Racial Committee at its organization meeting drew up a set of resolutions which dealt especially with lynchings. Among other things the resolutions declared that:

"We have a deep sense of appreciation for the chivalry of men who would give their lives for the purity and safety of women," they declare. "Yet we feel constrained to declare our convictions concerning the methods sometimes employed in this supposed protection. We find in our hearts no extenuation for crime, be it violated womanhood, mob violence or the illegal taking of human life."

"We are convinced that if there is any one crime more dangerous than another, it is that crime which strikes at the root of, and undermines constituted authority, breaks all laws and restraints of civilization, substitutes mob violence and masked irresponsibility for established justice and deprives society of a sense of protection against barbarism."

"Therefore, we believe that no falser appeal can be made to Southern manhood than that mob violence is necessary for the protection of womanhood, or that the brutal practice of lynching and burning of human beings is an expression of chivalry. We believe that these methods are no protection to anything or anybody but that they jeopardize every right and every security that we possess."

"The double standard of morals which society passively permits is rapidly producing results that imperil the future integrity of our national life, and we are persuaded that this problem can never be solved as long as there is a double standard for men and women of any race. We appeal for the creation of a public sentiment which will no longer submit to this condition, and declare ourselves for the protection of womanhood of whatever race."

"We are convinced that if there is ever to be a solution of the race problem there must be an intensive and sustained campaign to instruct whites and Negroes to respect both moral and civil law. Therefore, we recommend that all people give themselves to a definite study of these vital matters relating to justice and righteousness, and that the press, pulpit, platform and school endeavor to lead public thought in bringing about a state of public opinion that will compel the protection of the purity of both races."

Negro Women State Position And Ask Cooperation Southern White Women In Interest Of Better Race Relationships.

The Southern white women sent a committee to visit the 1920 biennial session of the National Federation of Colored Women's Clubs at Tuskegee and sought through this organization to promote cooperation between white and Negro women in the South. At the 1921 meeting of the Southeastern Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, held in Atlanta, Ga., in June 1921, a further step in the cooperation of white and Negro women of the South was taken. The Federation issued the following statement in the interest of better race relationships, to the white women of the South:

"We desire to state our position on some matters relating to the welfare of colored people, and to enlist the sympathy and cooperation of Southern white women in the interest of better understandings and better conditions, as these affect the relations between white and colored people."

"We take this opportunity to call to your attention certain conditions which affect colored women in their relations with white people and which if corrected will go far toward decreasing friction, removing distrust and suspicion and creating a better atmosphere in which to adjust the difficulties which always accompany human contacts."

Better Accommodations And Just Treatment On Trains Urged As A Means Reducing Race Friction.

"CONDITIONS IN DOMESTIC SERVICE.—The most frequent and intimate contact of white and colored women is in domestic service. Every improvement made in the physical, moral and spiritual life of those so employed must react to increase the efficiency of their service to their employers.

"We, therefore, direct your attention to: Long and Irregular Working Hours; (1) lack of provision for wholesome recreation; (2) undesirable housing conditions. We recommend, therefore, (1) definite regulation for hours and conditions of work; (2) sanitary, attractive and wholesome rooming facilities; (3) closer attention to personal appearance and deportment; (4) provision for and investigation of character of recreation."

"CHILD WELFARE—The large burden of economic responsibility which falls upon many colored women results in their prolonged absence from home and the consequent neglect of the children of the homes. We direct your attention to: Child Welfare—(1) neglected homes (irregularity in food, clothing, conduct, training); (2) truancy; (3) juvenile delinquency. We therefore recommend—Welfare Activities—(1) day nurseries, play grounds, recreation centers; (2) home and school visitation; (3) probation officers and reform schools."

"CONDITIONS OF TRAVEL—Race friction is perhaps more frequent in street cars and railroad trains than in any other public places. To reduce this friction and remove causes for just complaint from colored passengers we call your attention to: (1) seating accommodations on street cars; (2) unsanitary surroundings, at stations and on trains; (3) toilet facilities, at stations and on trains; (4) difficulty in securing tickets, Pullman accommodations and meals; (5) abuse of rights of colored passengers by train crew and white passengers occupying seats while colored passengers stand, smoking, profane language, overcrowding;

(6) As corrective measures we suggest provision of equal accommodations in all public carriers and courteous treatment at the hands of street car and railway officials, for all passengers.

"EDUCATION.—Without education for all the children of all the people we cannot sustain a democracy. Ignorance and crime are the twin children of neglect and poverty. We urge your increasing effort for better educational facilities so that there may be provided: adequate accommodations for all Negro children of school age, vocational training in all secondary schools, improved rural schools—longer terms, suitable buildings, training schools for teachers, adequate salaries for teachers."

"LYNCHING—We deplore and condemn any act on the part of any men which would tend to excite the mob spirit. We believe that any man who makes an assault upon any woman should have prompt punishment meted out to the limit of the law, but not without thorough investigation of the facts and trial by the courts. The continuance of lynching is the greatest menace to good will between the races, and a constant factor in undermining respect for all law and order. It is our opinion that mob violence incites to crime rather than deters it; and certainly it is less effective in discouraging crime than the watchful, thorough and deliberate processes of a fair and just trial."

"Toward the suppression of this evil, we appeal to white women to: (1) raise their voices in immediate protest when lynchings or mob violence is threatened; (2) encourage every effort to detect and punish the leaders and participants in mobs and riots; (3) encourage the white pulpit and press in creating a sentiment among law-abiding citizens and urge outspoken condemnation of these forms of lawlessness."

"THE PUBLIC PRESS.—In the great majority of cases the white press of the South gives undue prominence to crime and the criminal element among Negroes to the neglect of the worthy and constructive efforts of law-abiding Negro citizens. We feel that a large part of friction and misunderstanding between the races is due to unjust, inflammatory and misleading headlines, and articles appearing in the daily papers We suggest that white women include in their local community program a united effort to correct this evil and to secure greater attention to worthy efforts of Negro citizens."

Exercise Franchise Ultimate and Only Guarantee Fair Dealing And Justice For Negro.

"SUFFRAGE.—We regard the ballot as the democratic and orderly method of correcting abuses and protecting the rights of citizens; as the substitute of civilization for violence. As peace loving, law-abiding citizens we believe the ultimate and only guarantee of fair dealing and justice for the Negro, as well as the wholesome development of the whole community, lies in the peaceful, orderly exercise of the franchise by every qualified Negro citizen. We ask therefore, that white women, for the protection of their homes as well as ours indicate their sanction of the ballot for all citizens as representing government by the sober, reasoned and deliberate judgment of all the people."

"In these articles offered at your request we are stating frankly and soberly what in our judgment, you as white women may do to correct the ills from which our race has so long suffered, and of which we as a race are perhaps more conscious now than ever. We recall how in the recent days of our nation's peril so many of us worked side by side for the safety of this land and defense of this flag which is ours as it is yours. In that same spirit of unselfishness and sacrifice we offer ourselves to serve again with you in any and every way that a courageous facing of duty may require as you undertake heroically this self-appointed yet God-given task. We deeply appreciate the difficulties that lie before you, but as you undertake these things which are destined to bless us all, we pledge you our faith and loyalty in consecration to God, home and country."

University Race Commission Recommends To White College Students Study Facts Concerning Progress Negroes.

The University Commission on Southern Race Questions at its meeting in Knoxville, Tennessee, in January, 1922, sent the following open letter to the college students of the South.

The University Race Commission in its last letter to the college students of the South called attention to the fact that college men are expected to assist in moulding public opinion and to co-operate in all sane efforts to bring about a more tolerant spirit, more generous sympathy, and larger measure of good-will and understanding between the best elements of both races.

In this letter the Commission wishes to call attention to the progress made in the last few years in interracial cooperation. Already there are agencies at work developing such cooperation in local communities throughout the Southern States. Noteworthy in this connection is the establishment of more than eight hundred county interracial committees in the Southern States, as a result of the efforts of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, organized by representative Southern men and women, with its headquarters in Atlanta. This is a practical method of putting into service the leadership of both races. Sane, thoughtful men, who love truth and justice, can meet together and discuss problems involving points of even strong disagreement and arrive at a common understanding, if only they remember to look for the next best thing to do rather than to attempt to determine for all time any set of fixed policies or to lay down an inclusive program for the future The most fruitful forms of cooperation have been found in connection with such vital community problems as better schools, good roads, more healthful living, and more satisfactory business relations. In all these community efforts the good of both races is inseparably involved.

No fact is more clearly established by history than that hatred and force only complicate race relations. The alternative to this is counsel and cooperation among men of character and good-will, and above all of intelligence and comprehensive knowledge of the racial problem. The number of those who possess specific knowledge upon which to base intelligent thinking and ultimately wise action is still too small. There is great need, therefore, that facts now available concerning the advancement of the Negro race in education, in professional accomplishment, in economic independence and in character be studied by thoughtful students in our colleges. Such facts as are definitely established could well be made, as has already been done in some institutions, the basis of instruction in race conditions and relations as a part of a regular course in social science. This body of information would undoubtedly allay race antagonism and would serve as a foundation for tolerant attitude and intelligent action in every direction of interracial cooperation.

Professors From White Southern Colleges Study Race Problem.

Each year under the direction of Dr. W. D. Weatherford of the Southern College of Young Men's Christian Association, there is held at Blue Ridge, N. C., a special conference of professors from Southern schools for the study of race problems. In the 1921 Conference there were some 75 professors present representing almost an equal number of colleges. Two hours a day were spent in discussing racial issues. The immediate outcome was putting the study of the race problem into the regular curriculum of work of a large number of Southern universities as a part of the work in sociology:

The George Peabody College for Teachers, at Nashville, Tenn., has recently added to its faculty, a professor of "Race Relations." This appointment, the first of its kind in the United States, was made possible by a little group of Christian business men in Tennessee and in Texas, who especially desire to have courses offered at the College which would make the teachers being trained there, aware of the Negro population as a part of the community and to show these students how to handle community problems which cut across racial lines.

White Churches Of South Increase Their Work For Negroes.

The Southern Baptist Convention, the Presbyterian Church South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church South are all increasing their work among Negroes. As an example the Methodist Episcopal Church South, is appropriating $400,000 from its Centenary Fund for Negro schools in five annual payments, one-half to Paine College, Augusta, Ga., which is under the direct supervision of the denomination and the other half to five colleges owned by the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. In addition the Methodist Episcopal Church South, is assessed $52,000 annually for schools and evangelistic work among Negroes.

The West Virginia Sunday School Association is reported to have taken a step in advance of any other State by giving a Negro, Byrd Prillerman a position on the State Executive Committee, to give his full time to the promotion of Sunday School work and Bible study.

Methodist Episcopal Church South Through Ministers' Institutes For Negroes Promotes Inter-Racial Cooperation.

The Methodist Episcopal Church South in cooperation with the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, is offering summer schools at the expense of the Board of Missions to every pastor and presiding elder of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church.

The plan is to hold annually six of these institutes for preachers. Bishops and other leaders, white and colored are to appear on the program. The Methodist Episcopal Church South, meets all expenses over $5 incurred by the preachers who enroll.

Negro Conferences M. E. Church Contribute Over Million Dollars To Centenary Fund.

The Negro schools, under the supervision of the Board of Education for Negroes of the Methodist Episcopal Church are sharing in the Centenary Fund of the Church as follows: $350,000 per annum as the regular apportionment to the Board for running expenses of the schools, $275,000 per annum is appropriated for buildings, improvement and endowments; and $200,000 per annum to be used exclusively for new buildings and endowments. The twenty Negro Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church paid into the Centenary Fund of the church, amounts as follows: in 1919, $325,915; in 1920, $337,040; and in 1921, $405,308; a total of $1,068,263.

Since 1919 the American Baptist Home Mission Society has employed Dr. E. W. Moore, a Negro specialist to look after the work of that denomination among Negroes in the North. At the 1921 annual meeting of the Society it was reported that: "It is now our avowed policy to concentrate the Society's efforts, so far as the Negro work in the North is concerned, upon a number of demonstration centers in the more important States and cities where the Negro problem is especially acute, and invest sufficient resources and attention to develop a worth-while and efficient Negro church life with a community outreach. The most pressing need, however, is for leadership trained in the North to meet Northern conditions."

Property Holdings Negroes Increase For Year 50 Million Dollars.

According to the most recent reports concerning property owning, it is found that in 1920, Negroes in North Carolina paid taxes on $53,901,018 worth of property. In Virginia, Negroes in 1921 owned 1,911,443 acres of land valued at $17,600,148. The total assessed value of their property in that State was $52,505,951.

In Georgia where there has been a continuous report on Negro property owning for a half century. It is found that in 1875, the Negroes of that State had acquired almost four hundred thousand acres of land, (396,658), valued at $1,263,902. The total value of the property on which they were then paying taxes was $5,293,885. In 1921, 45 years later, the Negroes of Georgia owned 1,838,129 acres of land valued at $20,808,594. Their total property had increased from $5,293,885 to $68,628,514. Through purchases and increases in values, property holdings of Negroes of the country increased during the year by probably Fifty Million Dollars. It is estimated that the value of the property now owned by the Negroes of the United States is over One Billion Five Hundred Million Dollars. The lands which they now own amount to more than twenty-two million acres, or more than thirty-four thousand square miles, an area greater than that of the five New England States, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Great Progress Made In Owning Homes One Out Of Every Four Owned.

Another significant feature of the progress of the Negro in property owning is the very rapid and large increase in the number of homes owned. It is estimated that they started in 1866 with about twelve thousand homes owned. It was found in 1890 when the first census of proprietorship of homes was taken, that the Negroes had acquired ownership of 264,288 homes. The number of these homes on farms was, 120,738. The number of city homes owned was 143,550.

The census of 1910 recorded that the Negroes owned 506,590 homes. Of these 221,535 were farm homes and 285,055 were town homes. Negroes now own over six hundred thousand homes; that is one home out of every four which they have established is owned. This is a remarkable showing and has great significance for the future of the race. It is safe to say that any people starting with a handicap of poverty and ignorance, who can in fifty years, become owners of one-fourth of all the homes which they have, are making progress along those lines which make for a high degree of citizenship.

Negro Makes Success Raising Hogs One Weighs 1,000 Pounds.

A Negro farmer, M. N. O'Neal, who lives near Rentz, Ga., killed 4 Poland China hogs, which when dressed averaged more than 300 pounds each. Their total weight was 1,286 pounds. They were 18 months old. Isaac Lane, a Negro farmer of Ware County, Ga., sold one hog, which weighed when dressed 798 pounds. He sold another on the hoof which weighed 1,002 pounds. He received $270.30 for these two hogs. They were a cross between Poland China and Berkshire.

Tenant Farmer Makes a Success Diversifying His Crops.

John Turner, a tenant farmer who lives near Latex, La., is reported to have raised more than a dozen different crops on the fifty acres of sandy pine woods land which he rents. He ended the 1920 season out of debt, and with nine bales of cotton which he was holding for better prices, money in the bank, a winter supply of meats cured and put away, one barn full of corn, another barn full of peanuts and peanut hay, twenty-six head of hogs and calves. He also sold a load of turkeys and geese for $70. He picked the walnuts from a tree near his house and sold them for $1 a bushel.

Texas Farmer Sells Part Of Farm For $84,000.

The first bale of cotton of the 1921 crop to be marketed at Greenville, Miss., was raised by E. H. Sparks, a Negro farmer, near that place. Bole Lindsey, a Negro farmer of Etowah County, Ala., sold his 1919 cotton crop for $1,500. Parson Jones, a Negro farmer on Porgy Key near Miami, Florida, has an income of about $20,000 a year from raising limes. Edward Roberts of Hortense, Tex., who is said to be one of the wealthiest and most substantial farmers and cattle men of that State, sold 840 acres of his holdings at $100 an acre and received a total of $84,000.

Group Mississippi Farmers Purchase 3,000 Acres Land Pay $225,000.

A report from Abbeyville, S. C., stated that in 1919, a farm near that place was bought on credit by a Negro for $1,500. He produced on this farm 12 bales of cotton and enough corn, meat and other products to run the farm another year. The sale of the cotton and cotton seed brought enough to pay for the farm and in addition he had enough money to buy for cash, another farm of half the size of the first one. From being a renter without anything he was transformed within a brief 12 months into a land owner with a farm paid for and with plenty about him.

Andrew Johnson, a Negro farmer, Claiborne County, Miss., purchased a 365 acre plantation, for which he paid $7,250. A report from Inverness, Miss., was that a group of 9 Negro farmers had purchased 1,200 acres of farm land near that place. Another report stated that 25 Negro farmers near Itta Bena, had purchased through the Federal Land Bank, 3,000 acres of land for which they contracted to pay $225,000.

Developing Of Big Enterprises Significant Aspect Negro Businesses.

Among the most significant features of the annual meeting of the National Negro Business League in 1919, 1920 and 1921, were first, the increase in the number of representatives of large Negro business enterprises, second, the tendency to promote cooperative enterprises, and third, the devising of ways and means of getting together large sums of money.

In line with this tendency the president of the League, Dr. Robert R. Moton, suggested that business men should form themselves into a strong organization to supply the needs for large amounts of capital. The following were among the most significant aspects o Negro business enterprises for 1919-1921.

1. The growth of Home Building and Loan Associations, as for example, the Norfolk, Va., Home Building and Loan Association reported for the year 1919, $51,698.32 worth of resources.

2. The growth of the number of Negro businesses; as for example, it was found that on Queen Street in Norfolk, there were 102 Negro businesses.

3. The development of Negro newspapers into buildings and plants of their own, as the New York Age, the Chicago Defender, the Norfolk Journal and Guide and the Savannah Tribune.

4. The buying of property in which hundreds of thousands of dollars are involved, as for example the Strand Theater Building on Broad Street in Richmond, Va., was sold to a group of Negroes for $113,000 cash. The United Investment Corporation of Atlanta, Ga., bought property on Auburn Avenue at an expenditure of approximately $100,000. The Jesse Binga Banking Firm of Chicago, purchased property on South State Street for which $200,000 was paid. The Laborers' Investment Corporation of Savannah, Ga., bought a piece of property, for which $40,000 was paid. In almost every city where there are any considerable number of Negroes, they have either purchased or erected substantial and commodious buildings to house their business enterprises. The North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company has erected a seven story office building at Durham.

5. Individual Negroes paying considerable sums for property as for example, Edward Irby of Norfolk, Va., paid $11,000, cash for a block of residential and business property.

6. The development of big businesses, as for example, the appearance of the Negro Bank with a Million Dollar assets such as the Wage Earners Bank of Savannah, Ga., and the Solvent Savings Bank of Memphis, Tenn., and the large increase in the amount of business done by insurance companies, as for example, the Standard Life and the North Carolina Mutual. The Poro College of St. Louis, seller of hair goods and beauty preparations, is spending $60,000 a year for newspaper advertisements, which are carried in more than sixty newspapers. A Negro real estate company with an authorized capital of $50,000 was organized at Rocky Mount, N. C. The Citizens Trust Company, with a capital of One-half Million Dollars, was opened in August in Atlanta, Ga. This is subsidiary to the Standard Life Insurance Company.

It was reported that the District of Columbia now has nineteen corporations organized by Negroes with a total capitalization of $2,880,000. These corporations cover a wide range of business activities and include a hotel, an apartment house, two banks, a broom factory, two Building and Loan Associations, a Farming and Merchandise Company, a Housing Corporation, a Life Insurance Company, a Theater Corporation, an Investment and Development Company, a Suburban Pleasure Park Association, a Motion Picture Corporation and several cooperative organizations. The Investment and Development Company purchased eight stores in the busiest part of the uptown section at a cost of $120,000.

Insurance A Phase Big Business Among Negroes.

Insurance was the first line of business into which the Negro entered in a large way and is today the largest field of business from the standpoint of capital concentrated. During the past three years there has been marked progress in this field. As an example, the Standard Life Insurance Company of Atlanta, Ga., an Old Line Legal Reserve Company operating in twelve states had at the close of 1921, $20,596,871 worth of insurance in force. The income of the Company for that year was $1,056.675. The total assets of the Company amounted to $1,554,423.

The North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company with headquarters at Durham operates in twelve states. At the close of 1921, the Company had $38,763,816 worth of insurance in force. The income of the Company for that year was, $1,632,304. The total assets of the Company amounted to $1,517,922.

Old Line Insurance Company Protects Policy Holders With Mortgages On Negro Homes.

During the past year two Old Line Legal Reserve Insurance Companies were organized. The Liberty Life Insurance Company of Chicago was the first Old Line Legal Reserve Insurance Company to be organized by Negroes in the North. It began business with a paid in capital of $100,000. This amount was deposited with the Insurance Department of the State of Illinois in first mortgages on Negro homes in Chicago.

This is the first time in the history of insurance that policy holders of an Old Line Insurance Company have been protected by mortgages on Negro property. The Supreme Life and Casualty Insurance Company began business in Ohio with a paid in capital of $200,000. Two fire insurance companies were organized and began business during the past year. The Great Southern Fire Insurance Company of Atlanta, Ga., began business the first part of 1921. Its first semi-annual statement showed a paid in capital of $100,000 and outstanding insurance of $1,042,015.

The Bankers' Insurance Company of Durham, N. C., began business with an authorized capital of $500,000. This Company is the representative of eighteen banks operated by Negroes in Virginia and North Carolina. At its organization, twenty-one men subscribed $200,000 and paid in $135,000. Fifty Thousand Dollars worth of Liberty Bonds were deposited with the North Carolina State Insurance Department.

Methodist Episcopal Church Elects Negro Bishops With Full Ecclesiastical Powers.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, the largest of all Methodist bodies, held its General Conference at Des Moines, Iowa, 1920. At this time two Negroes, Matthew W. Clair of Washington, D. C., and Robert E. Jones of New Orleans, were elected with full ecclesiastical powers and prerogatives to the Board of Bishop of that denomination. This General Conference did away with what had been known as Missionary Bishops so that this denomination has now only one order of Bishops, who are styled General Superintendents.

The General Conference of the M. E. Church is an international body in that its delegates are made up of representatives from every section of the world, where this denomination is doing foreign or home missionary work. The election of Bishops Jones and Clair is of significance because it was participated in by representatives from all parts of the world, and was the first time that representatives of the Negro race had been elected to so high an office in an international body.

Other significant actions taken by the General Conference of the M. E. Church were: (1) the continuance of the Commission on Unification of the M. E. Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South, also the Commission on Federation of the Colored Methodist bodies.

In the negotiations on unification carried on during the quadrennium 1916-1920, the M. E. Church South, made the concession that if unification should be effected, the Negroes in the church should have equal and proportionate representation in the General Conference of the United Church.

Another provision, and one to which the Negroes object, and which is proving a bone of contention in the unification negotiations is, that in the General Conference of the United Church, the Negroes should never have a representation in the body beyond five per cent of the total membership of the General Conference. (2) The changing of the name of "The Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church," to "The Board of Education for Negroes of the

M. E. Church," and the formation of the "Council of the Boards of Benevolence of the Church," which gives a new feature to the Board of Education for Negroes. Whatever program of evangelism and money may be put forward is to be under the direction of this Council, and is to be a program of all the allied Boards.

At the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, held at St. Louis in 1920, the House of Bishops elected Theodore M. Gardiner of Liberia, Suffragan Bishop of Liberia. The progress of the work carried on by Negro denominations during the past three years has been notable for the erection or purchases of large church buildings costing in many instances more than One Hundred Thousand Dollars each. The tendency is to make of these churches social centers and to carry on many activities other than the formal church service. This would appear to be a new and a distinct advancement in the development of church work by Negroes.

Liberal Contributions Made By Churches For Education And Mission Work.

In 1920, the Negro members of the Northern Presbyterian Church contributed to all boards of the church a total of $30,000. In 1921 they contributed $43,000. The Lott Carey Foreign Missionary Convention at its last annual meeting, raised $38,000 for Foreign Mission Work. The United Presbyterian Church appropriated $590,000 from its New World Movement Fund, to Knoxville College.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church, at its General Conference, 1920, made provisions to raise Five Million Dollars for education and other needs of the Church. Rallies of this denomination at which large sums of money were raised were: Wilberforce, Ohio, $80,000; Savannah, Ga., $37,000. the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church raised at a convocation at Augusta, Ga., $23,000 for education. The Mississippi State Baptist Convention during 1919 raised $51,000 for education. The North Carolina State Baptist Convention during 1920 raised $100,000 for missions and education.

Among the important schools and institutes held for Negro ministers were the Howard University Convocation, the Hampton Institute Conference for Ministers, and the Ministers' Institutes, conducted under the direction and in direct charge of Dr. James H. Dillard, president of the Anna T. Jeanes Foundation and the John F. Slater Fund. These institutes were held at Forsyth, Ga., and Trenton, S. C. The Conference of Workers under the Board of Missions for Freedmen under the Northern Presbyterian Church, held its annual meeting in Chattanooga. The Rural Church Work Department of the Methodist Episcopal Church held schools for rural pastors at Gammon Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Ga., and Wiley University, Marshall, Tex.

Activity Grows Among Colored Women In Club Work.

Negro women are becoming more and more active in club work. This is true of local clubs of the State Federations and of the National Association, which now has three branches, the Northeastern, the Southeastern and the Northwestern Federation of Colored Women's Clubs.

The thirteenth biennial session of the National Association of Colored Women was held in 1920 at Tuskegee, Ala. This was reported to have been the most largely attended of any of the binennial sessions held. Special Pullman cars were run from Chicago, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, New York, and Washington. In this body of more than a thousand women were found: authors, writers, poets, artists, teachers, principals of schools, lawyers, business women, and one president of a bank. Among the important subjects considered at this meeting were: "The Negro Woman's Part in the Work of Reconstruction;" "Benefit of Prohibition to the Negro Race;" "Woman Suffrage;" "The Awakening of the Southern Women to the Needs of Club Work;" and "The Call to the Women of Our Race."

National Association Colored Women Recommends That Colored Women Study Political Questions And Fit Themselves for Voting.

The resolutions adopted among other things said:

"Since it is evident that the women of the nation are soon to be invested with the right of full franchise."

"We recommend that the colored women give their close attention to the study of civics, to the laws of parliamentary usage and to the current political questions, both local and national, in order to fit themselves for the exercise of the franchise."

"We wish to go on record as asking the instructors throughout this country, especially those in colored schools, to teach our boys and girls the lives of the great men and women of the race, who have thus far shaped, and are shaping our destinies."

"We further recommend that wherever possible the local clubs cooperate with the teachers in building up good libraries in colored schools and in putting upon the shelves authentic publications from our best colored authors in literature, history, science and art."

"We go on record as endorsing and urging the enforcement of the 18th amendment to the Federal Constitution of the United States as interpreted in the Volstead Act."

"We also urge our National Congress to enforce the 14th and 15th Amendments to the Federal Constitution.

"Since glaring headlines and detailed accounts in the press of crimes and misdemeaonrs committed by colored people tend to inflame the passions of the public against members of our race, culminating often in rioting and mob violence, we urge the press of the United States to refrain from thus perpetuating such propaganda against us."

"We again make solemn protest against the continued prevalence of mob violence in the United States, and we pray for the enactment of a Federal statute against lynch law with severe penalties for the violation thereof, and that such statute be enforced if need be by the military power of this government."

Negro Women Delegates Attend Meeting International Council of Women.

There were two Negro women delegates to the Fifth Quinquennial Meeting of the International Council of Women, held at Christiana, Norway, namely: Mrs. Mary B. Talbert, the retiring president of the Federation of Colored Women's Clubs and Dr. Mary F. Waring of Chicago, who went respectively as delegate and alternate.

The Executive Committee of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, called together nineteen colored women, selected at large in the United States for a one day conference in New York City on December 7. Few of these women were actively engaged in Association work, but had had large experience along all matters pertaining to Negro womanhood. There was a general presentation of matters for all womanhood, and especially Negro womanhood. The discussions were marked by frankness and the general idea was that the result would be a better understanding of the needs and the problems of Negro women and the importance of white and Negro women cooperating together.

Work Of The National Urban League.

The National Urban League for social service among Negroes, with headquarters in New York was established several years ago to assist in improving conditions among urban Negroes. It has filled a very important place in the adjustments that were necessary in connection with the recent large migration of Negroes to the North and in handling the unemployment situation during the recent industrial depression.

The League in 1920 expended $185,000 for the following purposes: (1) developing cooperation among the agencies working with Negroes for social betterment; (2) making investigations of conditions as a basis for practical work; (3) stimulating agencies already at work to extend their fields to include Negroes, and (4) training colored social workers so that within their own race leaders may be developed in social service who are conversant with the best methods of service and possessed of the necessary broad vision to prosecute the work successfully.

Missouri And West Virginia Establish Welfare Departments For Negroes.

There was established in 1920, by legislative act, the Missouri Negro Industrial Commission. Its purpose is to assist in improving the educational and economic conditions of the Negroes of Missouri. The headquarters of the Commission are at the State Capitol. There is a paid secretary. The semi-annual report for the first part of 1921 contained results of investigations of housing conditions in St. Louis; the report of an investigation directed by the Community Service Urban League of Kansas City and a report on conditions in southeast Missouri with reference to certain illegal, intolerable and untoward conditions of peonage in that section of the state.

At the 1921 session of the West Virginia Legislature, an act was passed creating a Bureau of Negro Welfare and Statistics. It is in charge of a Director "a member of the Negro race," who is appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the State Senate. The term of office is four years. The functions of the Bureau are: (1) to assemble all available data pertaining to the Negro population of the State, migration, distribution of rural population, vital statistics, social and educational statistics, and sanitary conditions of hotels and restaurants; (2) farm movements; that is locating farms which Negroes will purchase and farmers who will welcome Negro labor; (3) home ownership; that is, promoting homes among Negroes; (4) thrift, industrial and economic; that is, promoting the same by means of thrift clubs, saving clubs encouraging regular work in the industry of the State; (5) cooperating with officials in the solution of problems for Negroes; (6) inter-racial relations; that is, arranging conferences between representative whites and Negroes for the solution of difficulties which may arise, etc.; (7) statistics of farm and home ownership, of occupation and of agriculture.

Local State And National Agencies Co-operate In Making National Negro Health Week A Grand Success.

The Seventh Annual National Negro Health Week was in many ways the most successful Health Week yet held and is an indication of the growing appreciation of the masses of the people in health conservation. Health Week in 1921 was more widely observed than ever before.

A striking feature of its observance was that many cities and communities as a whole observed Health Week at the same time that the National Negro Health Week was observed, or as in the case of Atlanta, Ga., in the week immediately following, thus having a two-weeks instead of a one-week Clean-Up.

Never before did so large a number of national agencies cooperate in the promotion of Health Week. These organizations were: The National Tuberculosis Association, The American Red Cross Association, The United States Public Health Service, The Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation, The Young Men's Christian Association, The Young Women's Christian Association, The National Child Welfare Association, The National League on Urban Conditions, The American Social Hygiene Association, The National Association of Graduate Nurses, The National Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, The National Medical Association, and The National Negro Business League.

The United States Public Health Service, in addition to a special letter written by the Surgeon General to all public health agencies requesting their cooperation in the Health Week observance, prepared and circulated a special Health Week Bulletin. This bulletin, in addition to the regular program for the week, had a section entitled, "Important Information for Use During Health Week and Throughout the Year." Suggestions were given relative to such subjects as, "Drinking Water," "Flies," "Home Hygiene," "Hookworm Disease," "Mothers and Babies," "Patent Medicines and Quack Doctors," "Public Health," "Rats," "School Hygiene," "Tuberculosis," "Typhoid," "Venereal Diseases," "Ventilation," and "Personal Hygiene."

Negroes Contribute Over One Million One Hundred Thousand Dollars For Rosenwald School Buildings.

The Negro public schools of the South have shown marked improvement during the three years, 1919-1921. This was due to a large extent, to the special agencies working for the improvement of Negro schools. The agencies taking part in this improvement work were: the Julius Rosenwald Fund, in building rural schoolhouses, the Anna T. Jeanes Foundation in providing county supervisors of industrial work, the John F. Slater Fund in helping to provide county training schools for teachers and the General Education Board in providing the funds to supply state supervisors of Negro schools, to assist in holding summer schools for teachers and also in assisting in providing county training schools.

While there has been a marked progress in public school improvements in Maryland, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee and Texas, the most interesting developments have been in North Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana. A marked feature of public school improvement has been the erection of better buildings, as for example, in Kentucky, buildings erected cost as follows: Logan County, $10,000; Cythiana, $18,000; Mt. Sterling, $14,000; Bowling Green, $12,000; Mayfield, $13,000; Webster County, $21,000; Paducah, $85,000; Lexington, $150,000. Buildings were erected in other states as follows: Spartanburg, S. C., $40,000; Macon, Ga., $60,000; Lynchburg, Va., $100,000; Durham, N. C., $150,000; Port Arthur Tex., $160,000. P. F. Du Pont in 1919 gave $500,000 for the improvement of colored public schools in the State of Delaware. In the nine years since the establishment of aid to rural schools by Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, 1,215 school buildings have been erected through this means at a cost of $3,985,000. Of this amount, $278,000 came from private subscriptions of white people in the communities where the buildings were erected, $749,000 from Mr. Rosenwald, $1,129,000 from private contributions of Negroes, and $1,829,000 from public funds, state and county.

North Carolina Creates In State Department Education Division Negro Education.

North Carolina is the first State to create by legislative enactment a division of Negro education as a part of the State Department of Education. Fifteen thousand dollars is to be appropriated annually to assist in supporting this division.

The legislature of 1919 appropriated $100,000 for buildings at the three Negro State Normal Schools. The 1921 session of the legislature appropriated $400,000 for buildings and improvements at these schools. This same legislature made these additional appropriations for Negro education: for the maintenance of the Normal Schools, $75,000 annually; for teachers training in church and private schools, $15,000; for buildings, improvements and maintenance at the Agricultural and Technical College, $145,000; for a reformatory for Negro boys, $25,000; maintenance annually for reformatory, $10,000; for teacher training in summer schools annually about $25,000; for high schools and vocational education about $40,000; for buildings at Sanitorium for Tubercular Patients, $100,000, making a total of about $950,000. The salaries of the Negro public school teachers in the State were nearly $400,000 more for the 1920-1921 school year than for the previous year. Through the Julius Rosenwald Schoolhouse Building Fund allotment to the State, public school funds and private donations a total of approximately One Million Dollars will be spent during the year for new schoolhouses.

Mississippi Makes Progress In Building Schools For Negroes.

During the year 1920 more than $500,000 was spent in Mississippi in building Rosenwald schools. The two largest of these schoolhouse building operations are the Mound Bayou consolidated school, costing $110,000 and the school at Hattiesburg, costing $75,000. The Hattiesburg school was built under a bond issue that was carried six to one.

On July 1, 1921, $76,000 was allotted to the State by the Julius Rosenwald Fund. Within less than thirty days the entire allotment was taken up in sums ranging from $500 to $1,600. This means that $750,000 will be spent in Mississippi during the school year 1921-1922 in building modern schoolhouses for Negroes. As a further example of the interest that is being awakened in the State in providing schools for Negroes, D. S. Jones, a large plantation owner of Leflore County, erected at a cost of $15,000, for the Negro children on his plantation, a modern school building with a teachers' home. As a part of the equipment there is an artesian well, and ten acres of land to be used for educational purposes. Mr. Jones pays the principal and his wife $1,800 a year, and gives them the use of the teachers' home. This is the first school of its kind erected in the State. The reports are that other planters are contemplating building similar plants for the Negro children on their plantations.

Louisiana Is Becoming A Leader In The Progress Being Made For Improvement Negro Education.

The Legislature of the State at its 1920 session, appropriated what was said to be the largest amount ever given, up to that time, at one time by a Southern state for the higher and secondary education of Negroes. The sum of $347,000 was appropriated. Of this amount, $267,000 was for Southern University and $80,000 for the establishing of a school for blind Negro children. Of the sum appropriated to Southern University $67,000 was to increase the amount for current expenses and $200,000 to go toward the erection of needed buildings.

The school year, 1919-1920 was a very distinct improvement over any preceding session in the progress of Negro public schools. The amount for current expenses over the previous year was increased by almost One-half Million Dollars; that is, from $458,882 to $921,525. The amount spent for new buildings was $282,594. There was an increase of 18,000 in the enrollment of pupils, and of more than 10,000 in the average attendance. There was an increase of 20 days in the length of the school session. Nearly 350 more teachers were employed. The increase for salaries and for current expenses was more than doubled. This showing for 1919-1920 was in marked contrast to the very slight increases which had taken place during past school years.

Growth Of County Training Schools A Feature Of Development Of Negro Education.

One of the most significant things in the improvement of Negro rural schools has been the development of county training schools. These schools which are in some respects junior high schools are designed to assist the counties in providing teachers for the elementary schools. The growth of county training schools for the past year is indicated by the following:

Number of schools, 142, an increase over previous year of 36; value of land, buildings and equipment $1,590,262, increase $563,450; number of teachers employed 848, increase 220; number of pupils enrolled, 35,317, increase 6,042; number of pupils in high grades 2,247, increase 680; total receipts for the year, $1,007,731, an increase over previous year of $418,990.

Eighty-six Summer Schools for Negro Teachers Aided by the General Education Board.

The General Education Board in addition to appropriating $10,000 in 1921, to send 400 teachers from 13 states to the Hampton and Tuskegee Institute summer schools, aided 86 other summer schools for Negro teachers. These 86 summer schools had a total enrollment of 12,272, and employed 648 instructors. Of the $144,807.96 expended for the operating of these schools, the General Education Board contributed $29,006.14 and $115,801.82 was contributed through state and local sources. The following summary regarding these summer schools was furnished by Mr. Jackson Davis, General Field Agent of the General Education Board:

Summary of Reports From 86 Summer Schools for Negro Teachers Aided in 1921 by the General Education Board.

State Legislatures Increase Their Appropriations For Higher Education Negroes.

The Legislature of New Jersey appropriated $317,000 for the State School for Negroes. The Missouri Legislature appropriated to Lincoln Institute, $329,000 for current expenses and purchase of additional land and $500,000 to change the school into a university.

The Legislature of West Virginia appropriated $1,068,816 for the biennial period, 1921-1923 for its educational and other institutions for Negroes as follows: Collegiate Institute, $452,272; Blue Field Colored Institute, $136,344; Storer College, $6,000; Hospital for Insane, $180,000; Industrial School for Boys, $150,000; Industrial School for Girls, $50,000; Tuberculosis Sanitarium, $52,000; Deaf and Blind School, $30,000; Bureau of Negro Welfare and Statistics, $12,200.

Bequests By Will Of Whites For Negro Education, Etc.

The following are some of the legacies which Negro institutions received during the three years, 1919-1921: Mrs. Alfred Parker, New York City, $5,000 to Child Welfare Work Among Negroes, New Orleans, La.; estate, Mrs. Harriet Blanchard, Hampton Institute, $200,000; Tuskegee Institute, $100,000; St. Augustine School, Raleigh, N. Roberts, Hampton Institute, $203,355; Charles Church Drew, Tuskegee Institute, $50,000; one-half estate of Mrs. Alice C. West, Tuskegee Institute, value undesignated.

Negro Makes New World Record Laying Bricks.

What is believed to be a new world record in laying paving bricks was made by a Negro, James Meriwether at Elberton, Ga. He laid 12,000 bricks in 2 hours; an average of 100 bricks per minute. It required 12 men to wait upon him.

The champion bricklayer, however, is reported to be another Negro, John W. Martin, who it is said, can at any time lay 90 bricks in 30 seconds. While working on a State road near Grafton, W. Va., he laid 42,000 bricks in 8 hours, an average of 87 bricks per minute. Each brick weighed 10 1-2 pounds, or a total of 200 tons for the 42,000. It required the services of 8 laborers and in addition, 22 boys from the State Reformatory to place the bricks on carrying boards and carry them to Martin.

Negro Child Awarded Prize For Being Physically Most Perfect Pre-School Child.

Audrey Tripp, of New York City, age three years and nine months, won three medals in the milk and child health exhibition held by the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the City Board of Health. She was given these awards for being "morally and physically the most perfectly developed pre-school child two to six years old." More than 20,000 babies were entered in the contest, held in forty-one health centers in the city.

Picture, "Spirit Of Transportation" Wins Prize Over 900 Exhibitors.

Ethel Richardson, Montclair, N. J., was judged one of the eight best pianists in a contest of 40 competitors held at Newark, N. J. The judges were, H. C. Osgood of the Musical Courier and W. H. Murray of the Musical Monitor. Gerald Tyler, Supervisor of Music in the public schools of St. Louis, Mo., wrote the musical prologue for the pageant and drama, "Missouri One Hundred Years Ago," used at St. Louis in celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of Missouri as a state.

C. M. Battey in charge of the Photographic Division at Tuskegee Institute was successful in placing original photographs as follows: at the 7th Annual Pittsburgh Salon of Photography in 1920; at the 39th International Convention of Photographers at Buffalo in 1921; at the exhibition of pictorial photographs from Canada and the United States of America in the Royal Photographic Society of Great Britain, London, 1921. At this latter exhibition, he placed two pictures, "Through the Mist," and "St. Sesostris."

Paul R. Williams won the first prize of $300 offered by the Los Angeles Pressed Brick Company for a house not to cost more than $5,000; this to include heating, plumbing, electric wiring and painting. The contest was open to architects in California and Arizona. Albert A. Smith won the first prize at the National Academy of Design, with a painting from the "Nude." The contest was national in scope. The greatest number of the John Wanamaker Prizes awarded in the Philadelphia Public Schools for proficiency in art were won by Italian and Negro children. King D. Ganaway of Chicago won first honors in the Annual Wanamaker Art Exhibition in Philadelphia. His picture was, "The Spirit of Transportation." There were some 900 exhibitors.

First Honors In Mixed Schools Won By Negroes.

Helen E. Fairfax won second honors in a class of 200 in the Williamsport, Pa., High School. Annie Mildred Coleman, Public School No. 16, New York City, tied for first prize and took second honors for entrance examination to the High School.

Geneva Baker was valedictorian of the graduating class of the Goshen (N. Y.) High School.

Ruth Royster was valedictorian of the graduating class of the Roxbury (Mass.) High School. Wilhelmina Harrison stood at the head of the honor roll of the graduating class of Crane Institute, Chicago. Anna Lewis graduated with the highest marks from the Calexico (Calif.) High School. Robert Shaw Wilkerson was the first honor student at the Wilbraham Academy, Mass. Countie Porter Cullen of the De Witt Clinton High School won one of the two prizes offered by the New York City Women's Federation of Clubs for the best poem submitted by the pupils of the High School Poetry Society of New York. Pupils from twenty-six schools participated.

Geneva E. Jackson Graduates Cum Laude Radcliffe College.

Carolyn Kealing maintained an average above 90 in her studies for two years at Tabor College (Iowa). Emily Elizabeth Gross of the University of Iowa won the daughters of the American Revolution Medal for the best work in American History.

Edwin B. Jourdain, Jr., graduated from Harvard University with distinction in history. F. E. Corbie, a freshman, won the highest oratorical prize in the gift of New York University, i. e., "The Board of Trustees Prize." Clyde William Phelps won the Boylston Prize for elocution at Harvard University. Charles H. Houston made an average of grade "A" in all his studies in the Harvard University Law School and automatically became one of the editors of the "Harvard Law Review." Geneva E. Jackson graduated from Radcliffe College, Cum Laude, with distinction in French and Spanish.

Second Time in History Smith College Student In Four Years Wins A. B. And A. M. Degrees.

Eunice Roberta Hunton received both her A. B. and A. M. degrees at the 1921 commencement of Smith College, Northampton, Mass. This is the largest woman's college in the world. Miss Hunton did all the work necessary for the two degrees in the regular four year period. She was the only one in a class of almost 500 to do this. In fact, only one other girl has been able to accomplish this at Smith College since its founding in 1878.

Negro Students Elected Phi Beta Kappa.

Election to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa Chapter is secured through scholarship only. Bertram W. Doyle, was elected a member of the Ohio Wesleyan University Chapter. Sterling A. Brown was elected a member of the Williams College Chapter. Percy Julian was elected a member of the De Pauw University Chapter. Valuarez B. Spratlin was elected a member of the Denver University Chapter. William Jefferson was elected a member of the Dickinson College Chapter. Irvin C. Mollison was elected a member of the University of Chicago Chapter.

Frances H. Williams was elected a member of the Mt. Holyoke Chapter and was awarded a scholarship for post graduate studies in social service. Mary E. Link was elected a member of the University of Chicago Chapter. She was awarded the Gertrude Seltz Scholarship for the highest average among freshman women. Dorothy M. Hendrickson was elected a member of the Hunter College Chapter.

Paul Robeson was elected a member of the Rutgers College Chapter. He won scholarships and prizes in debating, and led his class in scholarship through college. He was selected for an end position on Walter Camp's 1918 All American Football Team. Rudolph J. C. Fisher was elected a member of the Brown University Chapter. He was awarded scholarships amounting to $3,000, "For Marked Ability." He won fine laurels in biology and English; he was class orator, and one of the three commencement speakers.

The Youngest Person Ever To Receive Ph. D. Degree The University Of Pennsylvania.

The Ph. D. degree, Docter of Philosophy, is the highest earned degree granted by universities. During 1919-1921 this degree was granted by Clark University, Worcester, Mass., to Thomas I. Brown and Francis C. Sumner, by Radcliffe College to Eva B. Dykes, by Boston University to Willis J. King, by Cornell University to Thomas W. Turner, by University of Pennsylvania to Sadie Tanner Mossell, by University of Chicago to Georgiana Rose Simpson. She specialized in German Literature; her thesis was, "Herder's Conception of Das Volk."

Harris S. Blackistone, who at the age of 23 received the Ph. D. Degree from the University of Pennsylvania, is reported to be the youngest person to receive this degree from this institution. The University awarded him the following scholarships: the William Henzy and the Mayor's Scholarship, 1913-1917; the George Schleicher Prize in German, 1916-1917; the University Scholarship in German, 1917-1918; the Harrison Scholarship in German and the University Scholarship in 1919. The Boston University Graduate School has requested Dr. Gilbert H. Jones, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, Wilberforce University, for permission to translate his Ph. D. thesis from German into English for reference use in the classes in philosophy. Dr. Jones received the Ph. D. degree from the University of Jena, Germany in 1909, and is reported to be the only American Negro who has received this degree from a German University.

Negro Physician Second On List Of 200 Interneship, For Examination.

Dr. J. B. Ford has the distinction of being the first Negro surgeon to act in the ambulance service of Bellevue Hospital, New York City. He also was assigned to service in the wards of the institution. James E. Lee, a graduate of Rush Medical College Chicago, was among the first on a list of 45 out of 180 men who took examination for interneships in the Cook County (Chicago) Hospital.

Wilson Winters maintained an average of 90 per cent throughout his dental course at Temple University, Philadelphia. Dr. Walter S. Grant was second on a list of 200 examined for interneships at the Cook County, (Chicago) Hospital. He is a graduate of Northwestern University Medical School, and in his junior year was one of the five members from a class of eighty-six to be elected to membership in the Alpha Omega Alpha Society, a new secret medical honor fraternity, whose membership is based on scholarship and bears to medical studies the same relation that Phi Beta Kappa does to under graduate literary studies.

Negro Student In One Year Wins Three First Honors In Medicine.

The four Julius Rosenwald Fellowships of $1,200 each awarded to Negro graduates in medicine for advanced medical studies were awarded for the academic year 1920-1921 to Dr. Carrie J. Sutton and Dr. George W. Adams, Jr., of Howard University Medical School. Dr. Theodore K. Lawless of Northwestern University Medical School and Dr. W. S. Quinlan of the Harvard Medical School. Victor Vallon, a graduate from the New York State Medical College was awarded a scholarship at the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research.

Ernest Raymond Alexander graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Vermont with the unusual distinction of winning the three first honors which may be had each year in medicine. Two of these were cash prizes. He was awarded "Cum Laude," first prize for special merit in medicine and the Woodbury Prize for clinical proficiency. Dr. Harriet A. Rice received from the French Government a bronze medal, "Reconnaisance Francaise," for services rendered during the World War in French military hospitals. She is a graduate of Wellesley College, and of the Women's Medical College of New York. Dr. M. L. Moody, a native of Jamaica, practicing in London, was elected bacteriologist and lecturer on biology at the University of London.

Negro Discovers Amazing Food Uses For Lowly Peanut.

At a hearing before the ways and means committee of the House of Representatives, George W. Carver, Director of Agricultural Research and Chemistry at the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, astounded the members of the committee by demonstrating to them that the lowly peanut yields about 145 different foods or useful articles. These include 10 kinds of milk, 5 kinds of punches, cherry, lemon, orange, blackberry and plum; salted peanuts, 2 grades of flour, 2 grades of meal, 5 breakfast foods, new flavorings for ice cream, cakes, ginger bread, cookies and various confections, chocolate coated peanuts, peanuts crystalized, peanut candy bars, 9 wood stains, black ink, face powder, face cream, and 4 different kinds of stock food.

Professor Carver has also discovered 107 products from the sweet potato. He also has an exhibit designed to show the commercial possibilities of the as yet undeveloped resources of the South, which include: (1) potash from chinaberry ashes; (2) chinaberry meal; (3) tonic stock feed, made of snap corn, velvet beans, cotton-seed meal and chinaberries, containing protein, 14.5 per cent; fats, 4.5; crude fibre, 12, and carbohydrates, 52; (4) dehydrated lye hominy; (5) okra fibre, for paper, rope, cordage, strawboard, matting and carpets; (6) ultramarine dyes, made from Macon County clays and used for cotton, wool, silk and leather; (7) cotton-stalk fibre for rope, cordage, mats and carpets; (8) furniture stains made from native clays and vegetables; (9) poplar bark, for artificial ribbon; (10) mallow, cactus and bear grass fibres; (11) dyes, made from dandelion, black oak, wood ashes, sweet gum, willow, swamp-maple, sweet potatoes, pomegranate, peanuts, osage orange, muscadine grape, onions, velvet beans and tomato vines; (12) dressing for canvass shoes, made of Macon County clays; (13) scouring powders; (14) white and colored washes, made from native clays; (15) wistaria for basketry work; (16) feathers for millinery purposes, secured from native wild and barn-yard fowls; (17) laundry blues, 20 varieties.

Reverend John W. Widgeon, who for forty years has been the caretaker of the Maryland Academy of Sciences, was given a diploma by the Academy as a token of appreciation for the contributions which he has made to the fauna and flora at the Academy. He is regarded as an authority on the fauna and flora of Maryland, as well as its geological formation. The first geological exhibit of Johns Hopkins University was collected by Mr. Widgeon.

Best French Novel Of The Year Written By Negro.

In 1920, General Pershing offered prizes to school children in grammar grades for the best essays on, "The Advantages of Enlisting in The Army." Among the prize winners were Madeline Clark, Portsmouth, O., Fannie Horrington, Port Chester, N. Y., and Mildred Adele Barfield, Atlanta, Ga.

Isaac Fisher, editor of the Fisk University News, won the third prize, $75 offered by the Metropolitan Magazine for the best essays on "Can We Keep Peace With Japan?" In other years Mr. Fisher has won prizes as follows: first prize of $100 offered in 1913 by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch for the ten best reasons why persons should come to Missouri; first prize of $50 offered 1913, by the Wales Visible Adding Machine Company of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., for the best essay on, "What Do You See in An Adding Machine, An Analysis of the Commercial Uses to Which Adding Machines May Be Put;" third prize of $100 offered in 1913 by the Criterion of Fashion, a woman's magazine of New York City for the best essay on "A Criticism of the Criterion of Fashion;" first prize of $500 offered in 1914 by Everybody's Magazine for the best letter on the subject, "What We Have Learned About Rum."

Rene' Maran, a Martinique Negro, employed in the French Colonial Service in Central Africa, at Lake Tchad, won the 1921 Prix Goncourt for the best French novel of the year. The novel deals with life in Central Africa and takes its title from the leading character in the play, Batouala, an African chieftain. The value of the prize is 5,000 francs, about $1,000. The prize, although small, is among the most sought after by French writers. To win it means for an author that his book will be among the best sellers of the year and that he will always command a good public.

Charles Gilpin Awarded 1921 Spingarn Medal.

In 1914, J. E. Spingarn, chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, established a gold medal to be given to the man or woman of African descent and American citizenship, who during the year shall have made the highest achievement in any field of human endeavor.

The awards of the Medal have been as follows: in 1915, to Earnest Everett Just, Professor and Head of the Department of Physiology, Howard University Medical School, for excellence in research work in biology; in 1916, to Colonel Charles Young, United States Army, for organizing the Liberian Constabulary and establishing order on the frontiers of Liberia; in 1917, to Harry Burleigh, New York City, for distinguished work in musical composition; in 1918, to William Stanley Braithwaite, Cambridge, Mass., for distinguished work as a poet and literary critic; in 1919, to Archibald H. Grimke for services: as Consul at Santo Domingo, as President of the Negro Academy and as President of the Washington, D. C., Branch of the N. A. A. C. P; in 1920, to W. E. B. Du Bois, New York City, for organizing the Pan-African Congress; in 1921, to Charles S. Gilpin, New York City, for the most distinguished work as an actor during the year, 1921.

Negro Accorded Place Among Ten Most Distinguished Contributors To Dramatic Art 1921.

Charles S. Gilpin, the most talked of actor in 1921, played the title role in "Emperor Jones," the plot of which is laid on an island in the West Indies. His performance has been styled as, "a genuine impersonation, a being of flesh and blood and brain."

The drama was produced by the Provincetown players at their little theatre in Greenwich Village, the art section of New York City. Gilpin's success in the title role was so great that after one month the play was moved to Broadway, where it ran successfully for several months. The Drama League of New York City selects annually by vote, the persons who in the opinion of its members have contributed most during the year to the art of the theatre. Mr. Gilpin was one of the ten selected for this honor in 1921.

Great Development In Theatricals Among Negroes.

The past three years have been noted for the great development which is taking place in the theatrical world as it relates to the Negro. Either by building, purchasing or leasing, a large number of commodious and well equipped theaters are now at the services of the Negroes. In Charleston, (S. C.), Memphis, (Tenn.), Savannah, (Ga.), Hot Springs, (Ark.), Washington, D. C., Macon, (Ga.), Norfolk, (Va.), Kansas City, (Mo.), theatres have been erected costing from $35,000 to $250,000. The Dunbar Theatre in Philadelphia including ground cost around $400,000.

Three plays with all Negro casts were shown on Broadway New York City: "Put and Take," at the Town Hall Theatre; "Goat Alley," at the Bijou Theater; and "Shuffle Along," an all Negro musical melange, which had a continuous run of over a year at the 63rd Street Music Hall. There are now some 17 motion picture film producing corporations operated by Negroes. There are many indications to show that the next line of development of Negro acting will be the development of the serious drama. There are a considerable number of Negro actors who desire to act in the serious drama, but thus far Negro theatre patrons in general have not been developed up to the place where they will give sufficient support to this line of work. As an indication of the development in this direction, we have the Lafayette Players working under the auspices of the Quality Amusement Corporation, which has for its main purpose the furthering of the interest of Negroes in dramatic art.

The Billboard
Chief Organ Show World
Devotes Page To Negro Theatrical World.

A special indication of the growth of the importance of theatricals among Negroes is the fact that the Billboard, a weekly publication and the chief organ of the show world, has in each issue, "the J. A. Jackson page," devoted to the interest of the colored actor and musician of America. On this page Mr. Jackson tells each week what is going on along the line of Negro theatrical work. This page is attracting a great deal of attention. It affords a means of recording what is going on among colored people and in this way brings it to the attention of the theatrical and show world in general.

Black Swan Record Company
Organized to Manufacture
Phonograph Records.

The Black Swan Record Company, organized by Harry H. Pace to manufacture phonograph records, using selections by Negroes, has had a phenomenal success. In less than a year the capacity output of the orginal factory in New York City was exceeded, and a new plant had to be built. These records have enabled the singers and musicians of the race to get their selections before a much larger public than they would otherwise have been able to do. The American public is interested and has a high regard for the Negro singer. For this reasbn the Black Swan Records will meet with favor from the general public

Sol Butler
At Pershing Stadium
Wins Inter-Allied Broad Jump.

Sol Butler of Dubuque College, Iowa, and a memberof the American Expeditionary Forces, won the inter-allied broad jump at Pershing Stadium, Paris, in July 1919. His mark was, 24 ft., 9, 1-2 in., which was 2, 1-4 in., behind the world's record as it then stood.

Three Negroes were on the team which the United States sent to represent this country at the 1920 Olympic Games held in August, at Antwerp, Belgium: R. Earl Johnson of Pittsburgh, long distance runner, 10,000 meters; Benjamin Ponteau of the St. Christopher Athletic Club, New York City, light weight boxer; and Sol Butler, Chicago, in the broad jump. The Illinois checker championship was won by a Negro, George M. Tonner of Chicago. The games were played under the auspices of the Illinois Checker Association Tournament.

World's Greatest Jumper
Harvard University
Negro Athlete.

Edwin O. Gourdin of Harvard University, broke the twenty year record for the broad jump when at the International Meet between Yale, Harvard, Cambridge and Oxford Universities, held at the Harvard Stadium on July 23, 1921, he jumped 25 ft., 3 in. The previous record in jumping made by Peter O'Connor on August 5, 1901, in England was, 24 ft., 11, 3-4 in.

The first authenticated broad jump record, recorded in 1876, was 17 feet. Edwin O. Gourdin closed his athletic career at Harvard University with an all round record of track and field proficiency, surpassing that of any other man who ever attended that Institution. Besides breaking the world's record for the broad jump in the International Meet, he won the 100 yard dash. His records in various events are: 100 yard dash, 9, 4-5 seconds; 220 yard dash, 22, 1-5 seconds; 440 yard run, 52, 1-5 seconds; running high jump, 5 feet, 9 inches; running hop step and jump, 45 feet, 3 inches; putting shot, 39 feet, 4 inches; throwing javelin, 140 feet; throwing discus, 110 feet.

Gourdin Wins National Pentathlon Championship Events.

In addition to breaking the world's running broad jump record, Edwin O. Gourdin of Harvard University won the National Amateur athletic Union Pentathlon Championship events at Traverse Island, N. Y. In the five events in which there was competition, Gourdin was first in the running broad jump, throwing the javelin and the 200 meter dash. He was second in throwing the discus and sixth in the 1,500 meter run. He was the first Negro to win this all-round title.

Negro Football Star Given A Place On 1921 All American Team.

Several Negroes were outstanding players on football teams during the three seasons, 1919—1921. Among these were: Samuel Peyton and Buddie Taylor of Northwestern University; John A. Shelburne, full back on the Dartmouth College team; G. Calloway, tackle, Columbia University team; Leon Taylor, right half back, Oberlin College; and "Ink" Williams, Brown University.

The two outstanding Negro players on 1921 teams were: Harry West, full back on the Washington-Jefferson Eleven and Frederick Slater, right tackle on the University of Iowa team, champion of the "Big Ten Conference." Several of the experts classed him as one of the greatest tackles the game has ever produced. He was the Chicago Tribune's selection for tackle on the All American Team. He was also placed on Walter Camp's Second All American Team. John Johnson of the 1920 Columbia University basketball team was ranked as one of the best basketball players that has been developed on any university team. The New York Evening Mail wrote concerning him as follows: "Johnson, one of the few colored athletes who has ever featured in the sport life of metropolitan colleges, was one of the best forwards ever developed in the inter-collegiate league. Had he been provided with the support Danny McNichols, Pennn's court captain had last winter, Johnson would have been hailed as one of the greatest basketballers of all time."

Greatest Long Distance Runner In Country A Negro.

R. Earl Johnson of the Thompson Steel Works Athletic Association of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the greatest long distance runner in the country. On July 4, in Pasadena, Calif., he won the National Amateur Athletic Union Championship for the senior 5 mile run in 25 min., 53, 4-5 seconds. He won three events in October, 1921. In Detroit he won the 22, 1-2 mile event, finishing 2, 1-2 miles ahead of his nearest competitor. In Chicago, he won a 15 mile handicap Marathon from a field of 21 starters in 1 hr.,

24 min., 54 seconds. At Yonkers, N. Y., he won the National Amateur Athletic Union 10 mile Championship event in 53 min., 20, 4-5 seconds. The relay team of Howard University won the one mile event at the annual relay carnival at the University of Pennsylvania against such institutions as, Rensselaer Polytechnical Institute and Carnegie Technical Institute.

Middle Weight Boxing Championship Of Europe Won By Native African.

Battling Siki, a full blooded Senegalese Negro, won the middle weight championship of France, and according to the French Boxing Federation is the European middle weight championship as well. In the National Amateur Championship bout held in November, 1920, Benjamin Ponteau of the St. Christopher Athletic Club, New York City, won the light weight championship. Leo Patterson of Joplin, Mo., was awarded the light weight championship of the American Expeditionary Forces.

Machine Gun Invented Which Fires Any Number Cartridges At One Time.

Clarence Gregg, Kansas City, Mo., has patented a machine gun that will carry 14,000 cartridges and can be fired without the immediate attention of the operator. It can be operated at a distance by an electrical attachment. It can be made to fire any number of cartridges at a time. C. J. Perry, Cincinnati, O., has invented a smoke consuming device, which it is claimed, eliminates 85 per cent of the smoke and saves from 10 to 20 per cent of the fuel used in firing boilers.

Dr. C. V. Berry, Washington, D. C., has invented a process for fire proofing cloth of different grades including canvas, theatre curtains and lace curtains in the home. He also invented a process for water proofing cloth that would resist boiling water. He applied during the war for a patent on a chemical solution to produce a liquid fire gun shell.

Special Bag Hanger For Laundries Invented.

William Solder, Boston, Mass., has invented a combination cooking stove and hot water heater that will use either gas or coal. It is said that the stove which is but slightly larger than the common cooking range will through a system of radiators heat a house of seven rooms. Miss Alice H. Parker, Montclair, N. J., received a patent for a new heating furnace that uses gas for fuel instead of coal. W. A. Shields, Birmingham, Ala., has received a patent on a bag hanger for supplying and removing garment bags used in laundry and dry cleaning establishments.

Device Invented To Use Over Agăin Exhaust From Gasoline Engines.

Solomon Harper, Syracuse, N. Y., has invented an electric signal train control device designed to prevent train collisions through a block system.

Herbert G. Williams, Cherry Fork, Ohio, has invented an attachment for gasoline engines by which the exhaust power of the engines can be used over again, and thus increase from 25 to 30 per cent the power obtained from a given amount of gas. Robert H. Pennington, St. Joseph, Mo., has invented a dial and danger light, block signaling device for the cabs of locomotive engines.

The device will indicate the approach of a train from the opposite direction and the distance between the two trains.

Patent Enables Moving Pictures To Be Shown by Daylight.

B. F. O'Bryant of Gadsden, Ala., invented a miniature steam engine to be used for hauling passengers and other purposes, in parks and open air places of amusement. Mrs. Mary J. Reynolds, St. Joseph, Mo., received a patent on a device for moving loads from a platform to a vehicle. It is also claimed that the device will hoist articles through a second story window and deposit them on a vehicle. The invention is designed chiefly for use on motor trucks. Arthur L. Macbeth, photographer, Baltimore, Md. has received patents on a daylight moving picture theatre. By means of this invention a moving picture machine will show pictures in full day light, even in an open park on a bright noonday.

Self Starter For Airplane Motors Devised.

Dr. H. Julian, Montreal, Canada, has invented an aeroplane safety appliance to prevent the machine from falling in case of engine trouble. The safety appliance is a parachute which automatically operates in case there is engine trouble and the machine begins to fall.

Hobert Dunn, Chicago, Ill., invented a device, the "Joyplane," a toy airplane for children, which glides in the air, performs spirals, loops and tailspins just as a large airplane does. F. Douglass Warner, Middleton, N. Y., invented a self-starter to be used on airplane motors; it is similar in operation to that of an automobile starter, being worked by a foot pedal, which when pressed, starts the propeller, which in turn starts the motor.

Detroit Man In 48 Years Takes Out 57 Patents.

Elijah McCoy of Detroit, Mich., took out his first patent, Steam Chest Lubricator, in 1872. His last patent, Westinghouse Air Pump Lubricator was taken out in 1920. In almost fifty years of inventing he has taken out 47 patents in the United States and 10 in Europe. Walter Cunningham at the Hog Island Shipyard, Philadelphia, perfected a device for tapping bolts, which enables a workman in uniting to tap over 900 bolts per day instead of about 350. Moses Amos, Atlanta, Ga., has invented a special device for stamping the top of cardboard boxes as used in drug stores. Charles A. Green, chiropodist, N. Y. City, has received a patent on a new improved sanitary case that is particularly adapted for the use of chiropodists.

Mr. Garrett A. Morgan of Cleveland, Ohio, has recently invented a traffic signal device, the important features of which are that it is designed to stop the traffic in all directions at the same time. The present signal devices are designed to stop the traffic in opposite directions on the same street, but not on the intersecting street. The present signal devices also do not permit an interval of time from the stopping of traffic on the one street and the starting of it on the intersecting street. The Morgan device is destined to stop traffic in all directions until the person in charge sees fit to give the signal for the traffic to move in particular opposite directions.

In addition to this traffic device invention Mr. Morgan holds eight American patents as well as patents in Canada, England and other foreign countries on a "Safety Hood and Smoke Protector," a helmet originally invented for firemen, but also used during the World War by the United States and the Allies to combat poisonous gases and as a safety device on submarines.

Waste Material Converter Designed to Solve Garbage Question.

John T. Robinson, Philadelphia, has secured patents on an ironing board. Alfred Neal, Beaumont, Texas, invented a machine for heavy excavation; it is named the kangaroo shovel, and is said to be able to do the work of fifty men. A device on the machine causes it automatically to take a step forward each time it scoops up a load of dirt. W. D. Harper, Youngstown, O., invented a device for converting all kinds of waste material into a practical fertilizer, and is designed to solve the garbage question for cities, towns and villages. James White, Tampa, Fla., patented a carpentry device, which is designed to take the place of the rule in making rough measurements.

Deep Sea Diving Suit Invented Enables Divers To Go Down Twice As Far As Heretofore.

Leroy M. Harden of Chicago, has invented an adjustable can opener. William L. Smith of Baltimore has invented a plastering machine, an oyster shucker and a plate, knife, fork, spoon and cup, combined. Bishop Montgomery, Castleberry, Ala., received a patent on an improved fish scaler.

Alonzo A. Moore of Winthrop, Mass., invented a swimming machine, which is designed to answer to some extent the same purposes as a life saving belt. Charles H. Jackson, Boston, has invented a deep sea diving suit with which a diver can work in 360 feet of water; this is said to be twice as far as any man ever went below the waves and returned alive.

International Association Longshoremen Does Not Draw Color Line.

At the 1921 Annual Meeting of the National Federation of Postal Clerks, held at Minneapolis, four Negro delegates were present; one from Washington, two from Pittsburgh, and one from Chicago. At the biennial session of the International Longshoremen's Convention in Buffalo, in July 1921, there were 80 Negro delegates present, 65 from Southern and 15 from Northern cities. The International Longshoremen's Association does not draw any color line, as to membership.

Federation Of Labor Cannot Force Upon Labor Unions its Views Regarding Accepting Negroes.

The American Federation of Labor decided that owing to the failure of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Freight Handlers and Station Employees, to give Negro workers equal rights with whites, the Federation would issue Federal charters to local unions of Negro railway workers wherever separate unions were necessary.

Efforts to wipe out color line in organized labor organizations failed in the 1921 Annual Meeting of the American Federation of Labor held at Denver, Colo. In the discussion of this question, President Samuel L. Gompers, said: "The American Federation of Labor has previously declared that it is the duty of all workers to organize regardless of sex, nationality, race, political belief or color."

"The Federation, however, cannot force this view upon individual or affiliated unions without their consent."

Jordan W. Chambers, Negro delegate to the Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor at Denver, declared that conferences had been ordered between members of his race and the unions at previous meetings of the Conventions of the American Federation of Labor, but these conferences had never been held. He urged that drastic actions be taken to compel the recognition of Negro workers.

Adjustment Board Federation Labor Reaches Agreement With Colored Freight Handlers.

In September, 1921, at a conference in Washington between President Gompers and representatives of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, the first Board of Adjustment of the Colored Freight Handlers and Station Employees of the American Federation of Labor was organized. In July 18, 1921, a meeting was held in Washington of representatives of the American Federation of Labor, the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employers, and interested local unions of colored freight handlers. In various places the American Federation of Labor had granted charters to local unions of colored freight handlers. The following agreement was reached:

"1. That the representatives of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees declare that a plan should be developed that will admit to the Brotherhood the colored men and their unions. Colored Freight and Express Handlers, Mail and Baggage Handlers and other Station Employees, affiliated directly by charter to the American Federation of Labor."

"2. That in the interim between now and the decision of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees regarding the acceptance of colored workers and their unions to the brotherhood, the following procedure is approved and should be pursued."

"(a) The Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees will take up or cause to be taken up the reductions of wages enforced upon a number of colored freight and express handlers, mail and baggage handlers, and other station employees."

"(b) That the local unions that are now or that may hereafter be directly affiliated by charter to the American Federation of Labor shall form system boards of adjustment for each railroad system or group of systems consisting of not less than five representatives on each system to act in cooperation with one or more representatives selected by the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, these selections to be subject to the approval of the president of the American Federation of Labor. It shall be the purpose and duty of each representative or representatives to cooperate with each adjustment board in protecting the rights and interests of the colored workers and their unions, parties to this agreement."

"It is understood that where the general chairman or other system officers of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees are now satisfactorily handling the grievances and questions affecting wages and working conditions of the colored railway employees covered by this understanding, such practice will be continued subject to the provisions hereinafter made in Section C."

"(c) That in accordance with Resolution No. 74 proposed by Delegate Robert E. Buford of Colored Freight Handlers No. 16220, Richmond, Va., which declares that a fund should be created for the purpose of carrying out the objects of the resolution and of this conference, it is agreed that such a fund shall be created in the following manner:"

"That each local union of colored freight and express handlers, mail and baggage handlers, and other station employees now or hereafter directly affiliated by charter to the American Federation of Labor, shall levy a monthly assessment of 50 cents per month upon each member, which shall be paid at the same time and place to the officer of the local union when and where the regular dues of the union shall be required to be paid: that this 50 cents monthly assessment shall be transmitted in bulk, but in separate monthly reports, to the secretary of the American Federation of Labor not later than the time required for the payment of per capita tax. The secretary of the American Federation of Labor in cooperation with and under the direction of the president of the American Federation of Labor shall deposit this money in bank, and in like manner shall make remittances from this fund to the boards and the representatives of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees as approved by the said brotherhood, and the president of the American Federation of Labor."

"3. In order that this agreement may be put into effect at the earliest possible time, President Gompers and the officers of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, are authorized to take all the necessary steps essential for the approval and successful operation of this agreement. The whole purpose of this agreement and all its provisions is to do everything financially and morally to protect and further the rights and interests of the colored workers during the transition period of their present affiliation to the time when they become part of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees."

Rapid Formation Negro Labor Into Organizations Independent White Labor Unions.

One of the significant aspects of the problem concerning the organization of Negro labor is the recent tendency to organize itself independent of white labor unions. The main reason for this is that Negro labor feels that it is not receiving a square deal at the hands of white labor and that although the American Federation of Labor has for years advocated the receiving of Negroes into labor organizations, the fact remains that while the American Federation of labor, as Mr. Gompers stated, can advise the particular unions as to their policy with reference to Negroes, it has no means of effectively enforcing its recommendations. An important phase of this development is the organization of Negro Railroad Employees. The more important of these orders are: the International Order of Colored Locomotive Firemen, the National Order of Locomotive Firemen, and the Shopmen's Craft of R. M. I. B. I. A.

In January, 1921, at a meeting in Birmingham, Ala., a National Federation of Railway Men was organized. At Birmingham, Ala., in May, 1921, a joint meeting of the Railway Men's International Benevolent Industrial Association, the National Order of Locomotive Firemen, and the National Federation of Railway Trainmen was held. It was reported that there were representatives of 150 international trade organizations. These representatives came from 15 different states and represented locomotive firemen, shopmen, laborers and trainmen of 26 different railroads. At a meeting held in Chicago in October, 1921, representatives from 27 different states engaged in all branches of railroad service met and outlined plans to improve conditions affecting Negro employees of railroads. A program of general conduct was outlined in the fight against industrial discrimination. Affiliation of the various organizations represented was voted with the Railway Men's International Benevolent Industrial Association. R. L. Mays was elected head of the associated orders.

Savings By Negroes Help To Tide Over Industrial Depression.

In one way the industrial depression affected Negro labor more seriously than it did white labor. The reason for this was that a large proportion of Negro labor was unskilled or semi-skilled. It was this class of labor which was let out first.

It was found, however, that Negro labor in the industrial centers of the North had saved a considerable amount of its earnings, and by this means was able to help tide over the period of non-employment. Mr. Forrester B. Washington, of the Detroit Community Union, made an investigation of 500 typical Negro families, and also gathered statistics from 100 firms employing ten or more Negroes, and likewise from the city department of health and public welfare. Of the 500 families, 98 per cent had bank accounts which averaged $398, and more than 10 per cent were home owners, the average value of which was $5,992. With 4 per cent of the Detroit population Negro, the help to Negro families amounted to 3.7 per cent of that given in 1919.

The United States Department of Labor made a canvas regarding bank accounts of Negro workers in typical centers as affected by the Industrial depression during the period December 31, 1920, to April 30, 1921, with the following results:

	Dec. 31, '20	Apr. 30, '21
No. of Depositors	47,368	47,699
Total Amount of Savings	$3,809,809	$3,721,474
Amount Savings, per capita	80	78

"Out of approximately 350 savings institutions, in industrial centers, carrying accounts of Negro workers, 69 banks reported, furnishing figures showing that the savings of their Negro depositors remained practically unchanged during the four months ending April 30, 1921."

"The 47,368 Negro depositors as of December 31, 1920, carrying a total amount of $3,809,809, were increased as of April 30, 1921, to 47,699 with a total savings accumulation of $3,721,474. These figures show a per capita deposit, as of December of approximately $80, as compared on April 30, 1921, with a per capita deposit of approximately $78. In other words, Negro depositors withdrew from the sixty-eight (68) banks above mentioned an amount of $88,335, or an approximate per capita withdrawal of $2, considering the increase in number of depositors. This is certainly an indication of increasing thriftiness of Negro workers."

Statistical Statement Of Negro Progress In Fifty-Six Years.

On December 18, 1865, the Thirteenth Amendment declaring slavery abolished in the United States was adopted. This freed the million or more slaves to whom the Emancipation Proclamation of 1863 did not apply. It may be said for this reason that January 1, 1866 was the beginning of the opportunity for the Negroes in every part of the nation to make progress. In the past fifty-six years he has made a most remarkable progress. What follows show the extent of this progress:

Negro Out Of Politics Yet Controls Politics In The South.

The Chicago Tribune in an editorial concerning the adoption of the prohibition amendment and the amendment granting suffrage to women, maintained that: "The Negro controls the South. The South controls the democratic party. We are not blaming the South. It is of no use to blame the South and it is probably unjust. The North, given the Southern problems, might behave in the same fashion. But we are being ruled by Negroes to a very considerable extent and in very important matters.

> The Southern Negro governs by the limitations of his citizenship. His incapacity is an applied test of American legislation. If proposed legislation does not fit him it is opposed. One non-voting Southern Negro has more influence upon the course of the United States in many essential particulars than ten voting Northern citizens. He is powerful in his powerlessness."
> The Macon Telegram, somewhat along the same lines, under the heading, "The Negro and Politics," said: "When a candidate in the South finds himself on the political brink, he quite often turns to the Negro question. He believes this, if anything, will rally his dwindling constituency. Can we never let the Negro rest in our politics? He has helped to make the riches of the South as much as the white man. He has done more to whiten our broad fields with cotton than any other man. He is due credit indeed, no matter what his color be, or from whence he came, and it is foolishness of the most inexcusable kind to make him continually the football of our politics to be severely kicked back and forth over the entire field by a candidate when he feels himself weakening in the eyes of the white voters."

Efforts Made To Build Up In South White Republican Party.

Those in charge of the policies of the Republican Party have been making for some time, efforts to build up the party in the South, independent of the control of the Negro. One phase of this policy is to cut down the number of delegates from the South to the National Conventions of the party. This was first put in practice with respect to delegates to the 1916 Convention. On June 8, 1921, the Republican National Committee adopted a resolution further reducing the South's National Conventions of the party. Under this ruling delegates to the 1924 National Republican Convention are to be selected on the following basis:

"(1) One district delegate from each Congressional district maintaining therein a Republican district organization and casting 2,500 votes or more for any Republican elector in the last preceding Presidential election, or for the Republican nominee for Congress in the last preceding Congressional election."

"(2) One additional district delegate for each Congressional district casting 10,000 votes or more for any Republican elector in the last preceding Presidential election, or for the Republican nominee for Congress in the last preceding Congressional election, or having elected a Republican representative in Congress at the last preceding Congressional election."

"The delegates which the South loses, making a total reduction of 40 per cent since 1912, will be largely gained by northern and western States."

Beginning with 1916 the number of delegates from the South to the National Republican Convention was based upon the number of votes cast instead of, as in previous conventions, upon the South's population. As compared with the number of delegates from the South to the National Convention of 1912, the loss in the number from this section was for the 1916 Convention, 78; for the 1920 Convention, 83; for the 1924 Convention, 104. The most general effect was upon the number of Negro delegates which decreased from 62 at the National Republican Convention of 1912, to 27 at the 1920 Convention.

Defeat Lily Whites In Virginia Blow To Efforts To Build Up Party Independent Of Negro.

Another way by which the leaders of the Republican Party are endeavoring to build up a party in the South independent of the Negro, is to exclude Negroes from participation in party conventions and to put up candidates for state officers on a platform more or less antagonistic to the Negro.

In Georgia, the old State Republican Committee, the majority of the members of which were Negroes, was deposed by the National Committee, and a new Committee appointed on which there were only two Negroes. In Virginia, the Negro delegates were excluded from the 1921 Republican State Convention. In retaliation the Negroes put out a full State ticket of their own, and when the candidates on the Lily White Republican ticket were defeated by a plurality of over 65,000, observers both within and without the State said that the effort to build up a party independent of the Negro had received a severe blow because at no time in the history of the Republican Party in the State, had it suffered so severe a defeat.

Negroes Develop Independence In Politics Put Their Own Tickets In Field.

The most significant phase of the development relative to the Negro in politics during the past three years has been the developing of independence in politics; that is, to break away from the Republican Party. On the other hand, there has not been any marked movement of Negroes toward the Socialist Party and other so-called radical political organizations.

As an example of this tendency to develop independence in politics the Black and Tan Party in Texas put out a full State ticket, and in a number of instances full county tickets. In Louisville (Ky.), a ticket composed entirely of Negroes was put out for all city offices, from Mayor down. In 1920, the Negroes in Baltimore, as a protest against the treatment they received at the hands of the Republican Organization, put up a candidate for Congress, W. Ashby Hawkins, who was reported to have received 7,000 votes. J. R. Pollard in Virginia, ran for the United States Senate, and was reported to have received over 17,000 votes.

It was noted above that in Virginia as a result of Negroes being barred from the Republican State Convention they held a Convention of their own and put a ticket in the field with candidates from Governor down. The platform on which they ran contained among other things the following:

"We hold that under a government where the sovereign powers are lodged in the people and exercised by them through the elective franchise, the right to vote is inseparable from the right to be voted for, and any attempt to separate these prerogatives is a dangerous political heresy, contrary to the genius of our Republican form of government and destructive of the ends and aims of a free people.

"The history of the colored people in Virginia for the past 20 years attests the fact that they are by no means chronic office seekers, and therefore, we denounce as a political subterfuge the pronouncement in the Republican Platform in which it attempts by inuendo to assure the white electorate that it is opposed to Negro office holders, and thereby in its efforts to gain the support of a certain element of the white electore offers a gratuitous insult to the colored electorate at large."

"We cannot believe that the great body of the God fearing men and women whose labors and sacrifices have made Virginia a distinguished member of the family of States will subscribe to the sophistry that a class of our citizens who wrought mightily for her development for 250 years and that too, without a single pay day shall be denied the right to participate in the political affairs of the government and in party councils upon the untenable grounds that another group of citizens pays into the coffers of the State the greater part of its revenues."

"We believe too that character and experience are necessary qualities to be possessed by any one offering for the suffrage of the electorate, but we fail to see how one can ever demonstrate the excellence of his character who never has been put to the test, or gained experience in office which he is never allowed to hold."

"We condemn as utterly evasive and wilfully misleading the attempt to confuse the participation of any group of people in politics with a desire to change the social understanding always existing between the races in this State and while we respectfully and unreservedly demand to be treated as other citizens with all the rights, privileges and immunities accorded them, including the rights to vote, and to be voted for, still we resent the insinuation coming from certain sources that we desire or intend in anywise to disturb the very cordial relations existing between the best of both races in Virginia."

Negroes Advised To Vote Their Own State Ticket And Support Democrats For Local Offices.

It appears that there is a tendency of the Negroes, where there is a break with the Republican Party to make friends with the Democratic Party, as for example, after the election in Virginia, John Mitchell, Jr., of Richmond, president of a bank and editor of a paper, who was the candidate for governor on the ticket put out by the Negroes, in commenting on the results of the election said:

"Our line of campaign was to nominate colored candidates for every office where the 'Lily-Whites' had named any candidate, and in my instructions and advices, I advised the colored people to vote for our State ticket, and in all of the city and county contests to support the local Democratic nominees. It was understood that every vote for our State candidates was a half-vote for Senator Trinkle as Governor, and the other Democratic officials on the ticket with him."

Negro Women Take Active Interest In Politics And In Qualifying To Vote.

In some quarters doubt was expressed as to whether Negro women would take an active interest in politics by qualifying themselves to vote and by participating in elections. This doubt was dissipated during the election of 1920. In every part of the country the Negro women showed much interest in qualifying themselves for voting and in exercising the franchise. In many places woman suffrage clubs were organized.

In Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and Texas, there were colored women voters' leagues, whose especial business was to give instructions to the colored women with reference to qualifying and voting. Another significant thing was that they were active in seeing that the men of the race took more interest in qualifying for voting. In some cities of the South the registration was unusually heavy. Among these places were: Baltimore, Savannah, Atlanta and Jacksonville. In the State of Tennessee, the registration of Negro women was reported to have been large.

Grandmother Clause Proposed For Disfranchising Negro Women.

A bill was introduced in the North Carolina Legislature known as the Grandmother Clause for Women Voters and was designed to protect the right to vote until 1925 by provision exactly the same as that under which many white illiterates had been hitherto registered.

The bill was intended to protect the illiterate white women, and did not take account of the fact that the Grandfather Clauses, respecting qualifications for voting had been declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court. The general idea with reference to Negro women voting in the South was that they would be prevented from voting, in the same way that Negro men had been prevented from voting, and that the so-called disfranchisement laws would be made to apply to Negro women in the same way that they had been made to apply to Negro men.

Fear Vote Negro Women Causes Congressman To Urge White Women Qualify For Voting.

On November 6, 1921, the Atlanta Constitution published a letter from Thomas M. Bell, representative in Congress from the 9th Georgia District, in which he wrote:

"Editor, Constitution: I believe you will agree with me when I say it is of the utmost importance that we maintain white supremacy in Georgia and in the South. The recent constitutional amendment enfranchises the Negro women, and I fear thay will at the last moment, register and vote, as they have in Virginia."

"I know you are intensely interested in this matter, and I am writing you to suggest that you urge the ladies of the State to register and be prepared to vote. It may be obnoxious to many of them, but this is better than to suffer bitter humiliation when it is too late to remedy it. I hope and trust you will have something to say in each edition of your paper about this important matter until the registration books close. By so doing you will have done your country and fellowman an invaluable service."

Granting Suffrage Negro Women May Change Attitude South Toward Negro Suffrage.

Many are of the opinion that it is very probable that the granting of suffrage to women will eventually have a salutary effect on politics in the South and assist in changing the attitude of the South toward Negro suffrage. If as is stated, the ballot is an effective weapon of protection, the women of the South, colored included, will take advantage of it. If the South is developed and keeps pace along all lines with other parts of the nation, then universal suffrage in the South as in other parts of the country must eventually obtain.

Bill For Reduction Southern Representation Fails Passage In House Representatives.

A bill presented by Representative Tinkham of Massachusetts designed to reduce representation in Congress from states where there was restriction of the suffrage, after receiving considerable consideration, was rejected. This bill was introduced in connection with the reapportionment of the membership of the House on the basis of the 1920 Census. There was a division among Negroes themselves as to the advantage and disadvantage of having such a bill enacted. Arguments in favor of the reduction were:

"1. That it would lessen the national power of government to exclude its colored people, and so lessen the power to perpetuate that disfranchisement."

"2. That it would make it more difficult to extend disfranchisement to any other State, inasmuch as such State would have to consider the very interesting question of its prospective loss of power as a State."

"3. That it would put a premium on the re-enfranchising of the already disfranchised Negro: for a State could increase its votes in Congress and the Electoral College by increasing the voting strength of its population."

"4. That it would revive those almost devitalized amendments to the Constitution, and give recognition to the black man's human and citizenship rights which would impress the whole country and the world."

"5. That, as a corollary or consequence of all this, it would temporarily lessen the power of the States which are incorrigibly opposed to the equal citizenship of colored people, would make it harder to legislate against the Negro as a race anywhere, especially in Congress, and easier to get through certain sorely needed national legislation, like anti-lynching laws and anti-Jim-Crow laws. And it would give the Negro voter of the free States a greater portion of weight against the unlawful opposition to his race."

The arguments advanced against reductions were:

"1. That it would license the South to disfranchise the Negro by permitting it to pay the constitutional fee."

"2. That it would encourage other States like Illinois, Indiana and Ohio where the Negro's political strength is growing, to get rid of it by following the example of the South."

"3. That it would constitutionally or effectually decitizenize the Negro."

"4. It is a presupposition of all these objections that the disfranchising State would be permanently satisfied with the reduction of its representation and power in the nation."

In the hearing before Congress in connection with the proposed enactment of the Tinkham Bill, it was claimed by Congressmen from Southern states that Negroes were not disfranchised. The representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, offered testimony to show that there was disfranchisement. Their testimony, however, was not conclusive.

> The fact nevertheless remains that only a comparatively small number of Negroes vote in the South, and that although before a Congressional Committee, it may be difficult to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that Negroes are prevented from voting, nevertheless the small number that vote in the South would seem to indicate that the laws enacted in Southern States to restrict suffrage, (disfranchisement laws) do in effect disfranchise a very large majority of Negro voters.

Laws Restricting Suffrage Operate to Disfranchise Both Whites and Negroes.

The table which follows shows: (1) the number of votes cast in the 1920 Presidential Election in ten Southern States; (2) the per cent that the total number of votes cast by whites and Negroes was of the total number of males, whites and Negroes, of voting age, and (3) the per cent the number of Democratic votes cast was of the total white males of voting age. These figures indicate, that from one-half to four-fifths of the males of voting age are not voting, (83 percent in South Carolina and 47 per cent in Florida), and that the restricting of the suffrage operates to disfranchise both whites and Negroes.

Suggested Plans For Increasing Number Negro Voters In Southern States.

The growing intelligence of Negroes and the progress which they are making along all lines, bring to the front the question of their admission, to a greater extent, to the exercise of the franchise.

Numerous suggestions have been made, as for example, in 1918, the Columbia (S. C.) State, in an editorial, recommended that Negroes be admitted to the Democratic Party in South Carolina; that in 1876 there were many Negroes who were at that time voting the Democratic ticket. The editorial concluded with the suggestion that 15,000 or 20,000 Negroes be enrolled in the Democratic Party; that such a "policy" could not possibly do it any harm, and they would be a reinforcement against the dangerous division of the whites. These men would have pride in their party affiliations and the general result would be improved racial relationship.

In 1920, Oscar W. Adams, Editor of the Birmingham (Ala.) Reporter, a Negro newspaper, wrote a letter to the Editor of the Birmingham News, (white) relative to Negroes voting. The Birmingham News in reply suggested that it would be a good thing to increase the number of Negroes that were voting and suggested a plan where by this might be done.

Suggestion Made That Committee Representative Negroes Recommend Negroes For Voting.

"Why may there not be a beginning of an experiment in this matter? For instance, as a suggestion, why should not some representative body of high class Negroes be encouraged to investigate into the standing and record of several hundred of the best of their race as they see them? Why could not that body after such an investigation certify the list of some limited number of colored residents to another corresponding committee of representative white men? And then, why should not the resultant list of intelligent, industrious, honest Negroes be turned over to the County Registers by that advisory body with a recommendation that the qualifications of the list for registration should be legally passed upon."

"This program would be an experiment worth trying. It would not result in any large addition of Negro voters. It would not endanger white supremacy. It could not lead to Negro supremacy, for such a careful process, if kept up, would necessarily exclude a large proportion of Negro residents for years to come. The experiment could be continued for some years, according to the light of results, which would be determined largely by the course of the Negro voters themselves."

White Man Commends And Negro Opposes Plan To Recommend Negro For Voting.

Mr. J. Melancon, a white man, commended the editorial and pointed out that the Negro is not getting a square deal. "What are the facts?" "When the Southern whites regained control the Negro was intirely disfranchised and I believe it will hardly be denied that the attempted sudden application of the fifteenth amendment of the Federal Constitution has been the principal factor in retarding by many years the admission of the Negro to his full political rights.

This condition of complete disfranchisement still persists, although in the meanwhile the Negro has made astonishing progress, and many of them could now be safely admitted to suffrage."

"But no thinking man believes that this condition can continue indefinitely. In the natural course of human progress the time must inevitably come when the Negro will obtain his political rights. I believe, with the News, that the time has come for a cautious and gradual move in that direction."

James W. Johnson, Secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, took the ground that such a plan would be untenable. He maintained that:

"In the first place, there is no body of Negroes in Birmingham, 'representative' enough or 'high-class' enough to be given the power to draw up a list of the colored citizens of that town who should be allowed to vote. And in the next place, there could be no corresponding committee of white men 'representative' enough, or wise enough, or good enough, or anything else enough to be given the power of passing on that list."

Negro Newspapers Of The South Active In Urging Negroes To Qualify And Prepare For Voting.

The Negro newspapers of the South are active in urging Negroes to qualify and prepare for voting. Prominent among these papers are; the Atlanta Independent, the Savannah Tribune, the Southwestern Christian Advocate, the Birmingham Reporter, the Nashville Globe, the East Tennessee News, the Richmond Planet, the Norfolk Journal and Guide, the Dallas Express and the Houston Observer.

As an example, the Savannah Tribune of October 29, 1919, headed a column of instructions relative to voting with the following heading: "Information for Those Who Wish to Qualify, Register and Vote." A summary of the instructions given was that you must have paid all taxes which you owed the State of Georgia since becoming 21 years. "You can select one of the following conditions, and qualify to register under it, namely: good character clause, educational clause and property clause. You must tell the registrar under which clause you wish to qualify. You do not have to pay taxes for any State except for the time you have been in Georgia. The registrar has nothing to do with the taxes of other States. Soldiers do not have to stand good character, educational or property tests. All honorably discharged soldiers can qualify by presenting their discharge papers and paying all taxes, if any, that they owed the State of Georgia. If for any cause you are unable to get registered, come to headquarters, 468 West Broad Street."

Concerning white primaries, the instructions pointed out that white Democratic Primaries are not elections, but have only the force and effect of naming conventions. No qualified voter can be denied the right to cast his vote at the general election.

The Negro Active In City Politics.

Negroes are taking more and more interest both North and South in city politics. This for the reason that they are appreciating to a larger degree their civic responsibilities and the benefits which come in a civic way through politics, for example, educational, sanitary, etc.

Negroes Elected Members State Legislatures.

During 1919-1921, several Negroes were elected members of State Legislatures: to the New York Legislature, J. C. Hawkins, lawyer; to the Ohio Legislature, Henry Higgins, business man; to the Missouri Legislature, W. M. Moore, business man; to the Pennsylvania Legislature, J. C. Asbury, lawyer and Andrew Stevens, banker; to the New Jersey Legislature, W. G. Alexander, physician; to the West Virginia Legislature, T. J. Nutter, lawyer, re-elected and H. V. Capehart, lawyer, re-elected; to the California Legislature, F. M. Roberts, editor, re-elected; to the Illinois Legislature, three, A. H. Roberts, lawyer, re-elected, Warren Douglas, lawyer, re-elected, S. B. Turner, lawyer and editor, re-elected; to Washington Legislature, J. H. Ryan, editor. Dr. Woodfin of Ironton, Ohio, was elected County Coroner.

Negro Policemen Urged As means Of Preventing Racial Friction.

The demand is growing, especially by the Negroes themselves, that in the districts of cities where the Negro predominates Negro policemen should be used. It is urged that this would be a means, not only of reducing crime, but likewise of preventing racial friction. The experience in connection with the use of Negro policemen seems to bear out claims.

The following cities employ one or more Negro policemen: Boston, Cambridge, Everett, New Bedford, Melrose, Lynn, (Mass.); Bridgeport, Hartford and Waterbury, (Conn.); Buffalo, Utica and New York City, (N. Y.); Atlantic City, Plainfield, Trenton, Hackensack and Newark, (N. J.); Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chester, Uniontown, Erie and Sharron-Farrall, (Pa.); Baltimore, (Md.); Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Steubenville, Toledo and Youngstown, (Ohio); Detroit, (Mich.); Evansville, Indianapolis and Terre Haute, (Ind.); Chicago, Cairo, East St. Louis, (Ill.); Kansas City (Kans.); Minneapolis and St. Paul, (Minn.); Des Moines, (Iowa); Knoxville and Memphis, (Tenn.); Omaha, (Nebr.); Tampa, (Fla.); St. Louis and Kansas City, (Mo.); Austin, Houston and Galveston (Tex.); Muskogee, Oklahoma City and Tulsa, (Okla); Denver, (Colo.); Wheeling, (W. Va.); Spokane, Seattle and Tacoma, (Wash.); Los Angeles and Oakland, (Calif.)

Negro policewomen are being used in the following Cities New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Detroit, Chicago, Des Moines, San Antonio, Los Angeles and Petersburg, Va.

The following cities have Negro probation officers to work in connection with the Juvenile Courts: New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Louisville, Indianapolis, Richmond, Atlanta and Savannah, (Ga.); Huntsville, Montgomery, Birmingham, Selma, Tuscaloosa and Mobile, (Ala.)

President Harding In Address To South Declares Against Social Equality But Urges Economic And Political Equality.

President Harding, in a speech delivered at Birmingham, (Ala.) on October 26, 1921, discussed the race problem at length. This is the first time that any President of the United States has devoted a formal address to this problem.

The main points of this address were: first, the race problem is no longer sectional, but is now national and even international. The time, he stated, had passed when the people of the South could assume that the problem of races was peculiarly and particularly their own. The problem of races is a problem of Africa, of South America, of the Pacific, of the South Seas, of the world. Second, because of division on race lines the South is not making any real contribution to solving national issues. Third, there should be "an adjustment of relations between the two races in which both can enjoy full citizenship, the full measure of usefulness to the country and of opportunity for themselves, and in which recognition and reward, shall at last be distributed in proportion to individual deserts, regardless of race or color." Fourth, the suggested way out of the difficulty was that the question of social equality should be disregarded, and that economic equality, political equality, and equal educational opportunities should be given to the Negroes.

Concerning social equality the President said:

"Men of both races may well stand uncompromisingly against every suggestion of social equality. Indeed, it would be helpful to have that word, 'Equality,' eliminated from this consideration; to have it accepted on both sides that this is not a question of social equality, but a question of recognizing a fundamental, eternal and inescapable difference. We then have made real progress when we develop an attitide in the public and community thought of both races which recognizes this difference."

President Harding Advises Negroes To Divide Their Vote And Cast Both Democrat And Republican Ballots.

Concerning political equality the President said "I would say, let the black man vote when he is fit to vote. Prohibit the white man voting when he is unfit to vote." As to economic equality he said, "I mean it in precisely the same way and to the same extent that I would mean it if I spoke of equality of economic opportunity as between members of the same race."

"In each case, I would mean equality proportionate to the honest capabilities and deserts of the individual." After pointing out that it was bad for the South and also for the nation to have a solidly Democratic South, and a solidly Republican black race, he urged that the Negro vote in the South be divided. He said: "I want to see the time come when black men will regard themselves as full participants in the benefits and duties of American citizenship; when they will vote for Democratic candidates if they prefer the Democratic policy on tariff or taxation, or foreign relations, or what not; and when they will vote the Republican ticket only for like reasons."

Whites And Negroes Both Approve And Condemn President Harding's Recommendations.

The President's address on the race problem received nation wide attention and was extensively commented on by both the white and Negro press. There was a great diversity of opinion expressed concerning it. Some of the white papers approved all of the President's recommendations and others approved of certain ones as a whole or in part. Some of the Negro papers approved of all of the President's recommendations and others approved of only certain ones, and severely condemned the others.

South Gives Expressions Of Approval And Disapproval President Harding's Speech.

Some papers took the ground that the speech was purely political and was a frank bid to break the solid South, but that in so doing he had lined up with the Lily-Whites and deserted the Negroes. It can be said that the expressions of approval of the President's Birmingham speech were much more numerous than were the expressions of disapproval.

The expressions of disapproval were to the effect that the President did not understand the race problem, and therefore should not undertake to meddle with something he knew nothing about. The Houston (Tex.) Post said: "No one doubts but that Mr. Harding's intentions were good, but effects of such remarks uttered by a President in a State like Alabama are calculated to be more harmful than helpful, in solving the problem under discussion. The risk was great that many of the Negroes would misconstrue his language and exaggerate his meaning, and under the inspiration of his encouragement assume an attitude that will make for friction between the races."

The Little Rock, (Ark.) News feared that the speech would make the ignorant and vicious of both races more vicious and that the President had stirred up a hornet's nest and done violence to the South's cherished tradition of white supremacy by proclaiming political equality as the goal of the new dispensation.

The Nashville (Tenn.) Banner said that the South resents intermeddling whether that intermeddling comes from high or low.

The expressions of approval were to the effect that the President had stated only what forward-looking Southerners had been saying for years, or as the Birmingham News said: "The South will have no quarrel with President Harding upon his address. If the speech was greeted in a measure of silence, it was because such statements from the President were astounding, and the people were thinking and reflecting. It was not a matter for cheering, but for study." There was general approval of the President's social equality idea. The Jacksonville (Fla.) Metropolis said: "Taken broadly, there is nothing in the speech to which the South can object since Mr. Harding placed strong emphasis upon his opposition to race equality or anything approaching it."

The Baltimore Sun called the President's address a brave utterance and said that the South must meet the President's challenge in like spirit. Any improvement possible between the races must come through the application of candor and courage.

The Asheville (N. C.) Citizen said that the address touched the conscience of the whole country in pleading for a greater measure of economic opportunity for the colored men for encouragement to the black men in developing the pride of race that comes from racial progress.

The Spartanburg (S. C.) Journal said that the position taken by President Harding might be described as an amplification of the position taken by Abraham Lincoln who declared that it is utterly impossible for two diverse races to live on the same soil on equal social and political terms.

The Atlanta Constitution said: "There is no reason why the whole so-called Negro problem should not be solved along the very lines laid down by the President and solved to the satisfaction of the whole nation, removing the race question as a political issue, and enabling the whole people of every section—North, South, East and West—to consider the economic issues on their merits."

Negroes Approve The Economic And Political Equality Section But Disapprove The Social Equality Section President Harding's Speech.

As was the case with the white press the Negroes of the country in general approved of President Harding's speech. They especially commended that part of it which dealt with the economic and political equality for the race and for equal educational opportunities. Where there were objections they were generally against the stand taken by the President with reference to social equality. The Associated Negro Press in a bulletin sent out by its Department of Opinion said:

"There are two features of the address that have come in for more comment than any of the others. The two are 'Political Equality' and 'Social Equality.'

"The discussion of the 'Social Equality' portion of the address has been very extensive within the group, as well as without. There is a vast difference of opinion concerning the advisability of this reference. Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, Dr. Kelly Miller, Dr. J. E. Moorland and others, commonly classified as the 'intellectual group,' are in the section of those who think 'Social Equality' reference in the address was untimely, and yet insist, since the reference was made, there should be no barrier set up by any nation, or individual, seeking to dictate the policy of social selection between individuals."

"There has seemed to be more excitement and alarm, by both races, on this phase of the President's address, than any other. It is noticeable that the active political group, headed up by R. R. Church, Henry Lincoln Johnson, Perry Howard, Walter Cohen and others, in the Republican party accept the address as a masterpiece of carefully expressed opinion."

Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois speaking editorially in the Crisis said, "Mr. Harding meant that the American Negro must acknowledge that it was a wrong and a disgrace for Booker T. Washington to dine with President Rosevelt! The answer to this inconceivably dangerous and undemocratic demand must come with the unanimous ring of twelve million voices, enforced by the voice of every American who believes in Humanity."

Professor Kelly Miller of Howard University, in an open letter to President Harding, said among other things, "I think that no biologist or psychologist who has regard for his reputation would care to venture the opinion that race differences are inescapable and eternal."

"Candor compels me to say, Mr. President, speaking deliberately on behalf of the thoughtful element of the Negro race, that your platform based upon the assertion of 'fundamental, inescapable and eternal differences' of race is calculated in the long run, to do the Negro as great harm as the Taney Dictum (The Negro has no rights which the white man was bound to respect) would have done, had not the aroused conscience of the nation negatived the interpretation which the author placed upon it. From the Negro's point of view you have attempted to build a superstructure of righteousness upon a fallacious foundation . . . If you write at the top of the page the declared and accepted doctrine of 'fundamental, inescapable, and eternal differences of race,' it then makes no difference what you may write underneath, the Negro would be degraded into an inferior caste which would render any form of equality impossible."

The Crusader Magazine took the ground that the speech meant:

"(1) the denial of Social Equality to the Negro; (2) the plan of supporting such Negro leaders as will acquiesce in this denial, and in utilizing white control of Negro schools to further increase the number; (3) the claim of inherent Negro inferiority; (4) the unwritten Southern law that 'black men cannot be white men,' which after elimination of color change as a recognized impossibility, simply means that black men cannot expect to enjoy all the rights and privileges of American citizenship enjoyed by white men, citizens and aliens; (5) the South's plan for exclusive industrial education as against any higher education for Negroes; (6) the South's noisy opposition to racial amalgamation while silently indulging in its practice."

The editorials on the President's address in the Negro Weekly Press were disposed to discuss the meaning of social equality. In several instances this was done in a very searching and thoroughgoing manner. The following are some of these comments:

The New York News was of the opinion that "The Birmingham address would stand forth as the most helpful and wholesome political utterance of the decade in America."

The New York Age remarked: "Few of our Presidents have exhibited such moral courage in pleading for just treatment of the Negro, in the section where that quality has been so severely lacking. The President's insistence that men of both races may well stand uncompromisingly against every suggestion of social equality was undoubtedly necessary in order to keep the uneasy consciences of the whites from balking at this bugbear. The fact that the whites have done so much in the past to bring about a quasi 'social equality' by the mixing of the blood of both races, has rendered them unduly sensitive on this point."

The Atlanta Independent said, "Now, as to his utterances on social equality, that was gratuitous so far as the Negro is concerned. The Negro has never asked nor invited social equality. That has been the bugaboo of his enemies.

"At no time has the Negro shown any desire for social equality—that is the least of his dreams. That is a matter that will take care of itself—it is not a subject of government. He has always been satisfied with his own people—all he wants is a square deal in his right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which is guaranteed by the Federal Constitution. This guarantee is expressed in the 14th and 15th Amendments, and if these Amendments are enforced by the President, the Negro is satisfied. They guarantee to him economic, educational, civil and political equality, and that is all the Negro asks. Social equality is nothing more than an irridescent dream—nobody wants it and nobody seeks it."

The Richmond Planet observed that the distinguished occupant of the White House remarks that racial amalgamation there cannot be. "This was rather an amusing statement, when many of the people in Alabama, whom he took to be white people were in reality colored ones. There is every reason to believe that more amalgamation between the races is going on in the Southland behind closed doors than in the Northland with its matrimonial publicity."

"No colored leader of renown or of recognized respectability in the Southland will take issue with President Harding upon the fundamental statements uttered by him. All of them have repudiated 'social equality.' It would seem then that our President was busily engaged in a task of telling white and colored people of Alabama just what they already knew."

The comment of the St. Louis Argus was that: "In the first place, we believe it ill-advised that he as President of the United States should have attempted to discuss a subject which he himself admits does not exist. It is a bugaboo—a time-worn saying, with many aliases, that have been used in the South to cheat, rob, murder, lynch, burn, disfranchise, Jim-Crow, segregate and ostracize the Negro for the past half century."

"There is a mistaken idea on the part of most, if not all white people of this country, concerning the Negro's ambition, hope and aspiration. The so-called social equality is the least of our expectations. But we are ambitious to have every opportunity to develop our brain in the arts and sciences of the world, just as any other citizen of the United States. We have hopes that our boys and girls shall so prepare themselves that they may be able to take their places in the drama of life along side all men and women, where ability counts, regardless of race or color."

"Our aspirations are as lofty as the skies, and the rungs of the ladder by which we expect to reach them are limited only by the measure of our souls."

"We want to be men, free men, enjoying every right that others enjoy, limited only by our ability We want to breathe the sunlight of God's love in the 'Land of the free and the home of the brave,' and be anything we are big enough to be"

The Houston (Tex.) Informer's criticism was; "President Harding, like countless others of his race, confused 'Social Equality' with 'Social Intermingling.'"

"This criticism on our part was hurled at the chief executive for his refreshing and illuminating ignorance on this phase of the subject which he endeavored to elucidate on in his Dixie discourse."

"It is possible for a man to be another's social equal and then not be his social companion."

"Social equality really means the recognition of one standard of citizenship and s differentiated from 'Social Intermingling,' which means the mixing and mingling of all peoples and races."

"Social equality is based and founded on the 'Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man,' doctrine, and was proclaimed to the world in the American Declaration of Independence which said: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal and are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and pursuit of happiness.'"

"There is a physical law which holds that 'water will seek its level,' and those who become unduly alarmed and enraged because of President Harding's utterances are misapplying and misdirecting quite a bit of energy that hey will doubtless need later."

"Not even the most ignorant and vicious member of the colored race has the remotest idea of even trying to overthrow our constitutional form of government and he challenges no man's 'supremacy.'"

"The colored American only asks that the American white man, especially in the South, give him a man's chance, and at the same time aid him to be the best possible citizen of this commonwealth."

The Chicago Defender said, "The only comment which we wish to make about the divine command of the President to the races on social equality is to suggest that what he really meant was lawful amalgamation. He simply got his terms a bit mixed.

"His association with Senator Underwood and other Southern gentlemen will easily account for that. What they mean is that no black woman shall have the right to bring her half-white child into court and force the white father to give that child the name it ought to have. We would respectfully point out to the President that amalgamation there always has been and amalgamation there always will be, the passions of men being what they are, and especially until the white women of the South teach their male children that the honor of no woman can be safe until the black woman is fully protected from dishonorable men, be they white or black, and especially from white men, under the present unfair laws of the South."

The Wilmington (Del.) Advocate's comment was: "This matter of social equality is a vague unreal and evanescent thing. Who is to define what it is? If such a thing really exists it is regulated by the individual.

"Is it social equality to want to ride in first class manner when a colored person pays a first-class fare? Is it social equality, when being in a strange city, or home city a colored person desires to get a bite to eat, having the price to pay for it goes to a place where food is sold, to buy it? Is it social equality for a colored person to desire to hear good music, see an uplifting drama and buy a seat where his means will permit? Is it social equality for a colored person to patronize the public libraries and the institutes of fine art for the cultural benefits to be derived from them? How much of social equality is there in colored children attending mixed schools and having that helpful contact, that beneficial understanding that is so easily obtained in the formative years of life between the races? If these things mean social equality, then the colored people want them, and if these United States fo m a real democracy they are entitled to them, or this country is not the land of the free and the Constitution of the United States is a misnomer and the Declaration of Independence is a dead letter."

White People's Ideas Erroneous Concerning Negroes And Social Equality.

The idea concerning the Negro and social equality, which appears to be uppermost in the minds of most white people, is that the greatest desire and ambition of Negroes are to have social intermingling with white people, that is, "just to be with them." This is not true. The almost universal statements of Negroes are that they do not care to be with white people just for the privilege of mixing with them as such.

The question, however, of having the same protection and the same privileges under the law a whites, with reference to marriage, is held by all Negroes; that is, that the women of the race shall be afforded under the law, the same protection as white women are afforded. In the various states of the South and in the states of other sections of the country where there are laws against intermarriage, it is very difficult or almost impossible for a Negro woman or girl to bring suit against a white man for seduction.

Absence Of Laws Prohibiting Inter-Marriage Of Races Does Not Promote Race Mixture.

In those states where the law permits marriage between whites and Negroes, there is less actual mixture of the races than in the states where there are laws prohibiting this. In other words the principal source of miscegenation is still in the South where the States have laws prohibiting marriages between the races. As an example, an investigation, of marriages by nationalities in New York City from 1908 to 1912 in which 101, 854 marriages or 59.4 per cent of the total for the period were examined, showed that of a total of 6,641 colored marriages, only 62 or nine-tenths of one per cent were mixed marriages.

Poetry A Vehicle For Expression Racial Consciousness.

A considerable amount of poetry is being written by Negroes. In addition to numerous book of poems, much of this poetry is being published in Negro newspapers.

The titles of many of the poems are indicative of a growing racial consciousness, as for example: "A Prayer to Ethiopia," "Africa," "True Liberty," "Come to My Arms O Ephraim," "Battle Hymn Negro Land," "To Africa," "The Star of Hope," "The Flag of the Free," "Memories of Ethiopia," "The Tale of Two Races," "The Black Man's Plaint," "A Prophecy of Ethiopia," "What Americans Want," "I am White by Color Only," "Race Consciousness," "Ye Sons of Ham," "Black Ba d" "Go Ephraim Tell the Story," "A Voice from Flanders' Fields," and "Freedom's Call."

Manifestitations Racial Consciousness.

The growth of racial consciousness among Negroes is manifesting itself in various ways. There is a growing race pride, an increasing interest in race literature, more faith in Negro leadership, the demand for patronage of Negro business, the boycotting of white firms which do not treat Negroes with courtesy, the moving away from communities in which lynchings have taken place, and boycotting of white insurance companies whose agents fail to treat Negroes with courtesy.

Organization An Indication Of The Growth Racial Consciousness.

Organization is an indication of the growth of racial consciousness. This means not only organization through the church, secret societies and those forms of organizations which are generally common; but in addition organization for the betterment of conditions, for better educational facilities for civic improvement for economic development and for a greater participation in politics. Here the tendency is not so much for office holding as to secure those benefits which may be derived from participation in politics; a larger share in those things which come through politics, as for example, paved streets, well lighted streets, clean streets and alleys, water and sewer facilities and most important of all, protection under the law.

Some White People Through Ignorance Use Terms Obnoxious To Negroes.

Negroes resent the use of the term "darkey" for the same reason that white groups resent the use of the terms, dago, sheenies, hunkies, greasers, polocks, red necks, tallies, hill billies, rosin shavers, etc.

It is pointed out that much of the use of the term "darky," etc., by white people is through ignorance of the fact that these terms are obnoxious to Negroes. A white speaker who had lost his grip on a colored audience by using the term "darky," said when told of the cause of his failure that he had always supposed that the pithet, "darky" was a particularly endearing, affectionate and acceptable term to colored people because he had seen it in so many kindly stories. "He had not reflected that colored people did not write a single one of those kindly stories."

An active campaign is being carried on against the practice of newspapers to present facts relating to Negroes in a bad light. The references in newspapers to Negro women as Negresses, to Negro children as pickaninnies and to Negroes as darkies is especially resented.

The Brooklyn (N. Y.) Standard Union carried this headline in its issue of April 17, 1921. "Darky Priest Writes Poems to Aid His Cause." This referred to a white Catholic priest who was working among the Negroes of Brooklyn. In the New York Herald of April 17, 1921, there was a picture of seven Negro children, under which was the legend, "These Lucky Seven Little Pickaninnies are All Prize-Winners in the Baby Contest." No such reference would have been made to a similar group of white children.

Americanism And Use Of Oppressive Nicknames.

With the idea of having the boy scouts and members of other boy organizations subscribe to a pledge called the "Code of Honorable Names" the United States Commissioner of Education formulated and sent out a pledge which read as follows:

"My name for every true man in these United States shall be the honorable name of 'American.'"

'My reference to all 'new Americans' born in other lands shall never be dishonored by slurs, nicknames or hyphens."

"My purpose shall be to discourage in the native born the love for titles, to help every alien to forget his hyphen, and be proud of the name American, and to stamp out the use of such nicknames as words of derision of the foreign-born."

"We pledge ourselves never to use, and to discourage everywhere the use of such words as Dago, Dutchy, Froggy, Ginny, Greaser, Heiny, Horwat, Hunky, Mike, Mick, Paddy, Sheeney, Spaghetti and Wop as applied to any foreign-born resident of the United States of America."

The New York Age, after commenting editorially on this pledge, suggested that it would be a good beginning toward the abolishing of the use of the term "Nigger," among both whites and Negroes if the colored boy scouts, colored school boys and colored boys everywhere took a pledge something like this:

"My name for every true man, boy, woman and girl in these United States shall be the honorable name of 'American.' I myself will be true, and will expect and demand that name as my title."

"I pledge myself never to refer to any class of Americans by any slur or offensive nickname, and to resent being referred to or spoken to in a like manner."

"I further pledge that I shall never use the epithets which are often applied to my own race, and shall endeavor to discourage their use among colored people everywhere."

Discussion Continues Concerning Use Of Terms Negro, Colored, Afro-American.

During the period 1919-1921, there was a continuation of the discussion concerning what term most appropriately designates the group of African descent in the United States. The Boston Guardian announced that it had decided to cut out the word "Negro," and to use in its stead, American or Black American. In explanation of this it was stated that:

> "After studying all of the most important works on the term Negro, we find that in Africa there are a very few people in an unimportant tribe who are true Negroes; all the rest, four hundred million, are Africans. If you were born in America you are American; if a descriptive noun must be used, then the words Black American can be used correctly. The word Negro places all of Black Americans in an inferior tribe of people. We may be of African extraction, it is true, but after a clan of people have lived in any country three hundred years certainly it can be assumed that this extraction could be left out and Black American used as a correct and legitimate title."

A writer in the Richmond Planet, stated that he wanted to be called Negro and pointed out that while it might be true that the original word, Negro was restricted to a single tribe, there was only one tribe in 'Albion' bearing the name of 'Angles.' "But the descendants of the Saxons and of the Jutes are no less proud than the descendants of the Angles in saying that they are (Angles) English.

> "Very appropriately our race is termed Negro. Its name's derivation has proceeded exactly as the term "Jew" (from one tribe of twelve) and the term 'Caucasian' from a very small number of people in the Caucasus. For all the term came by synecdoche, by a figure of speech giving the name of a part to the name of the whole."

Should Not Use Term "The Negro" To Refer Without Distinction To Negroes.

There is a general complaint among Negroes that the tendency is to have the general term, "The Negro," to refer to Negroes without any distinction. The term, "The Negro," generally refers to whatever class of Negroes the writer happens to be acquainted with, which is usually the lower type, generally the servant class.

> This is illustrated by the article, "African Folk," in the Atlantic Monthly for October, 1921 and also by two recently published books "The Birthright" and "White and Black." It is further illustrated by sociologists and other scientific writers on the Negro, who in this respect become unscientific. On the other hand, when these writers think of the white race, they instinctively consider the group, the class to which they belong, and put that forward as the type of the white race. It would be just as logical to take the whites of the slums of cities and refer to them as "The Whites," or the poor whites of the South and refer to them as "The Whites," meaning the entire white race, or as being typical of the entire white race, as to take a particular class or even individuals of the Negro race and refer to them as the "Negro;" that is, as typical of the Negro race.

The New Negro What Is He, What Does He Want?

The question is being asked, "is there a new Negro" or is it the same Negro with changed ideals, a changed point of view, and with a new spirit? It is further asked, "if there is a new Negro what does he want?" One observation is, that although lacking the personal contact with the whites which the Old Negro had, the new Negro on the other hand, has developed an individual independence and also a confidence in himself, in the race, in race enterprises and in racial understanding which the "old Negro" never had. He has a knowledge of what other Negroes are thinking and doing. Self-defense is another characteristic which the new Negro has developed.

The World War Did Not Produce The New Negro.

In an article under this title, Professor Robert T. Kerlin, of Lexington, (Va.) in a paper read before the Southern Sociological Congress in Washington, in 1920, pointed out that the reaction of the Negro to the World War has been along the line of a more developed racial consciousness and a determination to struggle for all that democracy means. He says:

> "Another type of colored man has come upon the stage: the Negro who is struggling for manhood rights, for political, economic and social freedom, for all that democracy means to the most favored. We are baffled by his attitude and his ambitions. We have made no provision in our social system for this new man in the old color. Tradition is mighty, prejudice is subtile and prevailing. The romancers have so engaged our fancies with the delectable old-timer that the new-comer finds all our mental chambers occupied. The World War brought this new Negro upon the stage of our national life, but the World War did not produce him. The fifty years since Emancipation, fifty years of struggle and upward striving through semi-servitude have done that."

Negro Not Demanding Anything Which Belongs To Another.

In his struggle to rise the Negro is not trying to deprive any other group of its rights and privileges. "He is not demanding anything that belongs to another; but he is demanding rights that are his, to acquire the identical things that other Americans enjoy. And he is specific in his demands. He asks for equal opportunity to develop himself by his own labors. He asks equal opportunity to compete with every other American for the identical fruits and blessings achieved by any other American under the American form of government. The Negro asks no gifts, but an equal opportunity to acquire any and everything other men acquire through honest toil and sacrifice."

Why The Negro Wants To Exercise The Right Of Suffrage

James H. Thomas writing in the Gospel Plea, states very clearly why the Negro wants to exercise the right of suffrage.

> "He wants this because it is his right by every standard of citizenship in a democracy. He was born under the Stars and Stripes, and has followed her in every war since first she was flung to the breeze. His blood is in her red, his fidelity in her blue, his chivalry in her white, and to the lustre of her every star his industry adds a proper share. He wants the right of suffrage because he is a taxpayer, and taxation without representation is still tyranny. He wants it because he should be consulted in every matter relating to the public welfare, and suffrage is the only way in which his sentiments can be made to count effectively. He wants this right for self-protection. The town whose officers are elected independently of his ballot takes his taxes and then leaves his residence section in the dark, his streets unpaved, and unpoliced, and provides no adequate protection against fire. The sheriff whose tenure of office is in no sense dependent upon the will of the black man, winks at, and even connives with the mob composed of his constituents. Justice always nods while the man who has no vote is giving his testimony, only waking in time to tip the scales in favor of the other party.

Prayer of the Race That God Made Black.

We would be peaceful, Father—but, when we must,
Help us to thunder hard the blow that's just!

We would be peaceful, Lord, when we have prayed,
Let us arise courageous—unafraid!

We would be manly, proving well our worth,
Then would not cringe to any God on earth!

We would be loving and forgiving, thus
To love our neighbor as Thou lovest us!

We would be faithful, loyal to the Right—
Ne'er doubting that the Day will follow Night!

We would be all that Thou hast meant for man,
Up through the ages, since the world began!

God, save us in Thy Heaven, where all is well!
We come slow—struggling up the Hills of Hell.

First Song By Negro Expressing Hate.

It is said that in all the Negro folk-songs there is not a single line of hate. This is true not only of the songs but until recently of Negro poetry. In Shackleford's "Pray For Your Enemies," we have, however, a Hymn of Hate, which calls down curses, woes and intensified punishment upon "those who lynch the Negro."

Pray for Your Enemies.

'Tis commanded in the Scriptures
That we pray for our foes,
Even those who heap upon us
Our burdens and our woes.
I believe in this commandment,
And shall take it unto me,
And for those who lynch the Negro
This my daily prayer shall be:

May their days be "days of sorrow"
And their home the house of death,
And may dread and terror seize them
With the drawing of each breath;
May the pains their victims suffered—
Multiplied ten thousand fold—
Rend their very soul asunder
Till their errors they behold.

May their children share the burdens
Of the wrongs which they have done;
May the aftermath to follow
Spare not daughter neither son.
May their children's children curse them
Whom they should have blessed for birth,
Had their place in life been other
Than the "vilest scum of earth."

May their wells of water fail them,
And their cattle be destroyed.
May they "have no pleasure in them,"
Nor the sins they once enjoyed.
May the flood, the plague and famine,
Hedge them in on every hand,
Till their petrifying corpses
Shall pollute the very land.

And may those who hold high places
And their duty fail to do,
Be included with the guilty
When the punishments due.
May the whole world turn against them
Who defend a lyncher's name.
May they be cut off from mercy
While they revel in their shame.

May the wrath of God burst o'er them,
Blast, and blight each foul life
Till they reap the ripened harvest
Of their hellishness and strife.
Yea, unless they shall repent then,
May the bitterest of ends
Rest on them and theirs forever,
On the lynchers and their friends.

The Negro's Creed.
(A Satire.)

I believe in the inherent inferiority of my race.

I believe the Anglo-Saxon race is divinely ordained, because of its color, to the estate of "white supremacy."

I believe my place in human society is that of a subordinate—a "hewer of wood," for all the other races of mankind.

I believe it is a crime for individuals of my race group to aspire to the same levels of life in the world about them that members of other race groups have attained.

I believe the Christian Church should assume this fact of race inferiority and teach and preach the same to my race.

I believe those other agencies, the jim-crow regime, the masked mob, the savage orgies exhibiting quivering, burning human beings,—natural and inevitable concomitants of the inferior race theory,—are legitimate and defensible methods of keeping me in "my place."

I believe I should be contented with that type of education which comports with the theory of inherent race inferiority.

I believe the other races are sufficiently wise and good and devoid of racial prejudice to be wholly entrusted with the government of my inherently inferior race.

I believe I should, therefore, not hold any public political or civic office.

I believe I should not vote.

I believe that absolute justice will be accorded me in the courts.

I believe resolute appeal and effort for better opportunities and living conditions for my group is "dangerous agitation," and though this is the method pursued by other race minorities to advance themselves in the family of race groups, should be refrained from my group. I should remain mute under oppression.

I believe I should refrain from living in cities and entering as a laborer into those civilizing industries that make me keen of intellect and deft of hand, and which pay a living wage, but that I should remain on the farm where the labor systems keep my family and me under nourished and where peonage is rampant.

I believe my race group should accept blindly and following these compromising, sycophant "race leaders" chosen and ordained for us by other race groups because for self and profit they promulgate programs and employ tactics to inveigle our group, to accept and subscribe to this theory of inherent race inferiority.

I believe that inasmuch as the problem of race adjustment does not fall within the pale of Christian ethics, it must be solved not by the clear, convincing, conclusive teachings of Jesus, but by the crass materialistic philosophy of those who strive with the sword.

I believe that under these conditions as a Negro, I can develop the highest type of patriotism and personal character, and that I can be most respectful an reverent toward law and order.

I believe the integrity and dignity of my race group suffer no impairment by this creed and that this group is by far the most favored of any group domestic or foreign living under the Stars and Stripes.

The Garvey Movement
An Expression
Growing Racial Consciousness.

The Universal Negro Improvement Association, or the Garvey Movement as it is more popularly known outside of the Organization, was established some five years ago for the purpose of improving and placing on a firm basis the commercial status of the Negro, and for the redemption of Africa.

It is essentially an outgrowth of the growing racial consciousness, and is perhaps the first attempt to unite all the black people in the world in a movement for their social and political uplift. It was made possible by the conditions brought about by the World War and the impetus which that event gave to national and racial consciousness throughout the world. Much has been written both for and against the Garvey Movement. Those who oppose it state that the Movement cannot succeed; that Marcus Garvey is visionary; that the organization of the Black Star Line Steamship Company and the other business enterprises of the Association are not founded on sound economic principles, and are in the end doomed to failure.

The central thought of the Garvey Movement is, "Africa for the Africans;" that is, the establishing of a nation of black people. The especial emphasis is not upon the disabilities and wrongs which the Negro suffers in the United States. He is to have a nation of his own, therefore it is not necessary to give especial attention to the creating of a place for the Negro within any other nation.

At the 1920 convention of the organization a Declaration of Independence of "The First International Convention of the Negro Peoples of the World," was drafted and adopted. It contained fifty-four Articles, and may be reckoned as an expression of what the Negro wants; that is, so far as the wants of the Negro were voiced by the members of the Universal Negro Improvement Association and African Communities League.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS OF THE NEGRO PEOPLES OF THE WORLD.

Preamble.

"Be it Resolved, That the Negro people of the world, through their chosen representatives in convention assembled in Liberty Hall, in the City of New York and United States of America, from August 1 to August 31, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty, protest against the wrongs and injustices they are suffering at the hands of their white brethren, and state what they deem their fair and just rights, as well as the treatment they propose to demand of all men in the future."

We complain:

I. "That no where in the world, with few exceptions, are black men accorded equal treatment with white men, although in the same situation and circumstances, but, on the contrary, are discriminated against and denied the common rights due to human beings for no other reason than their race and color."

"We are not willingly accepted as guests in the public hotels and inns of the world for no other reason than our race and color."

II. "In certain parts of the United States of America our race is denied the right of public trial accorded to other races when accused of crime, but are lynched and burned by mobs, and such brutal and inhuman treatment is even practiced upon our women."

III. "That European nations have parcelled out among them and taken possession of nearly all of the continent of Africa, and the natives are compell d to surrender their lands to aliens and are treated in most instances like slaves."

IV. "In the southern portion of the United States of America, although citizens under the Federal Constitution, and in some states almost equal to the whites in population and are qualified land owners and taxpayers, we are nevertheless, denied all voice in the making and administration of the laws and are taxed without representation by the State governments, and at the same time compelled to do military service in defense of the country."

V. On the public conveyances and common carriers in the Southern portion of the United States we are jim-crowed and compelled to accept separate and inferior accommodations and made to pay the same fare charged for first-class accommodations, and our families are often humiliated and insulted by drunken white men who habitually pass through the jim-crow cars going to the smoking car."

VI. "The physicians of our race are denied the right to attend their patients while in the public hospitals of the cities and States where they reside in certain parts of the United States."

"Our children are forced to attend inferior separate schools for shorter terms than white children, and the public school funds are unequally divided between the white and colored schools."

VII. "We are discriminated against and denied an equal chance to earn wages for the support of our families, and in many instances are refused admission into labor unions, and nearly everywhere are paid smaller wages than white men."

VIII. "In Civil Service and departmental offices we are everywhere discriminated against and made to feel that to be a black man in Europe, America and the West Indies is equivalent to being an outcast and a leper among the races of men, no matter what the character and attainments of the black man may be."

IX. "In the British and other West Indian Islands and colonies, Negroes are secretly and cunningly discriminated against, and denied those fuller rights of government to which white citizens are appointed, nominated and elected."

X. "That our people in those parts are forced to work for lower wages than the average standard of white men and are kept in conditions repugnant to good civilized tastes and customs."

XI. "That the many acts of injustices against members of our race before the courts of law in the respective islands and colonies are of such nature as to create disgust and disrespect for the white man's sense of justice."

XII. "Against all such inhuman, unchristian and uncivilized treatment we here and now emphatically protest, and invoke the condemnation of all mankind."

"In order to encourage our race all over the world and to stimulate it to a higher and grander destiny, we demand and insist on the following Declaration of Rights:

1. "Be it known to all men that whereas, all men are created equal and entitled to the rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and because of this we, the duly elected representatives of the Negro peoples of the world, invoking the aid of the just and Almighty God to declare all men, women and children of our blood throughout the world free citizens, and do claim them as free citizens of Africa, the Motherland of all Negroes."

2. "That we believe in the supreme authority of our race in all things racial: that all things are created and given to man as a common possession; that there should be an equitable distribution and apportionment of all such things, and in consideration of the fact that as a race we are now deprived of those things that are morally and legally ours, we believed it right that all such things should be acquired and held by whatsoever means possible."

3. "That we believe the Negro, like any other race, should be governed by the ethics of civilization, and therefore should not be deprived of any of those rights or privileges common to other human beings."

4. "We declare that Negroes, wheresoever they form a community among themselves, should be given the right to elect their own representatives to represent them in Legislatures, courts of law, or such institutions as may exercise control over that particular community."

5. "We assert that the Negro is entitled to even-handed justice before all courts of law and equity in whatever country he may be found, and when this is denied him on account of his race or color such denial is an insult to the race as a whole and should be resented by the entire body of Negroes."

6. "We declare it unfair and prejudicial to the rights of Negroes in communities where they exist in considerable numbers to be tried by a judge and jury composed entirely of an alien race, but in all such cases members of our race are entitled to representation on the jury."

7. "We believe that any law or practice that tends to deprive any African of his land or the privileges of free citizenship within his country is injust and immoral, and no native should respect any such law or practice."

8. "We declare taxation without representation unjust and tyrranous, and there should be no obligation on the part of the Negro to obey the levy of a tax by any law-making body from which he is excluded and denied representation on account of his race and color."

9. "We believe that any law especially directed against the Negro to his detriment and singling him out because of his race or color is unfair and immoral, and should not be respected."

10. "We believe all men entitled to common human respect, and that our race should in no way tolerate any insults that may be interpreted to mean disrespect to our color."

11. "We deprecate the use of the term 'nigger' as applied to Negroes, and demand that the word 'Negro' be written with a capital 'N.'"

12. "We believe that the Negro should adopt every means to protect himself against barbarous practices inflicted upon him because of color."

13. "We believe in the freedom of Africa for the Negro people of the world, and by the principle of Europe for the Europeans and Asia for the Asiatics, we also demand Africa for the Africans at home and abroad."

14. "We believe in the inherent right of the Negro to possess himself of Africa, and that his possession of same shall not be regarded as an infringement on any claim or purchase made by any race or nation."

15. "We strongly condemn the cupidity of those nations of the world who, by open aggression or secret schemes, have seized the territories and inexhaustible natural wealth of Africa, and we place on record our most solemn determination to reclaim the treasures and possession of the vast continent of our forefathers."

16. "We believe all men should live in peace one with the other, but when races and nations provoke the ire of other races and nations by attempting to infringe upon their rights, war becomes inevitable, and the attempt in any way to free one's self or protect one's rights or heritage becomes justifiable.

17. "Whereas, the lynching, by burning, hanging or any other means, of human beings is a barbarous practice, and a shame and disgrace to civilization, we therefore declare any country guilty of such atrocities outside the pale of civilization."

18. "We protest against the atrocious crime of whipping, flogging and overworking of the native tribes of Africa and Negroes everywhere. These are methods that should be abolished, and all means should be taken to prevent a continuance of such brutal practices."

19. "We protest against the atrocious practice of shaving the heads of Africans, especially of African women or individuals of Negro blood, when placed in prison as a punishment for crime by an alien race."

20. "We protest against segregated districts, separate public conveyances, industrial discrimination, lynchings and limitations of political privileges of any Negro citizen in any part of the world on account of race, color or creed, and will exert our full influence and power against all such."

21. "We protest against any punishment inflicted upon a Negro with severity, as against lighter punishment inflicted upon another of an alien race for like offense, as an act of prejudice and injustice, and should be resented by the entire race."

22. "We protest against the system of education in any country where Negroes are denied the same privileges and advantages as other races."

23. "We declare it inhuman and unfair to boycott Negroes from industries and labor in any part of the world."

24. "We believe in the doctrine of the freedom of the press, and we therefore emphatically protest against the suppression of Negro newspapers and periodicals in various parts of the world, and call upon Negroes everywhere to employ all available means to prevent such suppression."

25. "We further demand free speech universally for all men."

26. "We hereby protest against the publication of scandalous and inflammatory articles by an alien press tending to create racial strife and the exhibition of picture films showing the Negro as a cannibal."

27. "We believe in the self-determination of all peoples."

28. "We declare for the freedom of religious worship."

29. "With the help of Almighty God, we declare ourselves the sworn protectors of the honor and virtue of our women and children, and pledge our lives for their protection and defense everywhere, and under all circumstances from wrongs and outrages."

30. "We demand the right of an unlimited and unprejudiced education for ourselves and our posterity forever."

31. "We declare that the teaching in any school by alien teachers to our boys and girls, that the alien race is superior to the Negro race, is an insult to the Negro people of the world."

32. "Where Negroes form a part of the citizenry of any country, and pass the civil service examination of such country, we declare them entitled to the same consideration as other citizens as to appointments in such civil service."

33. "We vigorously protest against the increasingly unfair and unjust treatment accorded Negro travelers on land and sea by the agents and employees of railroad and steam ship companies and insist that for equal fare we receive equal privileges with travelers of other races."

34. "We declare it unjust for any country, State or nation to enact laws tending to hinder and obstruct the free immigration of Negroes on account of their race and color."

35. "That the right of the Negro to travel unmolested throughout the world be not abridged by any person or persons, and all Negroes are called upon to give aid to a fellow Negro when thus molested."

36. "We declare that all Negroes are entitled to the same right to travel over the world as other men."

37. "We hereby demand that the governments of the world recognize our leader and his representatives chosen by the race to look after the welfare of our people under such governments."

38. "We demand complete control of our social institutions without interference by any alien race or races."

39. "That the colors, Red, Black and Green, be the colors of the Negro race."

40. "Resolved, That the anthem 'Ethiopia, Thou Land of Our Fathers,' etc., shall be the anthem of the Negro race.

The Universal Ethiopian Anthem.

(Poem by Burrell and Ford.)

I

Ethiopia, thou land of our fathers,
Thou land where the gods loved to be,
As storm cloud at night suddenly gathers
Our armies come rushing to thee.
We must in the fight be victorious
When swords are thrust outward to gleam;
For us will the vict'ry be glorious
When led by the red, black and green.

Chorus.

Advance, advance to victory,
Let Africa be free;
Advance to meet the foe
With the might
Of the red, the black and the green.

II

Ethiopia, the tyrant's falling,
Who smote thee upon thy knees
And thy children are lustily calling
From over the distant seas.
Jehovah the Great One has heard us,
Has noted our sighs and our tears,
With His spirit of Love he had stirred us
To be One through the coming years.
CHORUS—Advance, advance, etc.

III

O, Jehovah, thou God of the ages
Grant unto our sons that lead
The wisdom Thou gave to Thy sages
When Israel was sore in need.
Thy voice thro' the dim past has spoken,
Ethiopia shall stretch forth her hand,
By Thee shall all fetters be broken
And Heav'n bless our dear fatherland.

CHORUS—Advance, advance, etc.

41. "We believe that any limited liberty which deprives one of the complete rights and prerogatives of full citizenship is but a modified form of slavery."

42. "We declare it an injustice to our people and a serious impediment to the health of the race to deny to competent licensed Negro physicians the right to practice in the public hospitals of the communities in which they reside, for no other reason than their race and color."

43. "We call upon the various governments of the world to accept and acknowledge Negro representatives who shall be sent to the said government to represent the general welfare of the Negro peoples of the world."

44. "We deplore and protest against the practice of confining juvenile prisoners in prisons with adults, and we recommend that such youthful prisoners be taught gainful trades under human supervision."

45. "Be it further resolved, that we as a race of people declare the League of Nations null and void as far as the Negro is concerned, in that it seeks to deprive Negroes of their liberty."

46. "We demand of all men to do unto us as we would do unto them, in the name of justice; and we cheerfully accord to all men all the rights we claim herein for ourselves."

47. "We declare that no Negro shall engage himself in battle for an alien race without first obtaining the consent of the leader of the Negro people of the world, except in a matter of national self-defense."

48. "We protest against the practice of drafting Negroes and sending them to war with alien force without proper training, and demand in all cases that Negro soldiers be given the same training as the aliens."

49. "We demand that instructions given Negro children in schools include the subject of 'Negro History,' to their benefit."

50. "We demand a free and unfettered commercial intercourse with all the Negro people of the world."

51. "We declare for the absolute freedom of the seas for all peoples."

52. "We demand that our duly accredited representatives be given proper recognition in all leagues, conferences, conventions or courts of international arbitration wherever human rights are discussed."

53. "We proclaim the 31st day of August of each year to be an international holiday to be observed by all Negroes."

54. "We want all men to know that we shall maintain and contend for the freedom and equality of every man, woman and child of our race, with our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor."

These rights we believe to be justly ours and proper for the protection of the Negro race at large, and because of this belief we, on behalf of the four hundred million Negroes of the world, do pledge herein the sacred blood of the race in defense, and we hereby subscribe our names as a guarantee of the truthfulness and faithfulness hereof in the presence of Almighty God, on this 13th day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty.

Pan-African Congress Adopts Resolutions And Sends Communication To League Of Nations Concerning Needs Of Native Labor In Africa.

The Pan-African Congress which is an effort to assemble in deliberation representatives of the different groups of people of Negro descent in a world congress, held its first session in Paris, France, February 19, 20 and 21, 1919. The second Pan-African Congress was held in 1921. Sessions were held in London, Brussels and Paris, August 28, 29 and 31, and September 2, 3, 5, and 6.

It was reported that there were 110 delegates representing 26 different groups of people of Negro descent, namely: British Nigeria, Gold Coast and Sierra Leone, the Egyptian Sudan, British East Africa, former German East Africa, French Senegal, the French Congo and Madagascar; Belgian Congo, Portuguese St. Thome, Angola and Mozambique, Liberia, Abyssinia, Haiti, British Jamaica and Grenada, French Martinique and Guadeloupe, British Guiana, the United States of America, Negroes resident in England, France, Belgium and Portugal, and fraternal visitors from India, Morocco, the Philippines and Annam. The substance of the resolutions adopted by the Second Pan-African Congress was:

"I. The recognition of civilized men as civilized despite their race or color."

"II. Local self-government for backward groups, deliberately rising as experience and knowledge grow to complete self-government under the limitations of a self-governed world."

"III. Education in self-knowledge, in scientific truth and in industrial technique, undivorced from the art of beauty."

"IV. Freedom in their own religion and social customs, and with the right to be different and non-conformist."

"V. Cooperation with the rest of the world in government, industry and art on the basis of Justice, Freedom and Peace."

"VI." The ancient common ownership of the land and its natural fruits and defence against the unrestrained greed of invested capital."

"VII. The establishment under the League of Nations of an international institution for the study of Negro problems."

"VIII. The establishment of an international section in the Labor Bureau of the League of Nations, charged with the protection of native labor."

The Congress also sent the following communication to the League of Nations concerning having a section of the International Bureau of Labor to deal with problems as they affect native Negro labor.

"First: The Second Pan-African Congress asks that in the International Bureau of Labor a section be set aside to deal particularly and in detail with the conditions and needs of native Negro labor especially in Africa, and in the Islands of the Sea. It is the earnest belief of the Congress that the labor problems of the world cannot be understood or properly settled so long as colored, and especially Negro labor is enslaved and neglected, and that a first step toward the world emancipation of labor would be through investigation of native labor."

"Secondly: The Second Pan-African Congress wishes to suggest that the spirit of the modern world moves toward self-government as the ultimate aim of all men and nations and that consequently the mandated areas, being peopled as they are so largely by black folk, have a right to ask that a man of Negro descent, properly fitted in character and training, be appointed a member of the Mandates Commission so soon as a vacancy occurs."

"Thirdly and finally: The Second Pan-African Congress desires most earnestly and emphatically to ask the good offices and careful attention of the League of Nations to the condition of civilized persons of Negro descent throughout the world. Consciously and unconsciously, there is in the world today a widespread and growing feeling that it is permissible to treat civilized men as uncivilized if they are colored, and more especially of Negro descent. The result of this attitude and many consequent laws, customs and conventions is that a bitter feeling of resentment, personal insult and despair is widespread in the world among those very persons whose rise is the hope of the Negro race."

"We are fully aware that the League of Nations has little if any direct power to adjust these matters, but it has the vast moral power of world public opinion and of a body conceived to promote peace and justice among men. For this reason we ask, and urge that the League of Nations take a firm stand on the absolutely equality of races and that it suggest to the Colonial Powers connected with the League of Nations the forming of an International Institute for the study of the Negro Problems, and for the Evolution and Protection of the Negro race."

Department Justice Investigates Radicalism And Sedition Among Negroes As reflected In Their Publications.

On October 17, 1919 a resolution was passed in the United States Senate requesting "A Report on The Activities of The Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice against Persons Advising Anarchy, Sedition and The Forcible Overthrow of The Government." This report was published as Senate Document Number 153 of the 66th Congress, First Session. One section of the Report was devoted to a report on "Radicalism and Sedition Among the Negroes As Reflected In Their P. blications." Twenty-six pages were devoted to excerpts from newspapers and magazines published by Negroes to show that there was much radicalism and sedition rife among them. The summary of the report was:

> "Among the more salient points to be noted in the present attitude of the Negro leaders are, first, the ill-governed reaction toward race rioting; second, the threat of retaliatory measures in connection with lynching; third, the more openly expressed demand for social equality, in which demand the sex problem is not infrequently included; fourth, the identification of the Negro with such radical organizations as the I. W. W. and an outspoken advocacy of the Bolsheviki or Soviet doctrines; fifth, the political stand assumed toward the present Federal administration, the South in general, and incidentally, toward the peace treaty and the League of Nations. Underlying these more salient viewpoints is the increasingly emphasized feeling of a race consciousness, in many of these publications always antagonistic to the white race and openly, and defiantly assertive of its own equality and even superiority."
> The general attitude of the Negroes concerning this report, was that there was considerable hysteria on the part of those who made the investigation, and that they did not go deep enough into the subject to really get the Negroes' point of view and what in any other group of people would have been taken as a simple statement of facts as to discriminations, etc., were held to be radicalism and sedition among the Negroes. As a confirmation of the contention of the Negroes, was the fact that of the five thousand or more persons arrested for radicalism and sedition, not one Negro was included in the arrest.

Pullman Car Not Railroad Coach Within Meaning Kentucky Law To Separate Races On Trains.

On March 17, 1921, the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia handed down a decision that the Jim-Crow Car Law in Maryland was unconstitutional and void so far as it applied to inter-state colored passengers. The effect of this decision is that State laws, separating races on trains and in cars are valid if at all, only in the state enacting such law and in such state only as applied to transportation entirely within the confines of such state.

> In October, 1921, Judge William Reed of the Paducah (Ky.) Circuit Court held that a Pullman sleeping car is not a railroad coach within the meaning of the Kentucky statutes, and that when whites and Negroes rode in a Pullman coach there was not a violation of the Kentucky State Law concerning the separation of the races on railroad trains.

United States Government Responsible For Damages Arising From Failure To Enforce Jim-Crow Car Law.

On April 19, 1920, the Supreme Court of the United States rendered a decision holding that the South Covington and Cincinnati Street Railway Company, which operates inter-urban cars between Cincinnati and cities across the river in Kentucky, should abide by the separate coach laws of Kentucky. The Company contended that its principal business was inter-state commerce.

"The carriage of passengers between Cincinnati and the Kentucky cities across the Ohio river." The United States Supreme Court in handing down its decision, confirmed the ruling of the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky, that the South Covington and Cincinnati Street Railway Company operated "by means of its control, ownership and lease of, and from the Cincinnati, Covington and Erlanger Railway Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, an inter-urban railroad company," which had been authorized to construct and operate an electric railroad in Kentucky and had been incorporated under the general railroad laws of that State.

On October 17, 1921, the United States Supreme Court handed down a decision to the effect that the United States was responsible under the Act of 1920 for damages arising from failure to enforce State rules and laws, regulating transportation within State borders. Under this ruling three white men were awarded $400 damages because three Negroes were permitted to ride in a railroad car with white passengers from Pascagoula to Biloxi, (Miss.)

Nashville Passes Ordinance To Enforce Jim-Crow Car Law On One Man Street Cars.

The city of Nashville, (Tenn.) is experiencing trouble in having the regulations enforced relative to the separation of races on street cars. This relates mainly to one man cars on which the motorman acts as conductor. On February 1, 1921, a fine of $2,000 was assessed the Nashville Street Railway Company for violating the statute providing for the separation of races on street cars.

The case was appealed to the State Supreme Court for the purpose of making a test of the law. In July the State Supreme Court upheld the decision of the lower court. As result of this decision, on September 19, an ordinance was introduced in the City Council of Nashville, providing for the enforcement of the Jim-Crow Car Law on street cars. On November 21, the Street Car Railway Company pled guilty of having violated the law by permitting the co-mingling of whites and Negroes in cars, and was fined $25 in each case of violation for a total of $500.

Tenancy As Related To The Negro Problem.

Professor D. Y. Thomas of the History and Political Science Department of the University of Arkansas, in the Manufaturers' Record, June 17, 1920, had a very illuminating article on the subject of "Tenancy as Related to the Negro Problem."

He was of the opinion that so far as the rural population is concerned, the crux of the Negro problem is economic. It involves the question of landlord and tenant, and has mainly to do with the question of accounts and settlement. It is suggested that there should be some system of keeping accounts that would be required by law. "Keeping accounts," the writer urges, "should be required by law." Some officer, perhaps the county judge should be empowered, and when requested by either party, should be required to audit these accounts.

Peonage Continues, The Jasper County Horror.

In the spring of 1921 investigations by the Federal government of peonage charges against Georgia planters uncovered a most horrible situation in Jasper County. John S. Williams, a planter there, had made a practice of buying out prisoners from the Atlanta and Macon Stockades, and taking them to work on his plantations. It began to be rumored that some of these men disappeared, and that no trace of them was to be found. An investigation revealed the fact that the Williams plantation was a murder farm. The bodies of eleven Negroes were found who had been done to death; six by drowning in Yellow river, and five had been killed and buried on the plantation. The farm boss, a Negro, Clyde Manning, confessed that under the directions of Williams he had done the most of the killing. Williams and Manning were tried, and given life sentences.

The Dorsey Pamphlet As To The Negro In Georgia.

The general situation revealed by the "Jasper County Horror," and outbreaks of lawlessness in the State caused Governor Hugh M. Dorsey to call a conference of citizens at Atlanta, April 22, 1921. The facts which he placed before them were contained in a pamphlet entitled, "As To The Negro In Georgia."

He gave four reasons for calling the conference. These were: "The Negro Lynched," "The Negro Held in Peonage," "The Negro Driven Out by Organized Lawlessness," and "The Negro Subject to Individual Acts of Cruelty." He stated: "Under these four headings, in the following pages, I have grouped 135 examples of the alleged mistreatment of Negroes in Georgia in the last two years. Without design, or the knowledge of each other, Georgians, with one exception, have called these cases to my attention as Governor of Georgia. The exception noted was the appeal of two Negroes to Washington for protection. Their appeal was forwarded to me, as Governor, with the request that I should act if I could do so without adding to the danger in which the Negroes stood. No effort has been made to collect cases. If such an effort were made, I believe the number could be multiplied."

Governor Dorsey Makes Suggestions To End These Conditions.

Governor Dorsey suggested as a remedy for ending these conditions:

"1. Publicity, namely, the careful gathering and investigation by Georgians, and not by outsiders, of facts as to the treatment of the Negro throughout the State and the publication of these facts to the people of Georgia."

"2. An organized campaign by the churches to place in every section of Georgia a sufficient number of Sunday Schools and churches, where in their separate places of worship the young and old of both races will learn from suitable teachers the gospel of justice, mercy and mutual forbearance for all."

"3. Compulsory education for both races."

"4. The organization of State Committees on race relations, one Committee composed of leading white citizens, another of leaders among the Negroes, and local committees made up in the same manner in each county of the State, the committees to confer together when necessary concerning matters vital to the welfare of both races."

"5. The repeal of Code Section 716, which together with 715 reads:

'715. Procuring money on contract for services fraudulently. If any person shall contract with another to perform for him services of any kind, with intent to procure money or other things of value thereby, and not to perform the service contracted for, to the loss and damage of the hirer, or, after having so contracted, shall procure from the hirer money, or other things of value, with intent not to perform such service, to the loss and damage of the hirer, he shall be deemed a common cheat and swindler, and upon conviction shall be punished as for a misdemeanor.'

'716. Proof of intent to defraud. Satisfactory proof of the contract, the procuring thereon of money or other thing of value, the failure to perform the services so contracted for, or failure to return the money so advanced with interest thereon at the time said labor was to be performed, without good and sufficient cause, and loss or damage to the hirer, shall be deemed presumptive evidence of the intent referred to in the preceding section.'

"6. The enactment of laws—

"(a) Establishing a state constabulary under proper safeguards and authorizing the Governor, upon his own motion, to send members of such force into any County of the State to quell disorder or to protect the life and property of any citizen."

"(b) Imposing a financial penalty upon any County in which a lynching may occur, when the officials of that county have failed in their duty."

"(c) Authorizing the Governor of the State to appoint at any time any three judges of the Superior Court to act as a commission to investigate any lynching occuring in any county of the State and empowering the Governor to remove from office any public official found by such commission to have failed to enforce or uphold the law."

"(d) Giving the Governor the discretion and power in any case of mob violence or lynching to authorize and direct any judge of the Superior Court to draw grand and petit juries from the State at large for the consideration and trial of such cases, and authorizing the Governor to designate the place at which the trial or trials shall be held."

Peonage Result Farming System Of The South.

Peonage is a direct result of the South's farming system and the laws which, as a result of this system, have been enacted to govern labor contracts and to punish crime. The situation in Georgia is typical. It was pointed out in connection with the discussion that arose relative to the "Jasper county horror" that a trial judge in a county court or the criminal branch of any court having jurisdiction over misdemeanor cases invariably imposed, "fine sentences," with alternative "work sentences," as for example, the judge imposes a sentence of $100 or 12 months on the road, $100 or 6 months on the road, or $25 and 3 months on the road.

The custom is for an employer of labor to pay the fine imposed, and to make an agreement with the offender that he will work out the amount of the fine at a rate of perhaps 50 cents per day. The offender is charged for rations or other food, money or clothing advanced him by his employer. The result generally is that the victim gets deeper and deeper into debt and peonage results. Under the contract labor law of 1903, the planter is able to hold these convicts, and throw them back into jail upon the slightest infraction of his command, and in due course have another fine imposed.

Probation And Parole Laws Also Help To Foster Peonage.

The Georgia probation law passed in 1913, it is charged, also helps to foster peonage in that it allows the defendant to serve a sentence outside, "The confines of the chain gang, jail or other place of detention under the supervision of the court."

The court also has, in those counties which do not have a regularly salaried probation officer, agreed to appoint a volunteer probation officer to aid the probationer in abiding by the terms of his or her probation. Only about 12 of the 120 counties in Georgia have regularly appointed probation officers. The law, there, permitting the farming out of misdemeanor convicts under the probation act, permits of very grave abuses. The parole law enacted in 1908, is also said to foster peonage, in that a prisoner, even a life termer after serving a minimum time can be paroled to an individual for an indefinite period, which may be for years.

Five States Pass Laws Against Lynching.

Although both Republican and Democratic political leaders had pledged support against lynchings in their party platforms during the previous political campaigns, an anti-lynching bill introduced in the Legislature of Missouri, failed of passage. Lynching legislation was recommended to the Legislatures by the Governors of Arkansas and Texas.

A bill introduced in the Alabama Legislature, but not passed provided: "For the suppression of lynching and mob violence in the State of Alabama; to require the presiding judges of the Circuit Court to make written report to the attorney general of every such occurrence within their circuits, to make mandatory the bringing of impeachment proceedings against a sheriff from whose custody, or from the custody of whose deputies or jailers a prisoner is taken; to provide that the taking of a prisoner from such by a mob shall be prima facie evidence of wilfull neglect of duty and incompetency on the part of the sheriff."

An act, however, was passed which empowered the Governor to employ a special force of not over thirty men as State Law Enforcement Officers. These men are under the immediate direction of the Governor, and are vested with the authority of sheriffs. This statute specially provides that this force is to be used to suppress mobs and bring members of mobs to justice. An annual appropriation of Fifty Thousand Dollars is made to carry into effect the purpose of this statute.

The 1920 session of the Kentucky Legislature passed a law, "to suppress mob violence and prevent lynching; providing for the punishment of persons violating the provisions of the act and for the removal of officers permitting a prisoner to be injured or lynched by a mob.

The penalty for lynching shall be death or life imprisonment. The penalty for attempted lynching shall be confinement in the penitentiary for not less than two years nor more than twenty-one years." "The Governor of the State is given power to summarily remove from office any sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable or any other peace officer, or any jailer who permits a prisoner to be taken from his custody and unlawfully put to death."

The 1921 session of the North Carolina Legislature passed, "An Act To Promote Due Administration Of Justice And To Lessen The Crime Of Lynchings." It permits the judge holding the court in which an indictment is found to transfer trial of the case to another court without preliminary appearance of the defendant before him. Thus an accused Negro may not only be sent to a distant county for safe-keeping, but may remain there for unprejudiced trial without even a temporary return to the neighborhood of the alleged crime. It is believed that the law will greatly aid in securing justice for those accused of serious crimes.

The 1921 session of the West Virginia Legislature passed an anti-lynching bill, the provisions of which are as follows:

"Section 1. That any collection of individuals, five or more in number, assembled for the unlawful purpose of offering violence to the person or property of any one supposed to have been guilty of a violation of the law, or for the purpose of exercising correctional powers or regulative powers over any person or persons by violence, and without lawful authority, shall be regarded and designated as a 'mob,' or 'riotous assemblage.'"

"Section 2. That the term 'serious injury,' for the purpose of this act, shall include any injury to property, which shall cause damage to the owner thereof, or any injury to the person which shall temporarily or permanently disable the person injured from earning a livelihood."

"Section 3. The putting to death of any person within this State by a mob or riotous assemblage, shall be murder, and every person participating in such mob or riotous assemblage by which a person is put to death, shall be guilty of murder, and upon the conviction thereof shall be punished as provided by chapter one hundred and forty-four of Hogg's Code of West Virginia."

"Section 4. Any person or persons who shall compose a mob or riotous assemblage, with the intent to inflict damage or injury to the person or property of any individual charged with crime, or under the pretense of exercising correctional powers over such person or persons by violence, and without lawful authority, shall be subject to a fine of not less than One Hundred Dollars, nor more than One Thousand Dollars, and may be imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty days nor to exceed twelve months for each and every offense. Any person or persons who shall compose a mob or riotous assemblage, and who inflict damage or injury to the person or property of any individual charged with crime shall be guilty of a felony and shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years for each and every offense.'

"Section 5. Any person or persons, composing a mob or riotous assemblage under the provision of this act, who shall by violence inflict serious injury to the property or to the person of any other person upon the pretense of exercising correctional powers or regulative powers over such person or persons, and without authority of the law, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon the conviction thereof shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not exceeding five years; any person suffering serious injury to his property or to his person by a mob, shall have an action against the county or city in which such serious injury is inflicted for such damages as he may sustain, to an amount not to exceed Five Thousand Dollars."

"Section 6. The county in which such person charged with crime, and wherein such person has been taken from a State, county or municipal officer and lynched and put to death, shall be subject to a forfeiture of Five Thousand Dollars, which may be recovered by appropriate action therefor, in the name of the personal representative of the person put to death, for the use of his dependent family or estate. Such action may be brought in any State court. If such forfeiture is not paid upon recovery of judgment therefor, the court rendering such judgment shall have the power to enforce the payment thereof, and may compel the collection and levy of a tax therefor, or otherwise compel the payment thereof by mandamus or other appropriate process, and every officer of such county, and every other person who disobeys or fails to comply with any lawful order of the court, shall be liable to punishment according to law as for contempt and to any other penalties provided for by law."

"Section 7. That in the event any person so put to death, who shall have been taken from any State, county or municipal officer in one county, by a mob or riotous assemblage of five or more persons, and transported out of such county before such killing shall have taken place, and the fact that such killing occured out of said county from which such person may have been taken, shall not relieve the said county from which he was taken from such State, county or municipal officer from the liability provided by this act. And if the person shall be taken from such officer or officers, be transported from, and put to death and lynched in another county outside of the county wherein he was taken from such officer or officers, no county through which such person may have been transported, or in which such person has been lynched and put to death, shall be liable to damages hereunder, unless it is clearly shown that the officers or citizens in such county or counties participated in aided, abetted or encouraged such unlawful putting to death."

"Section 8. That every State, county or municipal officer having the duty or power of preservation or conservation of the peace at the time and place of any such putting to death, or the committing of serious injury to the person or to the property as prescribed in this act, who has reasonable cause to believe that the same is to be done, or is attempted to be done, and neglects or omits to prevent the same, and every such officer from whose custody such person may be taken by such mob or riotous assemblage, and put to death by the same, or whose property or person suffers serious injury at the hands of said mob or riotous assemsemblage, shall be guilty of negligence in the discharge of his official duty, and the county or city which shall have been sued and compelled to pay damages as herein provided, may recover same from such negligent officer by appropriate action upon his official bond."

"Section 9. That in any prosecution for any of the offenses defined herein, and any action for the forfeiture imposed as herein provided, every person who has participated in the lynching or in the putting to death of, or in the infliction of great bodily violence or serious injury to the person or property of any person, without authority of the law, and every person who entertains or has expressed any opinion in favor of lynching or in the justification or excuse thereof, or whose character, conduct or opinion have been or are such as, in the judgment of the court may tend to disqualify him for impartial and unprejudiced trial of the case, shall be disqualified to serve as a juror, and in any action or prosecution, any attorney, interested in the case, shall be entitled to make full inquiry thereof, and to produce evidence thereon; and every person who refuses to answer any inquiry touching his qualifications on the ground that he may thereby criminate himself shall be disqualified as aforesaid."

The 1921 session of the Minnesota Legislature passed; "AN ACT to prevent lynching; to fix indemnity for the dependents of any person lynched, and to provide for the removal from office of the sheriff and deputy sheriffs having charge of any person lynched."

"Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota."

"Section 1. Lynching is the killing of a human being, by the act or procurement of a mob."

"Section 2. Whenever any person shall be lynched, the county in which said lynching occured shall be liable in damages to the dependents of the person lynched in a sum not exceeding Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars to be recovered in a civil action."

"Section 3. Any sheriff, deputy sheriff or other officer having the custody of any person whom it is sought by a mob to take from his custody who shall fail, or neglect to use all lawful means to resist such taking, shall be deemed guilty of malfeasance, and shall be removed from office by the Governor in the manner and upon the same procedure as is provided by law for the removal from office of county officers guilty of malfeasance or nonfeasance in the performance of their official duties."

The Law Punishes Lynchers.

It would appear that there is more of a tendency to endeavor to use the machinery of the law in punishing lynchers. There were numerous instances during the year where judges instructed grand juries to bring indictments against lynchers.

In most cases, however, the recommendations of the judges were either not acted upon or no indictments were returned. In five instances, however, the members of mobs were brought to trial, and in three of the cases, convictions were secured. Four men were indicted for storming the Wayne County, North Carolina jail, and one of these was convicted and sentenced to four years in prison.

At Jonesboro (Tenn.) 14 men were indicted for storming the jail and 3 were convicted and sentenced to prison for three or more years. Fifteen men were indicted for attempting to take a prisoner from jail at Houston (Va.) One was convicted and fined $5,000 and one year in jail.

County Made To Pay Damages To Widow Of Negro Lynched.

The law of South Carolina relative to lynchings states: "Parties injured either in person or property as a result of any mob or riot have action against a county in damages." Under this provision, suit was brought in Laurens by the widow of Joseph Stewart, a Negro who was lynched in April, 1920. The court awarded a verdict of $2,000 damages.

The New York World, commenting editorially on this verdict says: "The damages fall considerably below the valuation at which a human life is held in some other States, but the point is that they are assessed against the county authorities for failure to protect a prisoner from the mob. If it is going to cost even $2,000 to lynch a Negro in South Carolina, it is conceivable that the price may prove a deterrent to lynchings."

"It may be indeed, that the precedent will materially affect lynch law in the South and elsewhere by impressing public officials with a keener sense of their responsibilities."

Federal Bill To Halt Lynching.

On January 26, 1922, the House of Representatives of the United States Congress passed the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill. The Bill is now before the Senate where there was opposition on the ground of its unconstitutionality. The Bill as passed by the House, among other things provides that:

"Any State or municipal officer charged with the duty of protecting the life of any person who may be put to death by a mob, and who fails to make all reasonable efforts to prevent the killing, or any such officer, who, being charged with the duty of apprehending or prosecuting any person participating in a mob murder, fails to make all reasonable efforts to pursue the matter to final judgment, shall be punished by imprisonment for not exceeding five years or by a fine of $5,000 or less, or by both fine and imprisonment. Any person who participates in a mob murder is declared to be guilty of a felony and subject to imprisonment for life, or for a term of not less than five years."

"It is provided further that 'any county in which a person is put to death by a mob or riotous assemblage shall forfeit $10,000, which sum may be recovered by an action therefor in the name of the United States against such county, for the use of the family, if any, of the person so put to death; if he had no family, then to his dependent parents, if any; otherwise for the use of the United States.'

Payment may be enforced by the United States District Court in which the judgment is obtained. If the person put to death shall have been transported by the mob from one county to another and there put to death, each county through which he was transported is made jointly liable with the others for the $10,000 forfeit."

Some Southern Papers Favor Some Oppose Federal Anti-Lynching Bills.

The anti-lynching bill proposed for enactment by Congress received both support and opposition from Southern newspapers. The Louisville, (Ky.) Courier-Journal makes the following statement: "A real blow is struck at lynching by the bill, now pending in Congress, which includes a provision under which a county in which a lynching occurs would pay to the victim's heirs a substantial sum of money. A law against crime is valuable only if there are means of enforcing it. Putting into a lynching law penalties for persons convicted of having participated in a mob murder does little good if nobody can be convicted because grand juries make no sincere effort to discover evidence upon which indictments could be returned.

Federal grand juries might not do better than the grand juries of States. But if the law should provide that when a lynching occurs the county treasury shall be drained of $10,000 for the benefit of the heirs of the victim, then the discovery of evidence and the return of an indictment would not be a part of the process of punishing the community for the crime of a mob."

The Birmingham, (Ala.) Age-Herald, in its issue of November 4, 1921, says that the proposed Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill is an invasion of the rights of states and counties to enforce their own laws. Continuing the discussion it stated: "Lynchings must be rooted out by beginning at the bottom and not the top. Courageous threats have time and again prevented such outrages and they can be stopped completely by strict enforcement of State Laws."

The Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette maintained that in introducing the anti-lynching bill, Dyer was simply playing politics and said that it was the duty of the South to stop lynchings. "The people of the South," the Gazette said, "must stop this atrocious crime in the South." "It gives the world a false impression of Southern citizenship. It adds to the shameless disrespect for law evident throughout the entire United States and unfortunately more evident in the South than in any other section. Lynching can be eradicated only by the creation of a public sentiment that will not tolerate it. Lynching is a cowardly crime. Not many of the members of a lynching mob would dare to enter on an adventure so lawless if they knew public sentiment would demand the running down and punishment of the lynchers. Quick and sure punishment for crime is the best way to bring respect for the law. Respect for the law is absolutely necessary to a campaign for the eradication of lynching."

In Spite Of Evidence To The Contrary It Is Still Maintained That Lynchings Are For The One Cause.

The Columbia, (S. C.) Record in discussing the attacks on the South for lynchings by both Northern and Southern papers said:

"Where the press, much of it anyway, misses the point, so far as we can see, is the fact that they do not touch on the causes of practically 100 per cent of the lynchings of Negroes in the South. They know, or they should have learned it long ago, that practically all of the Southern lynchings are due to charges of one nature—attacks on white women. Crimes of this sort are not so frequent in other parts of the world, but where they are, the anger of the people and the demand for swift vengeance is just as pronounced."

Eighty Per Cent Of Lynchings For Crimes Other Than Rape.

In the thirty-seven years, 1885-1921, there were 829 persons, 60 white and 769 Negroes put to death by mobs, under the charge of rape or attempted rape. This is one-fifth or 20.2 per cent of the total number of persons, 4,097, who were lynched during that period. On the other hand, 3,268, or four-fifths of those lynched were put to death for causes other than rape. This refutes the charge that the majority of lynchings are for the crime of rape.

Lynching Record For 1921.

According to the records compiled by the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, there were 72 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Of these 8 were in Northern States and 64 were in Southern States. In 1920 there were 56 such instances, 46 in Southern States and 10 in Northern States. In 66 of the cases, the prisoners were removed, or the guards were augmented, or other precautions taken. In 6 instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. Concerning the cases of lynching, there were 19 instances in which prisoners were taken from the jail and 16 instances in which, before reaching a jail, they were taken from officers of the law.

There were 64 persons lynched in 1921. Of these, 63 were in the South and one in the North. This is three more than the number, 61 for the year 1920. Of those lynched 59 were Negroes and 5 whites. Two of those put to death were Negro women. Nineteen, or less than one-third of those put to death were charged with rape or attempted rape. Four of the victims were burned to death. Three were put to death and then their bodies were burned. The charges against those burned to death were: murder, 2; rape and murder, 2.

The offenses charged against the whites were: murder, 4; rape, 1. One of the women put to death was charged with assisting man to escape who had killed an officer of the law. The other was charged with inciting racial troubles. The offenses charged against the Negro men were: murder, 11; attempted murder, 3; rape, 15; attempted rape, 3; killing men in altercation, 4; no special charge, 3; wounding men, 4; furnishing ammunition to man resisting arrest, 2; leaders in race clash, 2; charge not reported, 3; assisting man to escape who had killed officer of the law, 1; making improper remarks to woman, 1; threatening to kill another, 1; entering young woman's room, 1; insulting woman, 1; writing note to woman, 1; attacking a man and woman, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred, and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 2; Arkansas, 6; Florida, 6; Georgia, 11; Kentucky, 1; Louisiana 5; Mississippi, 14; Missouri, 1; North Carolina, 4; South Carolina, 5; Tennessee 1; Texas, 7; Virginia, 1.

Ku Klux Klan Attracts National Attention.

On December 14, 1915, Colonel William J. Simmons organized a new Ku Klux Klan along lines similar to the one established during the days of Reconstruction. Its headquarters are in Atlanta, (Ga.). From 1918 to 1921, there was such a rapid growth of the Klan that it attracted national attention largely for the reason that it was stated the Klan was opposed to Negroes, Catholics and Jews and stood especially for white supremacy. The leaders of the Klan on the other hand, denied that the Klan was organized to terrify Negroes and that it was not intended to be hostile to Catholics and Jews.

In a demand for a congressional investigation five specific charges were brought against the Klan. These were: "(1) the use of the United States mails to further its schemes for making money; (2) failure to meet the requirements of the income tax laws by pretending it is a simple fraternal order; (3) conspiring to induce or intimidate citizens and bar them from their rights under the Constitution; (4) interfering with the exercise of the American rights of religious freedom; (5) abrogating the promise of security from unreasonable search, seizure and abduction and mob violence."

Why Negroes Are Opposed To Ku Klux Klan

The grounds of the opposition of Negroes to the Ku Klux Klan are: that since it stands for white supremacy it naturally is opposed to Negroes. There is constantly before Negroes the old Ku Klux Klan under the guise of which, and in the name of which many atrocities were committed against Negroes. It is further charged that the disguises and secrecies practiced by the Klan offer to unscrupulous persons abundant opportunity to do many things under the name of the Klan; that is, any unscrupulous person or groups of persons could disguise themselves in Klan regalia and commit whatever deviltry or crime they might devise.

An article in the Atlanta Constitution of October 23, 1921, by Dr. M. Ashby Jones, gave the following statement concerning the claims of the Klan that only 100 per cent Americans could enter the order: "When we turn to the constitution of the Klan for its definition of a '100 per cent American,' we find that it excludes a large proportion of those who are granted citizenship by the constitution of the United States. No foreign-born citizen, no citizen who professes the Roman Catholic religion, no citizens of the colored races, and none of our Jewish citizens are considered to be a hundred per cent American. Here is certainly one most apparent source of opposition to this organization. There is no objection raised to the right of a society to exclude from its membership any one whom it pleases but here is an order which declares that its fundamental purpose is to develop a high type of Americanism and at the very outset gives a definition of Americanism, which is in direct conflict with the definition given by the Constitution of the United States."

In the three years, 1919-1921 some of the most serious race riots which have taken place in the history of the nation occurred. The riots which occurred during these years were as follows: in 1919, Charleston; South Carolina; Chicago, Illinois; Elaine, Arkansas; Knoxville Tenn., Longview, Texas; Omaha, Nebraska; and Washington, D. C.; in 1920, Duluth, Minnesota; Independence, Kansas; Ocoee, Florida; in 1921, Springfield, Ohio; Tulsa, Oklahoma.

The Near Riot At Birmingham.

On March 1, 1919, there was a near riot at Birmingham, Alabama, which if carried out, would have been one of the worst in the history of the nation. There were two chief causes of the trouble. On February 15, a policeman was killed by a supposedly Negro soldier, who also was killed. It was found later that this Negro was a professional freight car soldier who had dressed himself in a soldier's uniform. The general public however did not know this.

About two weeks before this incident, a street car conductor got into a dispute with a colored woman whom a race and threatened to slap her. A Negro man interfered, killed the conductor, escaped and was not apprehended. These two occurrences, and the rough methods of the police in combing the Negro districts in efforts to find the man, were the main causes of the antagonism which arose on the part of the whites and Negroes. A report spread among the white that Negroes would attack the whites on the night of March 1. A similar report among Negroes was, that whites would attack them on this night. Both sides armed themselves. Police records of sales of firearms showed that on that day more than $10,000 worth of firearms and ammunition were purchased. Pawn shops sales were: 204 revolvers, 40 rifles and over 1,000 rounds of ammunition. Hardware stores' sales were: 75 revolvers. Sales of three dealers in sporting goods were: 70 rifles, many revolvers, and an aggregate of $6,000 worth of ammunition.

The Riots At Duluth, Ocoee, Independence And Springfield.

On June 15, 1920, there was a riot at Duluth, Minnesota. A mob estimated at 5,000 persons took possession of police headquarters and seized six Negroes held in connection with an alleged criminal attack on a young white girl. Four lines of hose in the hands of firemen called out to quell the mob, were taken away from them and turned upon the police. Stones and sticks were used to break the windows of the jail. Three of the Negroes were lynched.

On election day, November 3, 1920, there was a riot at Ocoee, Fla. The trouble grew out of a refusal of election officials to permit a Negro to vote on the ground that he had not paid his poll tax. Another report was that it was a concerted attempt to prevent Negroes from voting. In the fight which ensued, two white men were killed and several others were wounded. One Negro was lynched. The mob then surrounded the Negro settlement and destroyed it by fire. Twenty dwellings, two churches, a school house and a lodge hall were burned. A number of Negroes perished in the flames. According to newspaper reports, the number was five. According to investigations made by a representative of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the number was estimated to be between 32 and 35. Among these was a number of women and children.

On December 10, 1920, there was a riot at Independence, Kansas. The reported casualties were 1 white and 1 Negro killed and 3 whites wounded. The trouble grew out of the insistence of whites to search the homes of Negroes for a Negro whom it was alleged had murdered and robbed a grocery keeper.

At Springfield, Ohio, March 11-12, 1921, there was a race riot. The casualties were: a policeman and a Negro wounded. The trouble was an outgrowth of a reported assault some days earlier by an unknown Negro on an eleven year old white girl. Rumors that he had been arrested caused crowds to assemble at the jail on three successive nights. They dispersed when it was proven that no Negro had been arrested. A riot was precipitated when police attempted to disperse a crowd of Negroes. Three companies of National Guard troops were called out, and the city was practically placed under martial law.

The Riots At Charleston, Longview, Omaha And Knoxville.

On May 10, 1919, there was a serious riot at Charleston, South Carolina, between Negroes and sailors from the Naval Training Station, assisted by some white civilians. A Negro was accused of shooting a sailor. The casualties, according to reports were: 2 Negroes killed and some 20 Negroes and 8 sailors wounded.

At Longview, Texas, on July 11, 1919, there was a race riot. Reported casualties were: 4 white men wounded. The principal residences of the Negroes were burned. The reported cause of the riot was efforts by the whites to punish a Negro school teacher who was accused of the publication in a Negro newspaper, of statements derogatory to a young white woman of the county, about whom a Negro had been lynched some weeks before.

On September 28, 1919, there was a most serious riot at Omaha, Nebraska. A Negro was lynched and his body burned. The Mayor of the city, who attempted to prevent the lynching, was dragged by a rope around his neck for a half block. The end of the rope was placed over a trolley pole and twice the Mayor's body was drawn from the ground before he was rescued. The county court house was burned. One member of the mob was killed and some 50 or more persons were reported wounded. The cause of the riot was an alleged rape which later developments indicated, had not occurred.

On August 30-31, 1919, there occured at Knoxville, Tennessee, one of the most serious riots of the year. It began with the storming of the jail to get a Negro prisoner accused of murdering a white woman. The prisoner had previously been removed to Chattanooga, Tennessee, for safekeeping. A large quantity of whiskey, stored in the basement of the jail, was confiscated by the mob. The jail was wrecked, and all of the white prisoners, sixteen in number, were released. The rioting spread to the Negro section of the town. The casualties were: 1 Negro and an officer of the National Guardsmen killed, and 7 whites and 6 Negroes seriously wounded.

The Washington Riot.

From July 19-23, 1919, one of the most serious riots in the history of the nation occurred in the capital of the country. The trouble grew out of reports of alleged attacks by Negroes on white women. On July 19, soldiers, sailors and marines on leave in the city, invaded the Negro section of southwest Washington. In the rioting which followed a policeman was shot and 2 Negroes were severely beaten. The next day the rioting was renewed on a larger scale and continued until the 23rd. The reported casualties were: killed, 3 Negroes, 4 whites; wounded, some 30 or more persons.

Incidents Leading Up To Washington Riot.

The charge was made that the newspapers were to a large extent responsible for the riot. An examination of what was published during the two weeks immediately preceding the riot appeared to substantiate this charge as is indicated by the following headlines, as printed in Washington papers:

JULY 8—WASHINGTON STAR

"Woods Scoured in Hunt for Negro

"Has Scar on Left Hand."

JULY 10—WASHINGTON TIMES

JULY 13—WASHINGTON HERALD

JULY 17—WASHINGTON TIMES

"Assailant is

was Made in Washington by a Negro Last Night."

The papers on the morning of July 19 reported that, "The sixth attack by Negroes on white women during the last four weeks on the streets of the nation's capital was reported today. In this case, the assailants were frightened away, but in four other cases the victims were robbed or injured. Rewards totaling more than $2,000 raised by private subscription, are standing for the arrest of the culprits. One Negro held by the police has been identified by two women as their assailant, but the police say the evidence is only circumstantial. Citizen searching parties have been out, and at one time thought they had a man located in the most fashionable section of the city close by the homes of many nationally known men." On the night of the 19th, the riot began.

Unfounded Tales Negro Crime Deplored.

The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, on July 25th wrote: "The newspaper reports of what is happening in Washington have most frequently indicated that the causes of the outbreaks were attacks by colored soldiers on white women. Though this is a serious and sinister charge to repeat day after day in the dispatches that go to the entire nation, the fact is that there have been no supporting details, no particulars of knowledge or information such as any court of law or any intelligent person requires before arriving at an opinion or a conviction."

"In one instance a dispatch contained the following three sentences: 'Even while the rioting was at its height early today reports of another attack upon a white woman came. Frightened away once, her assailant hid and seized her as she left her house. She escaped only when all but stripped of her clothing.'"

"Here we have the gravest sort of a charge. No names are given, no locations, no witnesses—a wild inflammatory tale sent out on the swift wings of rumor and gabble and tattle for the consumption of a nation of people struggling to set an example to the rest of the world on the value of self-control during a great world crisis."—(By Carl Sandburg, Chicago, (Illinois) News, July 25, 1919.)

The Chicago Riot.

From July 27, to August 4, 1919 there was a race riot in Chicago, Illinois. The riot started at a Lake Front Bathing Beach and was precipitated by white bathers throwing stones at a Negro boy who as a result was knocked from an improvised raft into the water and drowned. The Chicago Commission on Race Relations reports the following casualties resulting from the five days of rioting:

Killed, 38; whites, 16; Negroes, 22. The number wounded was about 537; whites, 178; Negroes, 342; race uncertain, 17. The number of persons arrested and accused of various criminal activities during the riot was, 229, of whom 154 were Negroes and 75 were whites. The number of persons indicted for general criminal participation in the riot, but not involving murder was: 128, of whom 81 were Negroes and 47 were whites. There were 21 persons indicted for murder. Of this number 5 were convicted; 2 whites and 3 Negroes. The sentences imposed were: whites, 1 to State Reformatory for an indefinite time, and 1 to penitentiary for life; Negroes, 1 to penitentiary for 20 years, and 2 to penitentiary for life.

Incidents Leading Up To The Chicago Riot.

There were a series of events which led up to and foreshadowed the Chicago riot. On April 22, there were according to press reports, a series of fights on the South-Side between whites and Negroes.

Associated press reports characterized this clash as a race riot, and said: "Fifty policemen were posted in the district after the outbreaks had been quelled. Racial feeling has been gaining in intensity, the police say since the encroachment of Negroes from what is known as the South-Side "black belt" into a district further southward." The Chicago Defender in its issue of that week carried as a headline to its report of the affair: "WHITE POLICEMEN CAUSE SOUTH-SIDE RIOT." "Officers Make no Effort to Perform their Sworn Duty."

Night Battle Planned.

On the night of June 23, there was another clash, a report concerning which said: "A race war, threatening for weeks, assumed proportions on Chicago's South-Side last night, when 200 police were rushed to the Washington Park district. One colored man is dead; another was said to be dying last night. Both were victims of a small army of white men who early yesterday set out with the avowed intention of 'cleaning out the blacks.' "

Information was generally circulated among both whites and colored that a big fight was to be waged sometime during the night in Washington Park. Police of the South Park board, 200 strong, were rushed to the park and kept an all-night vigil. Several hundred reserves were ordered on duty at the Englewood, Fiftieth Street, New City and Stock Yards stations. A special police guard was established at Kenney's undertaking establishment, 5438 S. Halsted St., where the body of the slain Negro was held. Yesterday's developments convinced police, city officials and others who have studied the racial problem that Chicago must deal with one of the most difficult situations in its history."

On July 1, a press dispatch from Chicago reported that: "One Negro is dead and five whites and 1 Negro are injured, following a race riot here last night. Charles W. Jackson, Negro, who, according to the police, did the shooting plunged down an embankment. His neck was broken while attempting to escape a crowd of white men. His brother was severely beaten. Trouble started when two girls complained that the brothers had insulted them."

Under title, "The Urgent Race Question," the Chicago Tribune, in an editorial on July 23, said: "Disturbances in Washington between the white and colored residents must remind us here in Chicago, where the need for adjustment of relations is so great that we are headed for trouble on a large scale if some conciliatory process is not undertaken." The ill tempered have, or at least employed, only one means of expression, and that is violence. Continuance of this sort of expression can only result in recruiting to the aid of each violent faction all those either similarly disposed or by racial instinct inspired to take part."

The Elaine Riot.

From October 1-3, 1919, there was a race riot in the vicinity of Elaine, Phillips County, Arkansas. The immediate cause of the riot was that on the night of September, 30, at a Negro church near Elaine, one officer of the law was killed and another seriously wounded.

According to the reports given out by the whites, these two officers, while passing the church on their way to arrest a bootlegger who lived in the vicinity, were fired upon by Negroes assembled in the church. According to the reports of the Negroes as to what took place, it was stated that while assembled in the church, they were first fired upon by the whites; that the fire was returned, and resulted in the killing of one white man and the wounding of another. The real cause of the riot appears to have grown out of the efforts of Negro tenants to organize for the purpose of securing more just settlements and equitable prices from the white planters for cotton.

Reports Concerning What Took Place Conflicting.

There were conflicting reports as to what took place. Those given out by the whites stated that: "On the morning of October 1, a posse from Helena was sent to Elaine. This posse was met by a force of armed Negroes who fired upon the posse. Additional posses were organized at other centers of population in the county and rushed to Elaine. United States Troops were sent from Camp Pike at Little Rock, to the scene of the trouble.

The reports of the Negroes were: That on October 1, a posse of whites began to arrest in an indiscriminate manner both Negro men and women; that in the course of making the arrests no explanations were given, and that their homes were forcibly invaded without search warrants, and both men and women were subjected to abuse and personal violence; that they made efforts to defend themselves against what they considered to be violent and unlawful intrusion into their homes; that when more posses came, the Negroes took their families and went into the canebrakes. The fighting lasted until October 3.

The number killed was variously reported to have been from 15 to 50 Negroes and from 5 to 10 whites. The official reports gave 5 whites and 18 Negroes. Several hundred Negroes, men and women were arrested. Later all but about 200 were released. During the latter part of October, and the first part of November 1919, something over 100 of these were indicted and brought to trial. Twelve were found guilty of first degree murder and sentenced to be electrocuted; 54 were sentenced to prison term.

There was a strong feeling in Arkansas and throughout the country that the Negroes arrested and convicted in connection with the Elaine riot had been unjustly dealt with. Money was raised for their defense, able lawyers were employed, and their cases were carried through the courts of Arkansas and to the United States Supreme Court. Many of those sent to prison were later through legal procedure, released and the cases of those sentenced to death are still pending in the State courts and the United States Supreme Court.

The Tulsa Riot.

From May 31 to June 1, 1921, what was in many respects the most serious race riot in the history of the country took place at Tulsa, Oklahoma. The Negroes fought back with even a more dogged determination than they did during the Chicago and Washington riots.

The reports as to the number of persons killed varied from 30 to 200. The official reports gave 10 whites and 21 Negroes killed, and some 500 or more wounded. The Negro section of the city, an area of 44 blocks, was burned and a property loss of over a million and a half dollars was sustained. Some 5,000 persons were rendered homeless.

Immediate Causes Tulsa Riot.

Numerous causes of the riot were given. Among these were: bad political conditions, Negro agitators, arrogance and impudence of the Negroes, the work of the Ku Klux Klan, the desire of the white people to gain control of the valuable property which the Negroes of the city owned. When all the facts, however, are considered, it would appear that the riot was not premeditated; it was probably not the result of bad political conditions nor envy of the whites because of the prosperity of the Negroes; neither does it appear that alleged propaganda from the outside had anything to do with it.

The immediate causes leading up to the riot were: first, a misleading report published in a Tulsa paper that a Negro had been arrested for attempting to rape a white woman. The actual charge against the Negro was assault and battery; that is, striking another person. Second, the spreading of the rumor that the Negro would be lynched, and the resulting efforts on the part of some of the Negroes to prevent, by force, a lynching. The record of Tulsa as to lynchings gave good grounds for the supposition that unless the Negroes took action, the accused would be put to death by a mob.

In August, 1920, less than a year previous, a white man charged with killing a taxi cab driver had been taken, (without special effort on the part of officials to hinder) from the same jail in which the Negro was confined and put to death. The third cause of the riot was the failure of the officials both the police and the sheriff to act with firmness and quick decision, and as a result allowing the situation to get beyond their control.

New Attitude Negroes In Race Riots They Are Fighting Back.

Recent race riots have been characterized by a new attitude on the part of Negroes. When attacked they have fought back. This was true in the riots at Washington, Chicago, Elaine and Tulsa. What the Negroes did to defend themselves in the Washington riot was thus described by the correspondent of a Negro paper.—The New York Age.

"The colored people of the District of Columbia have shown what a people can do when assailed on all hands by mob fury and deserted by the police power of the District and by the Federal Government, both of which to all intents and purposes threw their organized influence against the colored people, the victims of the fury of the mob."

"Disorganized as they were, and without leadership, when the rioting was started Saturday night and continuing through Sunday and Sunday night, without any effective interference on the part of the police, colored people were prepared on Monday to defend themselves, after a fashion, and began to do so with a grim determination to exact a life for a life. They entered into the strife with more determination than the whites who started it, and they stuck to the job all the week like heroes of many battles."

White Press On Attitude and Actions Negroes During Washington Riot.

The following shows that there was both condemnation and praise of the action of the Negroes in defending themselves from attacks during riots.

"Negroes, no matter what the provocation, should leave their defense to constituted authority."—Minneapolis Tribune.

"It was deplorable that whites should have attempted to take the law into their own hands. It was no less deplorable that the Negroes should have retaliated."—Syracuse Post Standard.

"The Negroes who have gone about the city in motor cars shooting wildly at others are no more to be condemned than the white men who have raged through the streets afoot and have attacked Negroes without warrant."—Washington Star.

"The Negroes left unprotected or at least, inadequately protected by the officers of the law, are fighting back."—Albany Journal.

"There can be no settlement of any issue of the race question until the Negro, like every other man in the country, shall have his day in court. Deplorable in every respect, most of the retaliatory violence on the part of Washington blacks was nothing more than the response of primitive man to the suppression of that right."—New York World.

Blame for Riots Placed by Negroes On Whites.

The immediate blame for the riots according to the Negroes was the aggression of the whites. In Washington, the riot started with attacks of whites upon Negroes. In Chicago the stoning of a Negro boy and his resulting death by drowning precipitated the trouble. It was also charged that in Washington, the police were unable to control the situation. The National Government was blamed for not using adequate military and naval forces that were in and around the city to crush the riot in its incipiency.

At a meeting of Negroes toward the end of the riot, it was charged that the outbreak was a result of a carefully planned conspiracy to clean up the city. It was also charged that the presence of a large Southern element in the city which objected to the presence of Negroes on street cars and in other places, helped to aggravate the situation.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People issued a statement that said: "For a number of years there has been a well-directed propaganda issuing principally from the South, which has had as its purpose placing the brand of rapist on the Negro race." "This propaganda has been partly successful in establishing in the public mind the idea that there is the direct relation of cause and effect between rape and mob violence against the Negro."

Some Southern Papers Place Blame On North For The Riot.

The blame for the riots in Washington and Chicago was placed by some Southern papers on the North. The following are examples:

"The most depressing aspect of the race question is the intolerance that is incessantly cropping out against the Negroes in the communities that have set themselves up as their friends."—Columbia (S. C.) State.

"The supposed friends of the black man became his worst enemies, and the war of races was the inevitable result."—Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal.

"Northern people have maintained a hypocritical attitude in respect to Negroes, and outbreaks like that at Chicago tears off the mask."— Nashville (Tenn.) Banner.

Some Northern Papers Place Blame On Whites

Editorial comments by a number of Northern papers placed the blame for the riots on the whites. Among these papers were: "The Hartford (Conn.) Post;" "The Hartford (Conn.) Courant;" "The Indianapolis (Ind.) News;" "The Newark (N. J.) News;" "The New York (N. Y.) Mail;" "The New York (N. Y.) Post;" "The Pittsburgh (Pa.) Leader;" and "The Troy (N. Y.) Times."

"Stripped of all verbiage the situation in Chicago represents an attack by an overwhelming majority upon a suppressed and comparatively powerless minority."— New York (N. Y.) Mail.

"A half-century of neglect, mistreatment, lynch law and unlawful discrimination has brought its accumulated animosities to a head. For this the white races must accept the blame."— Newark (N. J.) News.

"And now that the war has brought the North a quota of Negro laborers, large enough to compete in some instances with whites, now that Negroes, because of increased housing needs, have set foot in precincts of Chicago hitherto sacred to the white race, the people of the North have shown themselves utterly unjust and impatient, intolerant to a degree the Southerners would not defend in themselves."— New York (N. Y.) Globe.

"The Negro cannot be held doubly responsible for his own destroyed confidence in the barbarous defiance of law by the white man which carried him slowly to the wreck. The white man is in control of every means of authority. He must shoulder whatever blame there is for the race rioting."—Pittsburgh (Pa.) Leader.

Political Conditions Blamed For Chicago Riot.

One of the most frequent charges concerning the Chicago riot was that it was the result of the very bad political conditions which obtained in that city. It was charged that race prejudice alone was not responsible for the riot. It was pointed out that there was police graft, oppression, favoritism of the predatory rich and of the predatory poor; likewise there was protection by politicians of both vice and crime. In this same connection the blame for the failure to stop the riots in their incipiency was placed on the police. The riot in Chicago was started by the refusal of a policeman to arrest a man for the almost deliberate murder of a Negro boy. It was charged by the Negroes of Washington, that during the riot there, the police were mainly active in arresting black men.

Blame For Riots Placed By Whites On Negroes.

The blame for both the Chicago and Washington riots was placed by some on the Negroes. It was charged that in Washington the Negroes did not cooperate in running down the criminals of the race; that they made themselves obnoxious, obtrusive and disagreeable to white people. Negro bootleggers having grown fabulously rich as a result of prohibition, it was further charged, flaunted their riches in the face of white people and made advances to white women.

Another reason advanced was that the white blood in the Negroes was trying to seek its proper level. It was also charged that the recognition accorded the Negroes during the World War had made them uppish and that the high wages which so many of them received had turned their heads.

Bolsheviki Propaganda Among Negroes Blamed For Riots.

There was a wide spread assertion that one cause of the outbreak of race riots was the Bolsheviki propaganda which had been circulated among Negroes, particularly by the Industrial Workers of the World or the LEFT WING SOCIALIST MOVEMENT.

The United States Department of Justice and the Lusk Committee, created by the New York Legislature, made special investigations of this charge. Although propaganda was circulated to some extent, by the I. W. W. and other agencies, it did not appear that this was so widely done as was rumored. It also further appeared on the other hand that Negroes were not influenced to any extent by this propaganda. The assumption on which the investigations were based was that the Negroes were the aggressors and started the riots. As a matter of fact, however, they were not the aggressors, but acted throughout the riots on the defensive.

Causes of Riots Some Explanations Given As.

The principal causes of the Washington riot were said to be as follows: The special featuring by the Washington papers of the alleged attacks by Negroes on white women; the police in their zeal for searching for bootleggers relaxed their efforts to maintain law and order; the whites exasperated by the reported failures of the police to cope with the situation undertook to handle it in their own way; the presence in the city of a large Southern element which attempted to apply Southern methods to the situation; police inefficiency which failed to handle the riot situation and to deal at the beginning, with individual cases of rioting. An intense racial animosity which had been developing for some time reached its climax. Race feeling was intensified and hoodlums of both races roamed about making life unsafe. There developed a blind race prejudice demanding that Negroes needed to be taught their places.

The chief causes alleged for the Chicago riot were: that in addition to deep seated, congenital prejudices, there were the rotten political situation in the city; the neglect of the police and their encouragement in some instances of mobs; failure of the police to restrain the lawless element of both races; the migration in large numbers of Negroes into the community; the consequent intensified housing situation; the conflicting interests as they related to the extension of neighborhood life, especially the enlargement of the districts where Negroes lived; the disposition of the Negroes not to recede from what they considered a just position. The whites on the other hand seemed determined not to give way before a penetration of Negroes into neighborhoods heretofore inhabited only by whites.

The Public Mind And Race Riots.

How the public mind views the Negro probably has had a great deal to do with race riots. The mind of the general public is being constantly impressed with the fact that the Negro should be considered as an inferior and as a joke. In this connection, a writer in the New York Globe, in a series of articles discussing race riots pointed out that:

"All arrested Negroes are 'burly.' Beautiful sentimental stories are written when an ex-slave or dear old Mammy dies, but their sons who have sometimes become really important figures are ignored, even when they achieve important business success or perform some exceptional service. A Negro family moving into a new community or section of the city is referred to as an 'invasion.' Many publications use the small 'n' in spelling Negro, even in one case after using capital letters before the words Chinese, Lithuanian, Czech, and Jew in the same sentence."

"By such means the public mind is constantly impressed that the Negro is inferior and a joke. If the commendable features of Negro life were fairly presented it would serve to develop a more evenly balanced mental attitude toward the subject, and as a consequence, a more liberal public view of the subject."

Race Riots Solutions For Proposed.

Immediately following the Washington riot, a number of suggestions were made for checking and preventing riots. It was proposed that: the government apply force; that rioters be sternly dealt with; that there be recognition of the Negroes' grievances; and that there be sympathetic efforts to improve their conditions. Residential segregation was also proposed as a solution.

After the Chicago riot there were numerous suggestions and solutions proposed for checking and preventing riots. Among these were: that there be an impartial enforcement of existing laws; an improvement of living conditions; a change in the attitude of whites toward Negroes. It was also proposed as a solution that both races come to a common understanding. Segregation was also proposed as a solution; that is, the establishing of residential racial zones for whites and Negroes. This appears to have had the backing of the Kenwood Property Owners Association. A segregation resolution was introduced in the City Council by Alderman Terence F. Moran.

National Association For The Advancement Of Colored People Adopts Program For Advancing Negroes' Interest.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, at its 1921 annual meeting, held in Detroit: (1) directed the attention of the nation to the Tulsa riot and (2) pledged itself to work to secure clemency for the convicted soldiers now in prison at Leavenworth; "(3) commended the Department of Justice for its activity in the investigation and prosecution of peonage cases in the South. (4) endorsed the bill introduced by Representative Tinkham of Massachusetts asking for an investigation of disfranchisement; (5) asked the President of the United States to call a conference to discuss world disarmament; (6) recommended the encouragement of colored women to exercise their right to vote; (7) urged the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives now in charge of the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill to expedite this bill and report it favorably."

The Association's program for the year is to work for:

"1. The right to vote under the same conditions as other persons vote."

"2. A federal law against lynching and mob violence."

"3. Justice for the convicted peons in Arkansas."

"4. Equitable treatment for Negro soldiers and sailors."

"5. Abolition of the 'Jim-Crow' cars in inter-state traffic."

"6. Free public schools for all children."

"7. The appointment of an Inter-Racial Commission of high class, fair-minded men and women representing both races, to make a scientific survey of race relations."

"8. The withdrawal of our military forces from Haiti and carefully planned aid for Haiti and Liberia."

"9. The weight of our influence to secure Justice for the natives of Africa, particularly in the former German colonies."

"10. A world-wide attempt to promote Peace through inter-racial understanding and equality, and through a wider recognition of the basic identity of race and labor problems."

President Harding Recommends Commission On Race Problem.

In his message to Congress on April 12, 1921, President Harding said:

"Somewhat related to the foregoing human problems is the race question. Congress ought to wipe the stain of barbaric lynching from the banners of a free and orderly, representative democracy. We face the fact that many millions of people of African descent are numbered among our population, and that in a number of states they constitute a very large proportion of the total population. It is unnecessary to recount the difficulties incident to his condition, nor to emphasize the fact that it is a condition which cannot be removed.

There has been a suggestion, however, that some of its difficulties might be ameliorated by a human and enlightened consideration of it, a study of its many aspects, and an effort to formulate, if not a policy, at least a national attitude of mind calculated to bring about the most satisfactory possible adjustment of relations between the races, and of each race to the national life. One proposal is the creation of a commission embracing representatives of both races to study and report on the entire subject. The proposal has real merit. I am convinced that a mutual tolerance, understanding, charity, recognition of the inter-dependence of the races, and the maintenance of the rights of citizenship, lies the road to righteous adjustment."

United States' Occupation Haiti And Santo Domingo Condemned.

In 1916, United States Marines were landed in Santo Domingo and occupation by the United States Government begun. In 1916 and 1917 the same process was employed in Haiti and since that time these two Republics have been more or less under the direct control of a foreign nation. There has been much objection to this, both in the United States and in Haiti and Santo Domingo. For a time there were many articles published and circulated throughout the United States showing the benefits that had come as a result of the United States taking over the control of these two Republics. The situation in Haiti was called to the attention of the general public in a large way by a personal investigation made by James W. Johnson, then Field Secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

After a visit to the island he reported that many crimes and atrocities were being committed by the American Marines, and that the people of the United States did not know the real facts in the case. As a result of this report and the consequent general discussion, there was a demand for a congressional investigation. In the meanwhile the Navy Department made an investigation which reported that the statements made by Johnson and others relative to the acts of the Marines in Haiti and Santo Domingo were exaggerated. In the meantime three deputations, one from Santo Domingo and two from Haiti came to the United States asking that the occupation be discontinued. The President of Santo Domingo, Dr. Francisco Henriquezy Carvajal, came to the United States in the early part of 1921 to present the case of his country before the government at Washington. He stated that the occupation of Santo Domingo was neither justified by treatment nor the fundamental principles of international law and constituted a complete violation of the Monroe Doctrine under the rights and protection it is supposed to give to all Latin American countries.

In the autumn of 1920, a Committee from Haiti, headed by Chief Justice Bonamy of the Haitian Courts and M. Praesil, noted for his knowledge concerning international law, came to Washington to protest against the American Occupation.

In February, 1921, H. Paulens Sannon, former Haitian Minister to the United States and Stenio Vincent, a former chairman of the Haitian Senate, came as a committee representing the Haitian people through the patriotic union of Port-au-Prince, to tell the American people just what the Marine Corps had done in Haiti.

They charged that the inquiry conducted by the United States Navy was more or less of a comedy.

On June 14, 1921, a proclamation was issued formally announcing that the United States would withdraw its military government from the Dominican Republic. The Occupation, however, would continue until such time as, "until a duly elected president of the Republic shall have taken office and until a convention of evacuation shall have been signed by the president and confirmed by the Dominican Congress."

Congress finally in 1921 appointed a Congressional Committee to investigate conditions in Haiti and Santo Domingo. This Committee in its report submitted to Congress in 1922, recommended that with certain modifications the United States continue its Occupation in Haiti and Santo Domingo.

Mr. Johnson in his report pointed out that the Haitian like the American Negro suffers because of the many unfavorable reports which are circulated concerning his ignorance and low status of culture. He points out, however, that—

"To know Haitian life one must have the privilege of being received as a guest in the houses of the latter, and they live in beautiful houses. The majority have been educated in France; they are cultured, brilliant conversationally, and thoroughly enjoy their social life. The women dress well. Many are beautiful and all vivacious and chic. Cultivated people from any part of the world would feel at home in the best Haitian society. If our guest were to enter the Cercle Bellevue, the leading club of Port-au-Prince, he would find the courteous, friendly atmosphere of a men's club; he would hear varying shades of opinion on public questions, and could scarcely fail to be impressed by the thorough knowledge of world affairs possessed by the intelligent Haitian. Nor would his encounters be only with people who have culture and savoir vivre; he would meet the Haitian intellectuals, poets, essayists, novelists, historians, critics. Take for example such a writer as Fernand Hibbert. An English authority says of him, 'His essays are worthy of the pen of Anatole France or Pierre Loti.' And there is Georges Sylvaine, poet and essayist, conferencier at the Sorbonne where his address was received with acclaim, author of books crowned by the French Academy, and an Officer of the Legion d'Honneur. Hibbert and Sylvaine are only two among a dozen or more contemporary Haitian men of letters whose work may be measured by world standards. Two names that stand out preeminently in Haitian literature are Oswald Durand, the national poet, who died a few years ago, and Damocles Vieux. These people, educated, cultured, and intellectual, are not accidental and sporadic offshoots of the Haitian people; they are the Haitian people and they are a demonstration of its inherent potentialities."

"However, Port-au-Prince is not all Haiti. Other cities are smaller replicas, and fully as interesting are the people of the country districts. Perhaps the deepest impression on the observant visitor is made by the country women. Magnificent as they file along the country roads by scores and by hundreds on their way to the town markets, with white or colored turbaned heads, gold-looped-ringed ears, they stride alone straight and lithe, almost haughtily, carrying themselves like so many Queens of Sheba.

"The Haitian country people are kindhearted, hospitable and polite, seldom stupid but rather quick-witted and imaginative. Fond of music, with a profound sense of beauty and harmony, they live simply but wholesomely. Their cabins rarely consist of only one room, the humblest having two or three, with a little shed front and back, a front and rear entrance, and plenty of windows. An asthetic touch is never lacking—a flowering hedge or an arbor with trained vines bearing gorgeous colored blossoms. There is no comparison between the neat plastered wall, thatched-roof cabin of the Haitian peasant and the traditional log hut of the South, or the shanty of the more wretched American suburbs. The most notable feature about the Haitian cabin is its invariable cleanliness."

Language Handicap The Haitian Masses.

In the pamphlet, "Self-Determining Haiti," it is pointed out that "Haiti's great handicap has been not that her masses are degraded or lazy or immoral. It is that they are ignorant, due not so much to mental limitations as to enforced illiteracy. There is a specific reason for this. Somehow the French language, in the French-American colonial settlements containing a Negro population, divided itself into two branches, French and Creole. This is true of Louisiana, Martinique, Gaudeloupe, and also of Haiti. Creole is an Africanized French and must not be thought of as a mere dialect.

The French-speaking person cannot understand Creole, excepting a few words unless he learns it. Creole is a distinct tongue, a graphic and very expressive language. Many of its constructions follow closely the African idioms. For example, in forming the superlative of greatness, one says in Creole, 'he is great among great men,' and a merchant woman, following the native idiom, will say 'you do not wish anything beautiful if you do not buy this.' The upper Haitian class, approximately 500,000, speak and know French, while the masses, probably more than 2,000,000 speak only Creole. Haitian Creole is grammatically constructed, but has not to any general extent been reduced to writing, therefore these masses have no means of receiving or communicating thought through the written word. They have no books to read. They can not read the newspapers. The children of the masses study French for a few years in school, but it never becomes their everyday language. In order to abolish Haitian illiteracy, Creole must be made a printed as well as a spoken language. The failure to undertake this problem is the worst indictment against the Haitian Government."

"This matter of language proves a handicap to Haiti in another manner. It isolates her from her sister republics. All of the Latin-American republics except Brazil speak Spanish and enjoy an intercourse with the outside world denied Haiti. Dramatic and musical companies from Spain, from Mexico and from the Argentine annually tour all of the Spanish-speaking republics. Haiti is deprived of all such instruction and entertainment from the outside world because it is not profitable for French companies to visit the three or four French-speaking islands in the Western Hemisphere."

Reported Discriminations Against Negro Labor In The Canal Zone.

From time to time complaint comes from the Canal Zone that there is discrimination in wages paid to white and Negro labor by the United States Government in the Canal Zone. On the Canal Zone, an employee is either, "A Gold Employee," making more than $75.00 per month, or "A Silver Employee," making less than $75.00 per month. The general rule is that no one not an American citizen will be offered work as a "Gold Employee." The "Silver Employees" are in the majority since the Canal was built and is being kept up mainly by West Indian Negroes.

The Race Problem In The British Possessions West Indies.

The World War had a marked effect upon the Negroes of the British possessions of the West Indies who are in the main divided into two classes, black and colored (mulattoes.) One effect was a tendency to break down the caste barrier which had hitherto rather sharply separated the blacks from the colored people.

The three classes in the British West Indies are, the blacks, the colored and the whites. There is also a growing demand for educational and economic improvements. The demand for educational improvements is that education be made to adapt itself more to the needs of the people; that is, to become more vocational. There is also a demand for higher wages. At present those desiring economic development are compelled to migrate, either to the United States or to the Canal Zone. By economic development here is meant mainly a larger wage and an opportunity to work at diversified occupations.

It was suggested that one way to help wipe out the debt, which the British Empire owed the United States for funds advanced during the World War, would be to sell the British West Indies to the United States. There was general opposition to this among the black people on the ground that they had more privileges under the English rule and less discrimination than they would have under the American rule.

Conditions In The Virgin Islands And Danish West Indies Reported To Be Bad.

In 1917, the United States bought from Denmark for twenty-five million dollars, the Danish West Indies and changed the name to the Virgin Islands. The nation forgot that it had purchased the Islands until 1920, when a joint commission from the Senate and the House was sent to make an investigation there. According to this report the monetary systems of the Islands were antiquated and the Danish laws, dating back three centuries were inapplicable to our form of government. It is further reported that there was a great need for health and sanitary improvement. The reports from the colored people of the island were that under United States rule much of the discriminations and abuses practiced upon the blacks on the mainland were being brought to the Islands.

Germany Continues Propaganda Against France's Use Of Black Soldiers.

For a number of years Germany has been carrying on a propaganda against France using black troops. As far back as 1913, objections were raised against the employment of black soldiers in Europe. Against this objection, General Mangin of the French Army, pointed out that there were several precedents in history. "William of Orange used black troops when he landed at Torbay on the 5th of November, 1688; Richelieu at the siege of LaRochell, and Maurice of Saxony at Fontenoy and Lawfeld. Napoleon quartered Negro regiments all round the French coast and they fought on the French battleships. And our regiments of 'Turcos,' who fought so gallantly in the Crimea and Italy, contained many black soldiers."

When the World War began, Germany contended that no black soldiers should be used in Europe. Against this objection it was pointed out that Germany had no means of transporting troops from Africa. The Germans, however, used thousands of black soldiers in defense of her African possessions. The greatest difficulty which the British experienced in conquering German East Africa was on account of the stubborn resistance which theGerman black soldiers offered. France, Belgium and Great Britain all used black troops in fighting the battles of the World War.

During the four years of the World War, France used about one-half million black troops. They fought on all her battle fronts. When the war closed she had some 150,000 combatant black troops. They were recruits from Senegal, the Soudan, Somalli Land and Madagascar. They won distinction in many battles and contributed no small part to the success of the allied armies. Germany raised objections to these black troops, notwithstanding the fact that at the same time she was using black soldiers against the British in Togo Land and in East Africa.

Among the French troops used in the Occupation of the Rhine under the provisions of the Versailles Treaty, were at first some black soldiers. Against these Germany carried on violent propaganda especially in the United States. It was charged that these black troops were committing all sorts of atrocities. In defense of these black soldiers it was officially announced that only 7,490 were in the Rhine Army of Occupation, and at the time when the propaganda against their use was most active, April, 1921, there had been no French Negro troops on the Rhine for eight months. There were also denials from Germany against the alleged atrocities. The Christian Pilgrim, a German paper, said, that in the interest of truth that at Spire, Germany, where there were black troops, they were held in higher esteem than the white garrison which preceded them. "The black troops of the Occupation in the main conducted themselves very correctly for complaints have been heard they should rather have been directed against a certain class of young German women."

In September 1921, a year after the French black soldiers had been withdrawn from the Rhine, propaganda against their use there, was still being circulated in the United States. The State Department at Washington began an investigation in June of 1920, and got reports from the Commander of the American Army of Occupation, from the Inter-Allied Rhineland High Commission, American Department and from the American Mission at Berlin. The report was issued as Senate Document Number 397 of the 66th Congress. The conclusions as given by the Inter-Allied High Commission were:

"The wholesale atrocities by French Negro Colonial troops alleged in the German press, such as the alleged abductions, followed by rape, mutilation and murder and the concealment of the bodies of the victims, are false and intended for political propaganda."

Native Labor Problem As Result Of World War Acute Throughout Africa.

The native labour problem throughout Africa has become acute as a result of the conditions brought about by the close of the World War. Periodicals relating to Africa carry such articles as: "Labour in Portuguese Africa;" "Forces Labour in Kenya Colony;" "Labour in British East Africa;" "Labour in Portuguese West Africa;" etc. The more or less general charge is made that there is systematic effort to have the natives labour under penal conditions.

East African Native Forced By Law To Compulsory Labour.

A most serious phase of the labour problem has developed in Kenya Colony formerly the British East Africa Protectorate. A large part of the colony consists of highland suitable for European settlement. As result there is a white community of over five thousand. Farms and plantations under European management and requiring labour for their development, have been established. The native population numbers nearly three millions.

In 1912-1913, a native labour commission was appointed to consider the difficulty in regard to a labour supply. A voluminous report was issued. The problem has recently become more acute as a result, partly of the exacting demands made by the World War upon the native population and partly as a result of a scheme for the settlement of the ex-soldier, which naturally increased the demand for labour. In October 1919, under the instructions of the Governor of the Colony, a labour circular was issued. In it, "attention was called to the shortage of labour in certain areas, and the Governor expressed a hope that 'by insistent advocacy of the Government's wishes,' an increasing supply of labor would result. District officers were told that the necessity for an increased supply of labour could not be brought too frequently before the various native authorities. They were instructed to 'exercise every possible lawful influence to induce able-bodied male natives to go into the labour field.' Native chiefs and elders were told that they must at all times render all possible lawful assistance on the same lines, and that it was part of their duty 'to advise and encourage all unemployed young men to go out and work on plantations.' District commissioners were to keep a record of the names of those chiefs and headmen who proved helpful, and of those who were not, and to report to the Governor. Finally it was hinted that if the labour difficulties continued it might be necessary to bring in other and special measures to meet the case."

East African Bishops Issue Memorandum Against Forced Labour.

The circular issued relative to labour in East Africa early came to the attention of the missionaries. Although it made no mention of compulsion, it created serious alarm among those in touch with native life. There was no doubt in the minds of those acquainted with the situation in the colony as to what would be the result.

The Bishops of Mombasa and Uganda and Dr. J. W. Arthur of the Church of Scotland immediately issued a memorandum in which attention was called to to the grave abuses to which the new policy was likely to lead. It was pointed out that a wish of the Government is to the native mind not distinguishable from a definite order.

Mr. John H. Harris, in a pamphlet, "Back to Slavery," says:

"The new labour system in East Africa raises primarily a moral issue of exceptional magnitude, and secondly, a question of fact. The primary issue raised is whether the white race has any title at all to claim a property value in the person of the African, and the second issue, whether it is, or is not a fact that the African is so inherently indolent as to be impervious to the ordinary inducements of industry, and that in fact he 'knows no other law than force?' It is unthinkable that public opinion will tolerate, at this stage of civilization, any declaration which implies a property right in the person of the African; such a suggestion is morally untenable.

The question of fact is happily capable of several tests. Is it, or is it not true, that the African is so inherently idle that he responds only to force. It may be true that he has periods of idleness—he is not alone in that—it may be true, probably is so, that he labours intermittently. But what is equally true is, that in spite of the fact that the African race is only now emerging from barbarism, is only now attempting to cross, in a decade, the bridge of centuries, the whole race is not only working, but is working hardest where the hand of a considerate administrator beckons onward to a higher rate of progress; so much is this true, taking all things into consideration, it is doubtful whether any race can show so favourable a record."

In Spite Handicap Colour Bar South African Native Becoming Formidable Competitor In Trades Requiring Skill and Ability.

It is stated that in spite of the handicap of the colour bar the natives are becoming formidable competitors in trades requiring skill and ability. One reason for this view is that the white worker is content to act as boss or foreman and to allow the native to do the work. In spite of the fact that natives in the mines, in the railroad service and elsewhere are paid on an average of about 3 shillings a day and that the poor whites draw 12 shillings a day.

It is reported that 120,000 whites have fallen into what is known as the poor whites class, and that they are landless, helpless and hopeless without self respect and sunken in many instances to the lowest depths. It is said that one out of every fourteen whites is a poor white. An article in the A. P. O., under the title, "The Dominant Race and a White South Africa," maintains that, however, much the progress of the colored may be circumvented by law or custom and practice, there is no doubt that in time the colored worker will dominate the industrial field, and finally the social life of South Africa. South Africa will always be a black man's country, despite the desperate appeals to prejudice and race now raised by white labour on the Rand. "Black she has been, Black she is, and Black she will remain as long as the sun shall rise in the east."

Mine Owners Urge Removal Colour Bar Labor Unions Oppose.

At a meeting of representatives of mine owners and mine workers called in the autumn of 1921 some interesting facts were disclosed. A report of this Conference as published in the A. P. O. said: "General Smuts urged relaxing the mining regulations so that the semi-skilled Native need not necessarily be under direct personal supervision of a white and often incompetent miner. On this the white miners took an uncompromising attitude.

Mr. Hendricks, the spokesman of the white miners' union, declared that his Union would never consent to the word 'personal' being deleted. His Union objected to a white miner being in charge of more than one gang of Natives. The ratio of whites to Natives must be maintained. Indeed, he argues, there were already too many Natives employed and too few whites. The mines belonged to the nation and should be put on a national basis. The ratio, he continued, was eight Natives to one white man, whereas it should be no more than four natives to one white, which was the relative proportion of the Blacks to whites."

"Mr. Hendricks said that rather than increase the number of Natives, and permitting them to do semi-skilled work, every effort should be made to make the Native more efficient and less wasteful of his time underground.

"The Chamber of Mines, on the other hand, pleaded for the deletion of the Colour bar. Semi-skilled Natives should be put to work without the unnecessary and expensive white supervision. They pointed out there was much work that could be done by Natives under the direction of a Native boss-boy.

"Mr. Hendricks saw in those suggestions the thin edge of the wedge, and replied that under no circumstances would the white miner accept such a change."

Native Workers On The Rand Go On Strike.

In February 1920, the native workers on the Rand; that is, the reef from which the gold is taken, with Johannesburg as a center, went on a strike. There are some forty or fifty thousand natives working in these gold mines. The strike grew out of a request for increase in wages because of the high cost of living in the country. Picketing and other forms of handling the situation were employed.

Various reasons were advanced as to the cause of the strike. A government commission which investigated the strike, emphasized, "the sense of soreness and discontent in the native in regard to the policies of the government toward the native races." The natives' demand for increase of wages was not made until after a raise had been granted to the European employees. On the point of grievances the report dealt with the question of the colour bar in the mines; that is, not employing natives on skilled or semi-skilled work. It was pointed out that the native and coloured races would not be content forever to be hewers of wood and drawers of water; that they are advancing, and that their advance cannot be artificially arrested.

New Rules And Regulations Proposed Relative To Segregation Natives In Urban Areas.

A new Act for the regulation of the segregation of natives in urban areas was brought before the 1922 session of the Parliament of the Union of South Africa. The main provisions of this proposed Act are reported to be as follows:

"Subject to the approval of the Minister of Native Affairs, after reference to the Administrator, any urban local authority may—

(a) Define and set apart one or more areas of land for the occupation and residence of Natives, or increase the extent of any area or areas of land already set apart for that purpose. Any land so defined and set apart is hereinafter called a location;

(b) Define and set apart any portion of a location or any other area of land as an area or areas within which, on such terms and conditions as, with the approval of the Administrator and the Minister, the urban local authority may by regulation prescribe, Natives shall be permitted to acquire for residential purposes the ownership or lease of lots. Any area of land defined and set apart under this paragraph is hereinafter called a Native village;

(c) Provide one or more buildings or groups of buildings or huts (hereinafter called Native hostels) for the accommodation of Natives on such terms and accommodations as, with the approval of the Administrator and the Minister, the urban local authority may by regulation prescribe.

Whenever it appears to the Minister that the provision made in the area of any urban local authority for the accommodation of Natives is inadequate or unsuitable, the Minister may require the local authority to make all or any of the above stated provisions, and to satisfy him as to area and situation, character of buildings, and provision of water, light, sanitation and other services. Upon the failure of an urban local authority to comply with his requirements within the time fixed, the Minister may himself carry out the work, and recover payment of the cost by action in a competent court, by levying a special rate within the area of the authority in default, or by deduction from any subsidy payable by the Administrator to that authority.

No person other than a Native (except such persons as are specially exempted) shall purchase, hire or otherwise acquire land situated in a Native village or location, or any right to such land or any interest therein or servitude thereof.

Whenever the Governor-General deems it expedient he may by proclamation declare that from a date notified therein all Natives within any urban area, other than those exempted, shall reside in a location, Native village or Native hostel. The exemptions are:

(a) Any Native who is the registered owner of immovable property within the urban area valued for rating purposes at seventy-five pounds or more, and resides on such property;

(b) Any Native who has acquired immovable property as described in paragraph (a) by devolution or succession on death from a registered Native owner whether under a will or on intestacy, so long as he continues to be the owner of and to be ordinarily resident on such property;

(c) In the Province of the Cape of Good Hope a Native who, being a registered Parliamentary voter, has been registered as prescribed;

(d) Any resident person, being the wife, minor child or bona fide dependent of any Native exempted under paragraph (a), (b) or (c) of this subsection;

(e) Any Native who is at the time actually employed in domestic service and for whom sleeping accommodation to the satisfaction of the urban local authority has been provided by his employer;

(f) Any Native resident of a Mission house, private hostel or similar institition approved by the Minister;

(g) Any Native residing in an area within the local authority's jurisdiction, which the Minister has approved for the residence of Natives;

(h) Any other Native whose application for exemption has been granted by the urban local authority and approved by a prescribed officer.

Except with the approval of the Minister, no owner, lessee, or occupier of land within three miles of the boundary of an urban area shall allow any Native to congregate, or reside, on his land or to occupy any dwelling thereon except such Native as is in his bona fide employment.

For the establishing, setting apart, equipping and maintaining of locations, Native villages and Native hostels, the local authority may acquire land, if necessary by expropriation on terms specified, and may borrow moneys to provide facilities for the construction of dwellings, and advance moneys to approved Natives for the same purpose."

Agitation To Give Vote To Natives South Africa.

There is agitation in South Africa to give the vote to the natives. It was withheld from them when the Union of South Africa was formed on the ground that they were uneducated and uncivilized and therefore, incapable of appreciating the value and significance of the vote. Similarly when the coloured people were deprived of the right to send a coloured man to the Union Parliament it was argued that they had never exercised that right and that the act of the Union had not robbed them of anything they had enjoyed at any time. The question of black domination, it is stated, is now being raised.

South African Natives Develop Racial Self-Consciousness Inter-Racial Committee Suggested.

The development of racial self-consciousness among the natives of South Africa was commented upon in an editorial in the Christian Express, published at Lovedale, South Africa. This same editorial suggested that the situation could be handled most advantageously for both whites and natives if inter-racial committees were formed. Continuing it said:

"To thinking men and women in South Africa it must be patent that our Native Problem, as we call it, has entered on a new phase. Racial and individual self-consciousness have developed rapidly among thousands of Natives during the last five years, and everything seems to point to a continuous development of ever-increasing velocity in this direction. That it cannot be arrested goes without saying. How then can it be guided into wise channels? At least to begin with it is in our towns that relations between the races are likely to be most difficult. We believe much might be accomplished if a few Christian men and women in each South African town would form an inter-racial committee, of which the leading Natives in the town location would be invited to become members. If these committees were to meet once a quarter and talk frankly upon various phases of the race problem as they find themselves up against it, with a desire to apply to their adjustment the principles of justice, cooperation, service, all in an atmosphere, not of sentimentality, but of mutual good will and sympathy, serious dangers might be avoided and a safe course set. Our difficulties cannot be solved by one section of the population alone: cooperation along the line of mutual interests is essential to any stable settlement It is astonishing how one's old point of view may become modified and adjusted on any matter when one is given the opportunity of seeing it from the standpoint of others."

Native South African Gives Reasons For Causes Native Unrest

Mr. D. D. T. Jabavu, a native South African who received his education at London University and is professor of Bantu languages in the South African Native College, at Alice, Cape Province, in an address before the Natal Missionary Conference at Durban in July 1920, read a very illuminating paper on, "The Causes of Native Unrest." He mentioned what he considered to be six main causes: first, the high cost of living and the inability of the native to bring pressure to bear to get increase of wages, etc., to meet this high cost of living; second, the successive droughts and consequent failure of crops which have rendered the primitive methods of agriculture unprofitable, neglected and unpopular;

> Third, the taxing of the Natives without representation. The time has passed when the Bantu people in the Union of South Africa can be treated as children. "They have vivid recollections of how their political rights were bargained away in the passification of Vereenig (1902.) They reckon that the Union Act of 1910 unites only the white races and that as against the blacks; for the colour bar clause struck the death-knell of native confidence in what used to be called British fair play."

Fourth, the native has lost faith in his adminstration of justice. The jury system is against the native. The sentences of the magistrates in their severity are distinctively anti-native. Suspended sentences are only for the benefit of the Europeans. Europeans get off lightly and quietly for crimes against natives, such as, murder and rape, while natives for the same offenses are punished with the utmost rigour of the law, amidst press trumpetings and fanfare. A high court Judge was not long ago reported in the "Daily Dispatch" as practicing and upholding the differentiation of punishment as between whites and blacks for similar offences.

> Fifth, the educated Native cannot move anywhere without being made to know, "That his black skin is his life long damnation.' "He is practically not recognized as a citizen entitled to a place under the sun." In Pretoria and other cities of the Northern province, the black man is not allowed to use the street cars, and must either walk or hire a private conveyance.
> "The black man in all public places is either "jim-crowed," or altogether ostracized. In stores he has to wait until all whites are served. In public offices he is bullied by officials. In markets his stock and produce are by tacit agreement earmarked for low prices. His sugar cane is not accepted at the Zululand mills. Evening curfew bells restrict his freedom of movement among his friends and he is cut and snarled at throughout his life."

Sixth, Discriminations on railways. The black man, "at the very start of his journey is buffeted by booking clerks; in the goods' sheds he is unnecessarily anathematized in language that cannot bear repeating. His waiting rooms are made to accomodate the rawest blanketed heathen; and the more decent native has either to use them and annex vermin or to do without shelter in biting winter weather. His accomodation in trains is frequently not equal to the money he pays in fares. There are frequently more people than the half coach or the single coach can contain."

National Congress West Africa Formulates Natives' Needs.

At Accra, Goldcoast West Africa, on March 11-29, 1920, there assembled representatives of the natives of all the British West African Colonies. The Gold Coast Leader, referring to this meeting stated that it was the greatest event in West African history. There was assembled for the first time in the history of the West Coast, leading representatives capable of making articulate the wants and needs of the natives. The conference adopted the name, "The National Congress of British West Africa," and formulated resolutions setting forth in a very explicit manner the wants and needs of the natives. The main features of these resolutions follow:

I.

Legislative (Including Municipal) Reforms and the Granting of the Franchise And Administrative Reforms With Particular Reference to Equal Rights and Opportunities.

"In the opinion of this Conference, the time has arrived for a change in the Constitutions of the several British West African Colonies, so as to give the people an effective voice in their affairs both in the Legislative and Municipal Governments."

"This Conference recommends a Constitution on the following lines:

(1) An Executive Council as at present composed. (2) A Legislative Council composed of representatives, of whom one-half shall be nominated by the Crown and the other half elected by the people, to deal with Legislation generally. (3) A House of Assembly, composed of the members of the Legislative Council together with six other financial representatives elected by the people, who shall have the power of imposing all taxes and of discussing freely and without reserve the items on the Annual Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure prepared by the Governor in the Executive Council and approving of them."

"That this Conference desires to place on record its disapprobation of the invidious distinctions made in the present West African Service by reason of colour, and is of the opinion that all future entries should be based on merit by competitive examinations, and pledges itself to submit proposals there—anent at the proper quarter."

II.

Education With Particular Reference To A West African University.

"That in the opinion of this Conference the time has come to found a British, West African University on such lines as would preserve in the students a sense of African Nationality, and therefore commends that all existing Secondary Schools throughout West Africa or those about to be formed, should promote a course of training that shall best attain the end in view."

"That besides existing Secondary Schools the Conference recommends each section of it to promote a scheme in each Colony whereby Secondary Education on national lines supported by the people may be promoted, and which shall form a further nucleus for the formation of the proposed British West African University."

"That compulsory Education throughout the British West African Colonies be introduced by law, and that the standard of both the Primary and the Secondary Schools be uniformly raised to meet the Standard of the University."

III.

Alien Problems With Particular Reference To The Syrian Question.

"That in the opinion of this Conference the Aboriginal inhabitants of the several Colonies of British West Africa are not 'Aliens' or 'Foreigners' to one another and advocates the avoidance of all discriminatory Ordinances in that relation."

"That the time has arrived for the introduction of Immigration Laws throughout British West Africa so as to keep out undesirable aliens."

"That this Conference having heard the views of its members on the 'Alien Problem, with particular reference to the Syrian Question,' is of opinion that the Colonial Office should be approached with the view of considering whether these Syrians are not undesirables and a menace to the good Government of the land and consequently should not be repatriated from the West African Colonies."

IV.

Commercial Enterprise With Particular Reference To (a) The Scheme of the Empire Resources Development Committee; (b) Banking; (c) Shipping.

"That this Conference views with great disfavour the propaganda of the Empire Resources Development Committee with respect to the British West African Colonies, and is strongly of the opinion that the natural resources of the British West African Dependencies are not for the exploitation of Concessionaires under State control."

"Further, that it condemns any policy which would make such resources available for the liquidation of the Imperial War Debt or any part of it, and pledges itself by constitutional means to oppose strenuously any such policy, and directs that copies of this Resolution be forthwith transmitted to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies and to each of the Governors of the Dependencies and all public bodies and societies whom it may concern."

"That this Conference, being of the opinion that Trade competition in the British West African Dependencies should be free from restriction, views with great dissatisfaction the passing of the Palm Kernels Export Duty Ordinance in the various British West African Dependencies, and pledges itself to make representations at the proper quarter with the object of securing their repeal.

"That this Conference being strongly convinced that the time has come for the cooperation of the peoples of the British West African Dependencies in promoting their economical development, recommends the consideration by the various Committees of the formation of a Corporation, to be known as the British West African Cooperative Association, under the Companies Acts, with powers, inter alia to found Banks, promote shipping facilities, establish Cooperative Stores, and produce buying centres, in such wise as to inspire and maintain a British West African National Economical development."

V.

Judicial Reforms With Particular Reference To An Appellate Court.

"That this Conference, having taken into its deep consideration the question of Judicial Reforms, is strongly of the opinion that further to enhance the integrity and independence of the Judges of the Supreme Courts of the British West African Dependencies, the source and conditions of their appointments should be the same as those of His Majesty's Judges in England."

"That none but duly qualified and experienced legal men should hold Judicial appointments either as Judges of the Supreme Court, or as Magistrates, or as Commissioners, or exercise any functions whatsoever as such throughout British West Africa."

"That the time has come to open definitely to African practitioners of experience all Judicial appointments."

"That this Conference desires to place on record the widespread dissatisfaction throughout British West Africa as to the Constitution of the Appeal Court in which Judges sit on their Judgments, and recommends an early arrangement by which experienced Judges outside the British West African Judiciary might be appointed to form an Appellate Court for British West Africa."

"That in view of the fact that, where Jurisdiction by aboriginal Chiefs obtains in British West Africa the right is inherent in them and only requires regulation in some cases, this Conference desires to record its opinion that every effort should be made to bring the Courts of such Aboriginal Chiefs to the standard of the present day ideas of the administration of justice."

"That, to this end, the Jurisdiction of the Aboriginal Courts be made concurrent with that of the Supreme Court, and the Chiefs encouraged to engage qualified educated men to act as Judges in their Court, so as gradually to raise the Standard of the dispensation of Justice in them."

"That this Conference wholly condemns the barbarous practice of flogging African women for any offence whatsoever, notwithstanding any local Ordinance to the contrary, and also deprecates the resort to flogging in any other case save in suitable cases ordered by a sentence of a Judge or Magistrate of competent Jurisdiction."

VI.

West African Press Union.

"That this Conference desires to record its deep sense of the important part the Press plays in National development, and directs that a Committee of experienced Journalists be appointed to investigate and report upon the best means of promoting greater cooperation in the British West African Press."

"That upon the Committee submitting their report to the President he is hereby empowered together with the Vice-President to circulate copies among all Editors of the several Newspapers of British West Africa, and to invite their opinion for the consideration of the proposed Congress of British West Africa at its next sitting."

"That this Conference is strongly of the opinion that the liberty of the Press is the birthright of every Community within the British Empire, and deprecates any Legislation that threatens such a right, recommends the immediate repeal of any such repressive laws wherever operating in the British West African Dependencies, and directs strong representations to be made upon the matter at the right quarter."

"That, it being desirable that the projected Congress of Africans of British West Africa should own a quarterly Magazine to be known as the British West African National Review and the Official organ of the Congress, this Conference directs that such an organ be established, with Head Office at Seccondee in the Gold Coast, under the editorship of the Honorable Casely Hayford, and that the same be maintained out of the Congress Inaugural Fund."

VII.

Sanitary and Medical Reforms With Special Reference To The Segregation System And The Position of the African Medical Practitioners in The Government Service.

"That this Conference views with marked disfavour the Trades Union spirit of the West African Medical Staff, which attempts to exclude qualified African citizens of British West Africa from entering the Medical Service in their country; records the view that duly qualified African Medical Practitioners are entitled to free entry in the service and to be treated according to merit as to emoluments, rank, promotion and leave; and recommends strong representations to be made at the right quarter upon the matter."

"Further that this Conference is of the opinion that in each of the Dependencies, Hospitals with all modern conveniences and appliances be provided for African patients and their treatment solely assigned to African Medical practitioners, and that proper wards be provided for the better class of Africans."

"That both the European and African practitioners be considered as under one roster, and that one-half of the appointments be assigned to Europeans and the other half to Africans provided that the African Medical Practitioners shall be responsible to the Principal Medical Officer only. It is recommended that all candidates for appointments in the British West African Medical Service should sit to Competitive examinations and that such appointments should depend upon merit."

"That private African Practitioners shall have every facility of treating their patients in the public hospitals provided for the African Community and of having their prescriptions dispensed at any Government Hospital at a reasonable charge without the consent of the Medical Officer in charge had and obtained. Further that they have the right of importing drugs free of duty."

"That to ensure Medical and Surgical assistance to all the people of a given district. Medical Practitioners in the Government Service be appointed to visit each important centre periodically where there is no permanent Medical Officer."

"That in more remote centres dispensaries be provided, and competent dispensers appointed to take charge, with an occasional visitation by a Government Medical Officer."

VIII.

The Policy of the Government in Relation to the Land Question.

"That in the opinion of this Conference the principle of Trusteeship with respect to the lands of the people of British West Africa by Government has been overdone, and that it is proper to declare that the average British West African is quite capable of controlling and looking after his own interests in the land."

"That however welcome occasional advice on the part of Executive Officers may be, it is desirable that in Government dealings with the people in respect of their lands, no steps should be taken which might shake their confidence."

"That this Conference recommends that the Public Lands Acquisition Ordinances should be so modified as to leave the compensation to be paid for lands required by Government to depend upon independent appraisement."

"That it condemns the principle of Government compulsorily acquiring large areas of land at nominal prices, and letting the same or portions thereof to private companies of persons without giving the owners the opportunity of the bargain or the benefit of it."

"That it recommends that in all cases of the acquisition of private lands by Government only such portions as are strictly required for Government purposes, such as Wharves, Harbours, Stores and Official residences, may be retained by Government but the rest, whether laid out or not, should be considered the property of the original owner who shall be entitled to the rents and profits thereof."

"That the following Ordinances operating in Nigeria create hardships on the people and should be repealed: 'Public Lands Ordinance, Expropriation Ordinance and similar Ordinances.'"

"That the principle of collecting ground rents in mining areas in the name of Sanitation and depriving the land owners of the benefit of their surface rights is bad and should be abandoned."

IX.

The Right of the People to Self-Determination.

"That the Conference views with alarm the right assumed by the European power of exchanging or partitioning Countries between them, without reference to, or regard for the wishes of the people, and records the opinion that such a course is tantamount to a species of slavery."

"That this Conference condemns specifically the partitioning of Togoland between the English and the French Governments and the handing over of the Cameroons to the French Government without consulting or regarding the wishes of the peoples in the matter."

"That it respectfully desires an assurance from His Majesty's Government that under no circumstances whatsoever will it be a consenting party to the integrity of any of the four British West African Colonies being disturbed."

X.

The Inauguration of the Congress of Africans of British West Africa.

"That this Conference being fully convinced of the importance of continuing and perpetuating its work, resolved itself into the National Congress of British West Africa."

"That the Congress shall be composed of the several Committees of the Dependencies which appointed Delegates to the Conference."

"That the Congress shall meet once a year, or oftener as occasion may arise."

"That the next sitting of the Congress shall be on or about the 28th day of March, 1921 at Freetown, Sierra Leone."

"That the Central office of the Congress shall be at Seccondee, in the Gold Coast, until and unless altered by a majority vote of the Congress."

XI.

Representation of West African Views in London.

"That this Conference is of the opinion that no time should be lost in preparing the case for the four British West African Dependencies in the light of the Resolutions passed at this Conference and that not more than two representatives from each of the four Dependencies be sent to London at the earliest possible date this year to take the opinion of eminent Counsel through experienced Solicitors as to the safe and proper course to follow to secure the franchise and the other reforms advocated."

"That the representatives be empowered to take such preliminary steps and undertake such propaganda work, and to do all acts necessary and expedient as they may be advised touching the premises."

"That meantime active steps be taken by the different Committees in further enlisting the support of the several Committees and of augmenting the Congress Inaugural Fund."

XII.

Policy.

"It is hereby resolved by this Congress that its policy is to maintain strictly and inviolate the connection of the British West African Dependencies with the British Empire, and to maintain unreservedly all and every right of free citizenship of the Empire, and the fundamental principle that taxation goes with effective representation."

Educational Commission Makes Study Conditions In Africa.

Under the auspicies and cooperation of the Phelps-Stokes Foundation, the Conference of Missionary Societies of Great Britain and Ireland, the Belgian Society of Protestant Missions, the Paris Evangelical Mission Society and the various American Missionary Societies that work in Africa, and with the cooperation of the British, French, Belgian and Portuguese Governments, a Commission made a year's study of the educational conditions in Africa; that is, from September 1920 to August 1921.

The countries visited were: Sierra Leone, Liberia, the Gold Coast, Nigeria, Cameroon, the French Congo, the Belgian Congo, Angola, the Union of South Africa and Rhodesia. The personnel of the Commission was: Dr. Thomas Jesse Jones, Chairman, Educational Director of the Phelps-Stokes Fund, formerly specialist on racial education in the United States Bureau of Education, and author of the Report on Negro Education in the United States; Mr. J. E. Kwegyir Aggrey, a native of the Gold Coast, educator and sociologist; Dr. Henry S. Hollenbeck, specialist in tropical hygiene; Mr. L. A. Roy, specialist in industrial education, and secretary of the Commission; and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Wilkie, missionaries of the United Free Church of Scotland on the Gold Coast.

Education And Mission Effort Should Be Closely Related. To Needs Native People.

Among the recommendations made were; 1. "That education and all mission efforts shall be more closely related to the needs of the native people. The lines of adaptation required are, health, the soil, hand skill in wood, clay, iron, grass, or other native materials, cooking and sewing, moral and hygienic recreation, the three R's related to African life, community activities, and all of these directed for the development of sound habits and character."

"2. That educational organization must be planned with due regard for the elevation of the masses and for the development and training of native leaders. These native leaders must have access to the great truths of the physical and social sciences and the inspiration of the history and literature of all powerful and progressive nations."

"3. That missions should provide for adequate supervision of their activities especially the out-stations. We have sometimes thought that the phrase, 'occupying the territory' is a dangerous and misleading shibboleth that leads to the waste of time, money and energy."

"4. That all missions should understand the relative value of native and European languages in the instruction of the natives. In the lower grades the native languages should prevail; in the upper grades more and more time should be given to the language of the European nation in control.

"5. That the missions should make more effective effort to develop cooperation between the various missions; between missions and commercial concerns; between missions and governments."

"6. That effort should be made to eliminate from mission work all groups that are not prepared by education, temperament, organization or financial means to enter the foreign field."

"7. That American Missions should become more conscious of the special contribution they can make to Africa. This involves a better understanding of the peculiarly effective educational systems developed for Negroes in the South; of the charm of the name America even in Central Africa; of the freedom from traditional limitations in building operations, farming, food preparation and other activities and relationships. Furthermore, our greater financial and material resources increase our responsibilities for other parts of the world. Missionary Societies should be deeply moved by the fact that they are undoubtedly the most effective effort of this great nation to share the burdens of the world."

The Negro In Literature 1919-1921.

From year to year standard publishing houses issue books written by Negroes on various topics. Brief reviews of the books by Negroes published in 1919-1921 follow:

"For the Highest Good"—Fenton Johnson: a pamphlet. The Favorite Magazine, Publishers, Chicago, 1920. In the introduction the writer says, "This very small book is designed to express what the author feels is necessary for the political guidance of the country he loves. I am one who is constantly seeking the highest good, and therefore everything I have written herein is for the highest good." Johnson is a poet and has written some very excellent verse. His volumes of verse, "A Little Dreaming," and "Visions of the Dust," have caused him to be classed among the best of the present day poets. It is to be regretted that he has attempted to write essays dealing with political and social questions.

"Clouds and Sunshine"—Sarah Lee Brown Fleming; The Cornhill Company, Boston, 1920. In this volume the author has written some very interesting poems. "Clouds and Sunshine," is in three sections. The first section consists of poems which deal with life, death, love, fortune, etc. The second part of the book is in dialect form and shows indications of having followed somewhat closely the Dunbar standards. The third section, as the title "Race Poems," indicates, deals with the race problem. "Clouds and Sunshine," is an interesting collection of verse, and shows that the author has distinct poetical ability just as her novel, "Hope's Highway," published some years ago, indicates her more general literary talent.

"The Black Devils and Other Poems"—Sterling M. Means; The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky, 1919. This volume of verse is dedicated to the black troops who fought in France and Flanders. With a few exceptions all of the selections have as their theme something relating to the Negro in the World War. There are such titles as "The Black Devils," "A Night in Flanders," "A Soldier's Farewell to His Wife," and "The Black Troops at the Battle of The Marne." As in his previous volume, "The Deserted Cabin and Other Poems," the author shows poetical ability.

"The Wings of Oppression"—Leslie Pinckney Hill; The Stratford Company, Boston 1921. A collection of well written verses. Another title for the book might have been "The Spiritual Quality of the Negro." In that section of the work entitled "Poems of My People," the writer has endeavored to "Exhibit something of the indestructable spiritual quality of my race." The other sections are, "Poems of the Times." "Poems of Appreciation," "Songs," and "Poems of the Spirit." In the poems under these sections the writer has attempted to get into harmony "With currents of thought and feeling common to all humanity." There is an implied appeal "to that spirit of human brotherhood by which the world alone must find the path of peace."

"Poems of the Four Seas"—Joshua Henry Jones, jr.; The Cornhill Publishing Company, Boston, 1921. This is a collection of thirty-nine poems that express, "an old but nevertheless fascinating truism—that life is but a little journey through a vale of joys, sorrows, passions and inconsistencies with the inevitable twilight and rest at the end."

"Six Creole Folk-Songs," With Original Creole and Translated English Texts—Maude Cuney Hare: Piano Accompaniment. The Carl Fischer Company, New York, 1921. $1.50. In her introduction the compiler states that: "Creole music is mostly Negro music remodeled by French composers and the melancholy beauty and quavering chant lightened by French influence and deepened by the Spanish. The Creole folk-songs of the New World are those of the people of mixed blood in Louisiana and the bordering south-western states. Mainly African in rhythm, the music was brought to South American countries and to the West Indies, thence to Louisiana, where it received a French and Spanish-American imprint by the settlers of the land. The majority of the songs that survive show a French influence while a few are known in variant form in France. They are interwoven with the history of Louisiana and the neighboring states and were in most instances linked to the dance."

"Rachel, A Play in Three Acts"—Angelina W. Grimke; The Cornhill Company, Boston, 1920. This is a play which deals with the problem of the evil of lynching as it affects the women and children of the race; that is, the danger of it is a curse that blights their very existence. Rachel, the chief character in the play in rejecting her lover and refusing marriage and the bringing of children into the world, is made to say, "I am twenty-two—and I'm old; you're thirty-two—and you're old; Tom's twenty-three—and he is old. Ma dear's sixty—and she said once she is much older than that. She is. We are all blighted: we whose skins are dark—our lives blasted by the white man's prejudice. And little Jimmy seven years old, is blighted too. In a year or two, at best, he will be made old by suffering."

"From the Desert"—John Wesley Holloway; The Neale Publishing Company, New York, 1919. A book of interesting poems dealing in the first part with Negro life and nature, and in the second part with childhood and youth. The title is a misnomer, for these poems are not "From the Desert," but from the rich and fertile life of the Negro in the Southland. The writer shows poetical ability. This volume is a contribution to the growing literature which the Negroes are creating.

"The German War Lord and The British Lion"—Sterling M. Means; The Pauley Company, Indianapolis, Indiana, 1918. This is a series of poems that deal exclusively with incidents connected with the World War as the following titles indicate: "The Great Offensive," "The Fate of the Lusitania," "The Near Eastern Drive," and "The Battle of Jutland." These poems have no special interest when separated from their connection with the World War.

"The Anthology of Magazine Verse for 1919, A Year Book of American Poetry"—edited by William Stanley Braithwaite; Small, Maynard and Company, Boston 1919. $2.25 This is the seventh annual Year Book of American Poetry which the author has published. As in the previous volumes the author has here attempted to gather into one volume, the best selections of American poetry written during the year. Mr. Braithwaite's estimate is authoritatively accepted.

"Negro Folk Rhymes"–Thomas W. Talley: The MacMillon Company, New York, 1922. $2.25. This is a collection of secular folk songs and ballads as contrasted with the Negro religious folk songs. There are in the collection, selections of "Dance Rhymes," "Love Rhymes," "Courtship Songs," "Nursery Rhymes," and a section of wise sayings. In addition to the numerous rhymes of the American Negro there are sections of rhymes from Africa and the West Indies. This book is very helpful and entertaining in the slave life of the American Negro.

"The Story of the Great War"—Wm. Stanley Braithwaite: The Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York, 1919. As the title indicates the effort has been to write a story of the Great War in a clear and vivid style so that boys and girls will at once grasp not only the big facts of battles and campaigns, but will also understand the underlying meaning of the world's struggle.

"A Short History of the English Drama"—Benjamin Brawley; Harcourt, Brace and Howe, New York, 1921. The purpose of this volume as stated in the preface is that: "This book makes no special effort to be either original or profound. It aims simply to set forth in brief compass the main facts that one might wish to have at hand in his first course in the English Drama. The present work presupposes only that the student has had an elementary college course in the history of English Literature, and with just so much as a basis, it endeavors to assist him as he passes on to the study of the greatest of the forms that this literature has so far assumed."

"The Dunbar Speaker and Entertainer"—Alice Moore Dunbar-Nelson; J. L. Nichols and Company, Publishers, Naperville, Illinois, 1920. "The best prose and poetic selections by and about the Negro race." The purpose of this volume is to furnish for Negro children literary selections of high quality that at the same time give information and inspire race pride. The selections while relating to the Negro are by both white and Negro authors. "The Dunbar Speaker and Entertainer," should be widely read.

"Who Was Responsible?"—Maggie Shaw-Fullilove; The Abingdon Press, Cincinnati 1919. This is a novel which deals with the drink problem and its resulting evils. The author's purpose in writing the book was that "It may do its small share in arresting the tide of demoralization which some of the vices of society are spreading over the land."

"The Immediate Jewel of His Soul"—Herman Dreer; The St. Louis Argus Publishing Company, St. Louis, 1919. This is a novel in which the author endeavors to set forth, as he states, "Some of our immediate aspirations and ideals. It is a story of the earnest Negro trying to rise into great place." This work is more valuable from a literary standpoint for what it has attempted, than for what it has achieved.

"Black and White Tangled Threads"—Zara Wright: 2131 South Dearborn Street, Chicago 1920. $2.50. This work is a novel that deals somewhat with the race problem. The title "Tangled Threads," is derived from what befalls the principal characters in the story. One of the characters, an English woman of high rank is in love with her American cousin, who is married to a wealthy heiress who in turn is the heir to the title which her husband's cousin possesses. The main theme of the story, however, deals with the tangled threads which have arisen as a result of the loves and marriages of individuals with slight traces of Negro blood. The book does not follow the conventional lines and attempt to show that either good or evil results from such marriages, but deals with them as to what might happen in the life of any individual so situated. The story has its beginnings on a plantation of the far South. Here is a beautiful slave girl. One of the sons of the master falls in love with this girl, and runs away with her to the Old World where they are married. A daughter is born. In time both parents die. Meanwhile emancipation has come to the slaves in the United States. The orphan daughter is brought back by the father's brother to the old home in the South and is reared on the same footing as his own daughter and his sister's daughter. The sister is the head of the household. The family has great wealth and high social position. The orphan who is very beautiful, also possesses great wealth in her own right. An English lord falls in love with the orphan. With a full knowledge of the strain of African blood and also in spite of the opposition of the aunt and cousin, he marries the orphan. The aunt's daughter marries an artist, who although he does not know it, also has a strain of Negro blood and is in fact a cousin of his wife. It is thus the threads are tangled.

"Tales of Darkest America"—Fenton Johnson; The Favorite Magazine, Publishers, Chicago, 1920. A booklet of interesting and well written stories some of which touch upon the race problem; others as for example: "A Very Important Business Man," and "The Sorrows of a Stenographer," are humorous in strain. It is to be regretted that a more attractive title was not given the booklet, for the stories are in fact, not "Tales of Darkest America," but of "Most Promising America."

"How the Black Man Found the Church"—George F. Bragg; Baltimore, a pamphlet of 16 pages. 15 cents. The writer here gives facts concerning the origin of organized churches among Negroes in the United States. Independent Negro churches had their origin as an outgrowth of the Free African Society which was established in Philadelphia, April 12, 1787. From this Society came the first Episcopal church among Negroes and the African Methodist Episcopal denomination.

"Historical Sketches of the Ancient Negro," A Compilation, Edward E. and Josephine E. Carlisle; The Cosmos Press, Cambridge, Mass., 1920. This work is an attempt to bring together in its ninety-seven pages information relative to the Negro in Ancient History. The work is not critical, and only a few references appear to have been consulted. Among the subjects discussed in the book are; "The Kingdom of Ethiopia," "The Reputed Negro Rulers of Egypt," "References to Ethiopia and Ethiopians in the Bible," "The Queen of Sheba," "Hannibal," and Septimus Severeas, An Emperor of Rome."

"Fact Stranger Than Fiction, Seventy-Five Years of a Busy Life With Reminiscences of Many Great and Good Men and Women"—John P. Green: The Riehl Printing Company, Cleveland, Ohio, 1920. This is an autobiography of one of the leading Negroes of Ohio. He says that he received great encouragement by reading the autobiographies of Frederick Douglass and Booker T. Washington, and he hopes that the story of his own life will "Place before the colored youth another concrete proof of the fact that even in the United States where the handicap of color and former restrictions are so much in evidence, ambition, united with initiative and reasonable endeavor, will surely win success along some worthy and honorable line."

"Alexander Crummell, An Apostle of Negro Culture," Occasional Papers Number 20, American Negro Academy—William H. Ferris; Washington, 1920. In this pamphlet of sixteen pages, the author discusses the contribution of Alexander Crummell to the intellectual progress of the Negro in the United States.

"Report of First Conference of Negro Industrial Welfare Workers"—Pittsburg, 1920 This Conference was held under the auspices of the Negro Industrial Welfare Workers Association of Pittsburg in Cooperation with the Employers' Association of Pittsburg, and the Urban League of Pittsburgh. Problems relating to welfare work among Negroes were considered such as: "Community Program for Negro Workers in Industrial Towns;" "The Negro Family in the New Community;" "Interpreting the Negro to His New Acquaintances;" "Health, Recreation:" "Best Methods of Housing Negro Workers;" "Effect of Broken Family Ties on Workers' Efficiency;" "The Southern Negro and Northern Law;" "Mental Elements in Negro Labor Adjustments;" "Negro's Future in Northern Industry;" "Employment Manager and Negro Labor;" and "Negro as a Skilled Worker."

"The Negro at Work During the World War and During Reconstruction," Statistics, Problems and Policies Relating to the Greater Inclusion of Negro Wage Earners in American Industry and Agriculture—George E. Haynes; Government Printing Office, Washington 1921. This is the second study of Negro labor made by the United States Department of Labor. The first, "Negro Migration in 1916-1917," was published in 1919. This second study covers among other things, the following: "Migration, its Causes and Volume;" "Problems of Negro Labor;" "White and Negro Workers in Basic Industries;" "Statistics on the Meat Packing and Steel Industries;" "Negro Labor in the United States Shipyards;" and "Negro Women in Industry." "The Negro at Work During the World War and During Reconstruction," is an important contribution to the literature of the Negro in industry.

"The History of the Negro Church"—Carter G. Woodson. The Associated Publishers Washington, 1921. $2.00. This brief volume of 330 pages gives in condensed form the history of the origin and development of the Negro church in what is now the United States from its beginnings through the first missionaries to slaves in the seventeenth century down to 1921. One of the most valuable features of the book is the large number of excellent pictures of the first Negroes who distinguished themselves as preachers. The book contains much valuable information. It is written in popular form, and is not a scholarly and exhaustive treatment of the subject. A serious defect of the book is that no references are cited, and no bibliographies are appended.

"A Social History of the American Negro"—Benjamin H. Brawley. The Macmillan Company, New York, 1921. $3.00. This is an important contribution to the books relating to the history of the Negro. The writer places emphasis upon the wrongs, the restrictions and the handicaps under which the Negro labors. Space is also given to the progress which the Negroes have made. It may be urged that too much space is given to particular individuals and incidents. While many would not agree with all of the views expressed by the author, it is nevertheless true that, "A Social History of the American Negro," is a scholarly production, and is an important work which should be consulted by all students of the race problem.

"History of Liberia,"—Thomas H. B. Walker. The Cornhill Publishing Company, Boston, 1921. $2.00. This book is an interesting, well illustrated and informing narrative on the founding and development of the Republic of Liberia. The various incidents and outside (foreign) influences that have had effect upon the Republic are discussed in detail. In addition to the historical treatise the author gives a brief account of the physical conditions of Liberia.

"Colored Girls' and Boys' Inspiring United States History and a Heart-to-Heart Talk About White Folks."—William Henry Harrison, Jr., The Searle and Dressler Company, Allentown, Pa. 1921. $1.50. This book is a compilation of matter taken very largely from the 1918-1919 edition of the Negro Year Book, with special introductions by the author to each section.

"Benson's Essays"—Oscar J. Benson; New York, 1921. A pamphlet of forty-two pages. These essays deal with the following subjects: "On Friendship," "On Learning," "On Beauty," "On Marriage," "On Love," "On Fear," "On Death," "On Justice," "On Success," "On Ethics and Religion," and "On Reading and Studying." The significance of this pamphlet lies in the fact that there are some Negro writers who are interested in subjects that do not deal with the race problem.

"Selected Editorials from the Norfolk Journal and Guide"—The Guide Publishing Company, Norfolk, Virginia, 1921. As the title indicates, this booklet of forty-two pages contains selected editorials from the Norfolk Journal and Guide, a weekly paper published at Norfolk, Virginia. The editorials selected are well written and deal with such important subjects as: "Education," "Art," "Business," "Politics," "Thrift," "Health," and "Lawlessness."

"John Merrick, A Biographical Sketch"—R. McCants Andrews; The Seaman Press, Durham, North Carolina, 1920. This is the history of one of the most successful business men which the race has produced. Starting as a bootblack he became in turn a proprietor of barber shops, the founder and head of a flourishing secret society and the president of the largest Negro insurance company in the world. This is a book that is to be read with great appreciation and profit.

"Finding a Way Out, An Autobiography"—Robert Russa Moton; Doubleday, Page and Company, New York, 1920. $2.50. This is an autobiography of the Principal of Tuskegee Institute, and like "Up From Slavery," the autobiography of his illustrious predecessor, "Finding a Way Out," gives the history of one who successfully mastered the difficulties and rose above the environment which the heritage from slavery had placed around him. The book is an important addition to the biographical literature of successful Negroes and forms a valuable companion to Booker T. Washington's "Up From Slavery."

"Unwritten History"—L. J. Coppin: The A. M. E. Book Concern, Philadelphia, 1919. This book is an autobiography of the life of Levi J. Coppin, Bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. In addition to being an autobiography, it is especially valuable for the intimate information which is given concerning conditions during the later days of slavery in Maryland. It is not to be understood that there is any formal treatise on slavery in Maryland, but rather the experiences of the Coppin family, free Negroes in that State. This is a valuable publication and should be widely read.

"The Progress of a Race, or The Remarkable Advancement of the American Negro"—J. L. Nichols and William H. Crogman: J. L. Nichols and Company, Naperville, Illinois, 1920. This work is a revision of an earlier edition of this book, published under the same title, and endeavors to bring down to date information, particularly biographical, relative to the Negro. Its chief value is in the biographical information and statistical data given. In this respect as was true of the earlier edition, it is a distinct contribution to the literature relating to the Negro in America.

"Missing Pages in American History, Revealing the Services of Negroes in The Early Wars in the United States of America, 1641-1815"—Laura F. Wilkes; Washington, 1919. This booklet of ninety-one pages contains much valuable information concerning the services and achievements of Negroes as soldiers in the Colonial Wars, the Revolutionary War, and the War of 1812. It is particularly useful as a reference book for classes in Negro history and should be widely used.

"The American Negro Soldier with the Red Hand of France"—Monroe Mason and Arthur Furr; The Cornhill Company, Boston, 1920. "The purpose of this book," states the foreword, "is to give to those who read it an accurate conception of what was experienced by a group of American Negro soldiers in France: that is, the 372nd Infantry, a National Guard unit composed of the First Separate Battalion of Infantry from the District Columbia, the 9th Separate Battalion from Ohio, Company L of the 6th Massachusetts Infantry and the First Separate Companies of Infantry from the States of Maryland, Connecticut and Tennessee. It is a history of this regiment."

"Two Colored Women with the American Expeditionary Forces"—Addie W. Hunton and Kathryn M. Johnson: Brooklyn Eagle Press, New York, 1920. This book is especially valuable for the reason that it gives information relative to all branches of the Negro troops furnished by the United States both combatant and non-combatant. It is the sort of information, unofficial, which can be given only as a result of personal observation and by those directly connected with some phase or branch of the operations of the War. Especially valuable are the illustrations which consist mainly of pictures of Negro officers, groups of enlisted men, scenes in the trenches, etc. Of special interest also is the information which is given relative to the discriminations practiced through the Y. M. C. A. work and in other ways, against the Negro soldiers.

"The American Negro in the World War"—by Emmett J. Scott; Washington, 1919. This book which was prepared by the author while Special Assistant to the Secretary of War, is semi-official. It is well illustrated with pictures of Negro soldiers recruited for the Great War, both while they were in training in this country and while in the trenches, and elsewhere in France. Although the book was prepared for popular reading, its documentary value will increase as time goes by. It will in due course become somewhat of a source book with reference to the history of the American Negro in the World War.

"Negro Migration During the War."—Emmett J. Scott. No. 16 of the Preliminary Economic Studies of the War Made by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, New York, 1920. As the title indicates, this volume presents a study of the migration to the North of Negroes during the three years, 1916 to 1918. Among the subjects presented are: "The Causes of the Migration," "The Stimulation of the Movement," "The Spread of the Movement," "Efforts to Check the Movement," "Effects of the Movement on the South," and "Public Opinion Regarding the Migration." This is an important addition to the literature relating to the migration of Negroes as a result of the World War.

"When Africa Awakes"—Hubert H. Harrison: The Porro Press, New York, 1920. This is an attempt to state the position and the point of view of the Negro, which has come about largely as a result of the effects of the World War. The writer devotes considerable space to the discussion of "The Negro and the War:" "The New Politics:" "The Problems of Leadership:" "The New Race Consciousness:" "Our International Consciousness:" and "Education and the Race." Discarding the controversy of lower and higher education, he maintains that the new knowledge which the Negro needs is, "Of the wider world and of the long past; that is, a grasp of the present situation and a knowledge of history, particularly the part the Negro has played in the long past and its significance." "When Africa Awakes," is an important addition to the literature of the race problem and should be widely read.

"From Superman to Man," Third Edition—J. A. Rogers; Chicago, 1917. By a series of discussions carried on between a Pullman porter and a passenger on the train, a white man, the race problem in practically all of its phases is discussed. The argument of the white passenger is that the Negro is foreordained to inferiority and that under no circumstance should there be any intermixture of the races. The argument of the Pullman porter, which he bases on extracts from various scientific writers such as Finot, Von Luchan, Johnson and Bloch, is that the situation of the Negro is largely due to circumstances, and that given the opportunity he will behave about the same as the members of any other race will behave; and that there is nothing in science to substantiate the assertion of the inferiority of the Negro. "From Superman to Man," is a valuable addition to the literature of the race problem and should be widely read.

"The Approaching Storm and How it May Be Averted. An Open Letter To Congress and The 48 Legislatures of the United States of America"—by J. A. Rogers: Chicago Branch National Equal Rights League of America, 1920. A pamphlet, 50 cents. The various solutions which have been proposed are discussed. In the writer's opinion the threatening storm arises from the oppressions under which the Negro labors and the danger that unless these oppressions are removed, the Negro will take the solution into his own hands.

"As Nature Leads"—J. A. Rogers; Chicago, 1919. $1.60. In this volume the writer sets forth his theory of racial intermixture. He finds in science support for the mixture of races. His conclusion is that racial intermixture, so called miscegenation, is but following nature's lead. He maintains that the whites are mainly responsible for racial intermixture and says: "While every group has a perfect right to keep itself to itself, to entirely control its own affairs, to say where it will and where it will not marry, yet the instant it enters the life of another group, so surely does it forfeit that right, and the other group has now a right to reciprocally interfere. It is clear that in the beginning the black man wished no association with the white and that the white has all along forced his company upon him. If the white man will not leave the Negro alone, but wishes to mix with him, the Negro has a perfect right, that is, if justice is to prevail, to say under what conditions that mixing shall take place."

"It is evident that the irritation proceeds rather from the Caucasian, therefore it is his duty to take the forward steps in adjustment, in short, it would be well to bear in mind that we have not so much a Negro problem as a Caucasian one."

"The Man Next Door"—Algernon B. Jackson; The Neaula Publishing Company, Philadelphia, 1919. The value of this book is that one of the ablest physicians and surgeons of the race has in a dispassionate manner made a keen analysis of the conditions of the Negroes in the United States. His discussions are of the present situation. He endeavors to state the facts as they concern both races to the end that the discussion may assist in effecting an understanding between the races.

"Dark Water Voices from Within the Veil"—W. E. Burghardt Du Bois; Harcourt, Brace and Howe, New York, 1920. "Dark Water" is a companion volume to "Souls of Black Folk," and is mainly the compilation of essays published by the author since "Souls of Black Folk" appeared some years ago. The writer attempts to give a further exposition of the thoughts and aspirations of the Negro. While lacking in some respects the literary finish and intensity of spirit displayed in "Souls of Black Folk," "Dark Water," is nevertheless a distinct contribution to the literature of the race problem, and no student of it seeking for a comprehensive view should omit from his readings what is set forth in "Voices From Within the Veil."

"The Black Problem"—D. D. T. Jabavu; The Lovedale Press, Lovedale, Cape Province South Africa. First edition 1920, second edition 1921. The author, a native African undertakes to state the race problem in South Africa from the black man's point of view. In his preface he states that "The times appeared to be ripe for a statement of a native's opinions on native matters." It also seemed necessary that the native people themselves should receive such friendly criticism and guidance as can be given to them by one of their own race." Continuing he says that "In the third place, the black man is in danger of losing confidence in the possibility of good coming his way from the white man." In the four parts of the book, the political, educational, agricultural and economic, and the social problems are discussed. This little volume is an important addition to not only the literature of the race problem in South Africa, but likewise to the race problem in the United States.

"The Bantu Past and Present"—S. M. Molema; The W. Green and Son Company, Edinburgh, 1920. 25 shillings. This is an ethnological and historical study of the native races of South Africa. An especial value of the book is that the author is himself, a native African, and has to some extent told his own story. It is an important edition to the literature of the history of South Africa and of the race problem there.

Books by White Persons On Or Relating to Negroes.

Each year a number of books by white persons, relating to the Negro are published. Condensed reviews of such books published in 1919-1921 follow:

"The Lynching Bee and Other Poems"—William E. Leonard; The B. W. Heubsch Company, New York, 1920. $1.50. The writer states in his foreword that he has "Brought together chiefly poems that attempt by some union of imagination and criticism to phrase the ominous turmoil of the times." The book does not, as the title indicates, devote itself to the race problem, for as a matter of fact only one chapter of the poems out of the six chapters in the book deals with the race problem. The titles of the other chapters are: "By Court and Decree," "March and Dance," "Piston-Rod and Belted Wheel," "Deep Sea and High Hill," and "Scraps of Paper." The book, nevertheless, is a contribution to the literature relating to lynchings.

"Songs and Tales From the Dark Continent,"—by Natalie Curtis Burlin; G. Schirmer Company, New York, 1920. This book is made up of records from the singings and the sayings of two native Africans, formerly students at Hampton Institute, C. Kamba Simango of the Ndau tribe, Portuguese, East Africa; and Madikane Cele of the Zulu tribe, South Africa. Both the songs and the tales are important additions to African folk-lore. Another important and valuable feature of the book is the illustrations of native musical instrumen ts and textile designs. There are in the collections, spirit songs, love songs, children's songs, laboring songs, dance songs, war songs, and songs of lament. The folk-tales include in addition to animal fables, a story of creation, and some examples of African proverbs.

"Hampton Series Negro Folk-Songs," Books 3 and 4—50 cents each. Recorded by Natalie Curtis Burlin; The G. Schirmer Company, New York 1918 and 1919. Books 1 and 2, published in 1918 are selections of spirituals. Books 3 and 4 are selections of "Work-and-Play-Songs." Among the selections recorded are: "Peanut-Pickin' Song," "Hammerin' Song," "Chicka-Hanka" (A Railroad Work Song), " 'Liza Jane," (A Dance-Game Song), "Cott'n Pickin' Song," "Cott'n Dance Song," "Cott'n Packin' Song" and "Corn-Shuckin' Song." This is a very interesting and valuable addition to the collections of Negro folk-songs.

"The Emperor Jones," A Study of the Psychology of Fear and of Race Superstition.—Eugene G. O'Neill; Boni and Liveright. $2.00. New York, 1921. This is the play which Charles Gilpin, the Negro actor has made famous through the great dramatic power which he has shown in its presentation in New York City and elsewhere. "The action of this play takes place on an island in the West Indies as yet not self-determined." In this same volume are two other plays by Mr. O'Neill, "Diff'rent," A Story of a Sex-Starved Woman, and "The Straw," A Comedy in Three Acts. These two latter plays do not refer to the Negro.

"The Upward Path." A Reader for Colored Children—Compiled by Myron T. Pritchad and Mary White Ovington; Harcourt, Brace and Howe, New York, 1920. This volume is made up of selections from various Negro writers and consists of poems, stories, sketches and addresses. These bear eloquent testimony of the richness of the literary products of our Negro writers.' 'The Upward Path" is a valuable book for use as a reader in schools, for while the selections give to the child examples of good literary standards, they at the same time instill pride of race.

"The Shadow"—Mary White Ovington; Harcourt, Brace and Howe, New York, 1920. This is a novel very interestingly and entertainly written, that gives in the language of the publishers, "The story of a beautiful Southern girl of aristocratic family whom a strange fate has placed in childhood on the doorstep of a Negro cabin, and whom fate again sends into the white world when she discovers the secret of her birth. A tale of the Negro in his cabin and the master in the great house, as well as of the Northern factory and workshop, with a sane and sympathetic attitude toward Northerner and Southerner, black and white."

"The Life and Works of Paul Laurence Dunbar"—Lida Keck Wiggins; J. L. Nichols and Company, Naperville, Illinois, 1920. This is the same volume as originally published by Dodd, Mead and Company, 1907, and contains Dunbar's complete poetical works, his best short stories, numerous anecdotes and his complete biography. The volume has numerous illustrations, and places in a convenient form the writings of America's most famous Negro poet.

"More E. K. Means"—G. P. Putnam's Sons, $1.50. New York, 1919. Ten stories of Negro life. "Further E. K. Means"—G. P. Putnam's Sons, $1.50. New York, 1921. Seven stories of Negro life. These are two groups of very interesting and entertaining stories. The same criticism, however, may be made of these two later volumes of E. K. Means as was made of the first volume, published in 1918, namely: "While these stories have literary merit and are well done, they present no truths; they are not stories that are representative of the significant, the important phases of Negro life, but rather are presentations of the comic, the ridiculous features of the lower types of Negroes; those types which each day are becoming less and less representative of what the Negroes in America really are. The chief defect of this class of stories is that the attempt is made to perpetuate characteristics of the ante-bellum Negroes."

"Highly Colored"—Octavus Roy Cohen; Dodd, Mead and Company, New York, 1921. In this work which consists of six stories: "Auto-Intoxication," "All's Swell That Ends Swell," "The Survival of the Fastest," "The Ultima Fool," "Mistuh Macbeth," and "Here Comes the Bride," the writer depicts in a humorous way what he considers the characteristics of the Southern Negro. There is nothing of importance to be gained by reading the book. It is written in Negro dialect and displays the ridiculous side of the old Negro rather than the aims and aspirations of the present day Negro.

"The Wildcat"—Hugh Wiley. The George H. Doran Company, New York, 1920. In this book the author gives the career of the principal character, "The Wildcat," a Negro. He portrays "The Wildcat" as an illiterate, shiftless and carefree person who cares only for dice shaking. There is nothing enlightening in the book. It shows only the ridiculous side of the Negro.

"The Sword of Nemesis"—R. Archer Tracy; The Neale Publishing Company, New York, 1919. This is a book of fiction that treats of conditions in the West Indies and in addition offers interesting information about the problem of shades of color there. Unlike the United States, in the West Indies the Negro population is divided by caste into blacks and coloured (mulattoes) with the latter occupying the superior position. As a result there has developed a considerable caste feeling. The hero of the story is a man of dark complexion who has fallen in love with a beautiful octoroon girl, daughter of a wealthy planter. True love overcomes all obstacles and in due course the two are married. The purpose of the author appears to have been simply to tell a story. This is well done. He also by chance through his characters developes a situationwhich unconsciously throws light upon the race problem in the West Indies.

"Romulus Coucou"—Paul Reboux; Ernest Flammarion Publishers, Paris, 1920. This is a novel with the scene laid in New Orleans and deals with the color question as it enters into the race problem from the standpoint of social relations; that is, the intermarriage of the white and the near white. In the love affair of Romulus Coucou, a near white with a French girl, all phases of the race problem are touched upon, even to lynching which was Coucou's fate. This book is a contribution to the literature of the race problem from the standpoint of the French.

"Psychological Examining in the United States Army," Volume 15 ,National Academy of Sciences—Robert M. Yerkes; Government Printing Office, Washington, 1921. This is report of the psychological examinations of soldiers drafted by the United States for the World War. Chapter VIII, "Intelligence of the Negro," gives the results of the psychological examinations of Negro soldiers. According to these examinations the Negro soldiers show a considerable lower rating than that for white soldiers, and Negro officers' rating below that of white officers. A separation of the Negro enlisted men into yellow and black gave a higher rating for the yellow than for the black. Interesting lights as to how these ratings may have been vitiated is indicated by the following. One observation said: "Speaking English as they did the Negroes felt the artificiality of the situation as they would not have felt it if there had been even a sprinkling of non-English-speaking subjects in the group." Another observation was that, "Beta as usually given is unsatisfactory as applied to Negroes, and suggested as the reason that, 'It unnaturally limits the Nergo mind where it is relatively strong—in the use of language.'"

Further sidelights are shown with reference to the ratings of Negroes by the more or less general complaints made unofficially and privately both by the Negro, enlisted men and officers relative to discriminations of one sort or another.

"A Builder of the New South. The Life Work of Daniel Augustus Tompkins"—by George Tayloe Winston; Doubleday, Page and Company, New York, 1920, $3.00. While the entire book is of interest because it deals with the recent development of the South, the chapter on, "Early Life on the Southern Plantation," and "The Old Industrial South," are of especial interest because of the information given relative to the conditions during slavery times and since. It is an interesting, well written and readable volume. It is a contribution to the literature relative to the development of the new South.

"God's Dealings With the Negro."—R. Mayers; The Richard G. Badger Company, Boston, 1919. $1.50. In this volume, the writer endeavors to point out some of the difficulties, humiliations and wrongs which the Negroes in the South suffer. He has traveled through the South and tells of some of his actual experiences. His conclusion is "That God has dealt very harshly with the Negroes because they have not sought him." It is through the church, the writer feels, that justice to the Negro will ultimately come.

"Africa and the Discovery of America," Volume I—Leo Weiner; Innes and Sons, Philadelphia, 1920. This work is a critical study, "From the Sources," of the influence and part that Africa has played in the discovery of America. The author points out that there are a number of supposedly Indian words which are in reality of African origin, as for example canoe and the appelations for the sweet potato and yam. Tobacco and its smoking, the author brings evidence to show, were introduced into America by Africans. He further points out that in addition to the large number of Negroes who accompanied the early explorers to America, there are evidences which indicate that before Columbus' time Africans had crossed from Guinea to America.

"Primitive Society"—Robert H. Lowie; The Boni and Liverright Company, New York, 1920. $3.00. This book attempts to give in a summary way, important facts relative to primitive society, not, however, to all phases of primitive culture but to those aspects, "Known as social organization; that is, the groups into which society is divided, the functions of these groups, their mutual relations, and the factors determining their growth." While this is a book for the layman, it is approvingly quoted by scholars. Anyone desiring a knowledge about social origin should include this book in his readings. It is of especial interest and value to those desiring information about primitive culture in Africa.

"Old World Traits Transplanted"—Robert E. Park and Herbert A. Miller; Harper and Brothers, New York City, 1921 $2.50. This book is one of the eleven volumes in the series of Americanization Studies, made through funds provided by the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The book endeavors to show what heritages the immigrants have brought to America. In the section defining heritages it is pointed out that: "Different races and nationalities attach values to different things, and different values to the same thing. This is the chief factor in the problem of "Americanization," of harmonizing the life of the immigrants with our own. Every human group has developed in the course of its experience a certain fund of values particular to itself and a set of attitudes toward these values. Thus a poem, a folk dance, a church, a school, a coin, is a value, and the appreciation of any one of these objects is an attitude. The object, the practice, the institution, is the value: the feeling toward it is the attitude. For the purpose of the present study we call the fund of attitudes and values which an immigrant group brings to America—the totality of its sentiments and practices—its "Heritage." This book has value to students of the race problem because of the similarities of the conditions and the problems concerning the man farthest down, be he a peasant in Europe or the Negro in America.

"The Negro: An American Asset."—S. J. Fisher, Board of Missions for Freedmen of Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A.; Pittsburgh, 1920. 60 cents. The author is the president and publication secretary of the Board of Missions for Freedmen of the Northern Presbyterian Church, and brings to his task the rich fund of information which in this capacity he has collected. While giving information about the work which his denomination is doing for the Negro, the book is essentially a study of the race problem. He reaches the conclusion that the Negro is not a liability to the Nation, but is an asset. The writer points out that the race problem is not to be defined and solved by the South alone. He says, "Let no one be deterred by the oft repeated assertion that it is peculiarly a Southern problem, intelligible only to those who dwell in contact with so many of this race, and to be handled defined and solved by them alone. With all proper recognition of the closeness of such contact, and familiarity with the difficulties, we challenge the concusion that only those who dwell South of Mason and Dixon Line are fitted for this investigation, or capable of the best method of developing the Negro. Fact and experience are against such a conclusion."

"The Great Menace, Americanism or Bolshevism?"—George Whitefield Mead; Dodd, Mead and Company, New York, 1920. As the title indicates, this book was written to show the danger threatening America from Bolshevism. The writer accepts at face value the various reports that were in circulation in this respect during 1918 and 1920. Subsequent events appear to indicate that these reports were very much exaggerated. "The Great Menace" may be considered the book of the hour and having less and less value as time goes on and we get farther and farther away from the events and effects of the World War.

"Thirty Years of Lynching in the United States, 1889-1918"—Published by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; New York, 1919. 50 cents. This booklet of 105 pages endeavors to make a summary of the facts relative to lynchings in the United States from 1889 to 1918. In addition to tables of lynchings, there is a chronological list of persons lynched in the United States from 1889 to 1918 inclusive, arranged by states. The nationality of the persons is also given. The work is especially valuable as a source book.

"The Soul of John Brown"—Stephen Graham; Macmillan and Company, New York, 1920. $3.00 Books by foreigners on the race problem in the United States are in general, keen and penetrating in their criticisms and observations. Such is "The Soul of John Brown," by Stephen Graham, an English newspaper correspondent, who made an extensive pilgrimage through the South from Virginia to Louisiana to ascertain how after fifty years the ex-slaves were living, what they were doing, how the experiment through liberation had prospered, and what was their future in the American commonwealth. This volume is a report of what he saw and heard. One of the most important features of the book is the insight which is given with reference to the attitude of the average white man in the South toward the race problem. This volume is a distinct and important contribution to the literature of the race problem.

"From Slave to Citizen"—Charles M. Melden; The Methodist Book Concern, New York and Cincinnati, 1921. $1.75. The book is not as the title indicates, a recital of the progress of Negroes since their emancipation; but is a serious discussion by one who has spent long years in educational work among them of the various phases of the race problem, the obstacles which have confronted them and the helps which they have received during the past century. The purpose of the book, according to the writer, is "To promote good will and a kindly sympathy for the Negro." It is worthy of careful and serious perusal.

"The Racial Prospect"—Seth K. Humphrey; Charles Scribner Sons, New York, 1920. $2.00. This is a rewriting and an expansion of the author's book entitled, "Mankind." One chapter of the book is devoted to the Negro. "The race problem," the writer states" "overshadows every other in that it centers in the mulatto, who is a part of both white and black." The writer is of the opinion that social adjustment should be made such as to to wholly discourage racial intermixing. His discussion of the race problem, or rather of the mulatto does not give any new information or suggestions relative to race adjustment.

"The Great Steel Strike"—Wm. Z. Foster; The B. W. Huebsh Company, New York, 1920. $1.00. This book is an account, as the title indicates, of the great steel strike, 1919-20. One chapter, "National and Racial Elements," is devoted to a description of the part the Negro played in the strike. Some of the Negroes were unionized and struck with the other laborers. The great majority of the Negroes, however, were according to the author used as strike breakers. He stated that "Reports indicate that The Steel Trust recruited and shipped from thirty to forty thousand Negroes into the mills as strike breakers." The race situation became so serious that, "the National Committee for Organizing Iron and Steel Workers requested President Gompers to arrange a conference between prominent Negro leaders and trade union officials to the end that the proper remedies may be indicated." The author maintains the mere opening of the door of the unions to the Negroes will not settle the race problem in industry. In spite of the difficulties, the author is confident that eventually the Negro will take his place side by side and fighting with the white industrial workers.

"The Negro, An Asset of the American Nation"—Rodney W. Roundy, Home Missions Council, New York City, 1920. 10 cents. A pamphlet in which facts relating to the progress and achievements of the Negro are set forth to show that the Negro from a national standpoint, is an asset and not a liability. Attention is called to the fact that the Negro has always been a patriot and that the country has had no war in which he did not play his part. The pamphlet is prepared with special reference to its use by Mission Boards and other agencies working for the uplift of the Negro.

"Crime in America and the Police"—Raymond B. Fosdick; The Century Company, New York, 1920. Contrasts the crime conditions in America and Europe and points out that the rate for homicide, burglary and robbery is very much higher in the cities of the United States than in the cities of Europe. The author devotes some space to the problem of crime among Negroes.

"The Chicago Race Riots"—Carl Sandburg; Harcourt, Brace and Howe, New York, 1919. This booklet is a description of the Chicago race riot of July 1919. from a newspaper correspondent's point of view. In addition to a discussion of the immediate riot, there are chapters devoted to such subjects as: "The Background," "The Negro Migration; "Real Estate;" "Negroes and Rising Rents;" "Unions and the Color Line;" "Demand for Negro Labor;" "New Industrial Opportunities;" and "After Each Lynching." This book is an important contribution to the literature of race riots.

"Negro Migration: Changes in Rural Organization and Population of the Cotton Belt" Thomas Jackson Woofter, jr.; W. D. Gray, New York, 1920. This book is a study of the changes in rural organization and in population of the cotton belt section of the South, which have taken place largely as a result of Negro migration. Many interesting and important facts are brought out, particularly that migrations are: sometimes local; that is, within a county; sometimes from one part of a State to another part of the State, as for example, the movement of the rural Negro population of Georgia is toward the west and southwestern part of the State; sometimes from one section of the South to another section, as well as sometimes toward the North. This book is an important addition to the recent literature on the subject of migration.

"A Social History of the American Family"—Arthur W. Calhoun; Volumes II and III. The Arthur A. Clark Company, Cleveland, 1919. A considerable section of the two volumes is devoted to the discussion of the Negro, "His Morality:" "Slave Breeding:" "Racial Associations of the Slaves with Their Masters' Children:" "Miscegenation During Slavery" "Race Mixture During Slavery Times of Whites with Negroes and of Negroes with Whites" and "Miscegenation Since Emancipation." The author takes the position that slavery to a large extent is responsible for immorality and that since emancipation there has been a steady progress toward higher moral standards.

"The Rising Tide of Color Against White World Supremacy"—Lothrop Stoddard; Charles Scribners' Sons, New York, 1920. $3.00. This book is an important contribution to the literature of the race problem from a world standpoint. In it the author makes a survey of the age-long struggle between the races and its application to the present day world politics. The contents of the book are divided into three parts. Part One, "The Rising Tide of Color," with chapters on; "The World of Color;" "Yellow Man's Land;" "Brown Man's Land;" "Black Man's Land;" and "Red Man's Land," Part Two, "The Ebbing Tide of White," with chapters on "The White Flood;" "The Beginning of the Ebb;" "The Modern Peloponnesian War;" "The Shadowing of White Solidarity;" and Part Three, "The Deluge of the Dikes," with chapters on "The Outer Dikes," "The Inner Dikes," and "The Crisis of the Ages."

"A New Day for the Colored Woman Worker," A Study of Colored Women in Industries in New York City—Nelle Swartz; New York, 1919. This pamphlet of thirty-nine pages is a study of Negro women in industries during the World War. It is a valuable addition to the literature of the Negro women in industries.

"Colored Women as Industrial Workers in Philadelphia," A Study Made by the Consumers' League of Eastern Pennsylvania. Philadelphia, 1920. This pamphlet of fifty pages gives valuable information relative to colored women as industrial workers. Among the subjects covered in the pamphlet are: "Some Industries of Philadelphia Employing Colored Women and the Wages They Pay;" "Collective Bargaining and the Colored Worker," "Her Schooling and Training and How She Finds Employment," "Criticisms by Employers," "Are Colored People Getting a Square Deal?" "Will the Colored and the White Work Together?"

"A Study of the Tenant Systems of Farming in the Yazoo-Mississippi Delta" E. A. Boeger; United States Department of Agriculture, Bulletin Number 337, Washington 1916. This study is based on records relating to the business of tenants on plantations in the Yazoo-Mississippi Delta. Comparison is made between share croppers, share renters and cash renters. Estimates of which system is the best from the point of view of the landlord and the point of view of the tenant are given.

"The Negro Women of Gainesville, Georgia"—Ruth Reed; Phelps-Stokes Fellowship Studies, Number 6, University of Georgia, 1921. This is the first of the Phelps-Stokes Studies made by a woman and is of a small town in North Georgia with a population of some 4,700 whites and some 1,500 Negroes. The conditions of the Negroes were investigated as to, property, homes, employment of women, family incomes, health and morality, education, lodges, insurance and the churches. The Study while painstaking and careful, does not present any new light with reference to conditions among Negroes.

"Forty Years of Public Schools in Mississippi With Special Reference to the Education of the Negro"—Stuart Grayson Noble; Teachers College, Columbia University Contributions to Educations, Number 94. Columbia University, New York City, 1918. As the title indicates, this is more of a historical than an analytical study of public school education in Mississippi. Among the subjects considered in this work are: "The Social and Economic Setting, 1870-1871;" "The Attitude of the Several Social Elements Toward Negro Education;" "Education During the Reconstruction;" "Education Under Southern Rule, 1876-1886;" "The Distribution of the Common School Fund;" "Public Sentiment in Regard to the Education of the Negro Since 1886;" and "The Influence of Education Upon the Life of the Negro."

"Educational Adaptations," Report of Ten Years' Work of the Phelps-Stokes Fund 1910-1920. Thomas Jesse Jones, New York, 1920. In addition to a history of the Phelps-Stokes Fund and a statement of its policies, this pamphlet of ninety-two pages gives important information concerning the purpose of Negro education in the United States and its financial support. There are other chapters on "School Improvement," "Cooperation of the Phelps-Stokes Fund with Other Educational and Religious Agencies," "An Account of the Phelps-Stokes Fellowships at the University of Georgia and the University of Virginia," "The Work of the Fund in Fostering the University Commission on Race Question" and "The Southern Publicity Committee."

"A History of Suffrage in the United States"—Kirk and Porter; The University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 1919. Price, $1.25. As would be expected, a great deal of attention is given to the problems of suffrage as they relate to the Negro. This book is a valuable contribution to the literature of the subject of the franchise.

"Some Problems of Reconstruction"—Annie M. MacLean; A. C. McClurg and Company, Chicago, 1921. $1.00. This work includes a series of essays on problems facing the American nation today. One of these essays is on the Negro problem. The facts of the problems are stated, and the necessity for their solution is emphasized.

"The Negro in Virginia Politics, 1865-1902"—Richard L. Morton; Phelps-Stokes Fellow in the University of Virginia. $1.50. This is the fourth number in the series of studies on the race problem promoted by the Phelps-Stokes Fund. The book covers in somewhat extended detail, the history of Negro suffrage from its beginning up to 1902. The chief value of the book is in the historical information which is given rather than in the conclusions which the author draws.

"Reconstruction in Louisiana"—Ella Lonn; G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, 1919. $3. This book is an analysis of the situation in Louisiana during the period of Reconstruction. The book contains a wealth of detailed information and is an important addition to the literature of the Reconstruction Period.

"The Development of State Legislation Concerning the Free Negro" Franklin Johnson; The Arbor Press, New York, 1918. The author has endeavored to present a complete record of all legislative enactments up to 1918, that have ever been adopted by any state and such parts of federal legislation as had to do with the Negro. The book is divided into two parts. Part I considers "The General Development of Legislation," and has chapters on, "The Negro Problem in Legislation;" "General Development of Restrictive Legislation;" "General Development of Protective Legislation;" and "Social Influences Affecting the Legislation." Part II is a detailed review of the laws, first of Federal legislation and second, of legislation in the several states.

"Northern Opinion of Approaching Secession, October, 1859, November, 1860"—Lawrence Tyndale Lowry; Smith College Studies in History, Volume III, Number 4, 1918. This is an interesting compilation of facts (gleaned from periodicals and newspapers of the time mentioned in the title of the treatise) on the opinion of the North toward the unrest caused by slavery in the South. The collected data are well organized and an informing discussion of the situation is given. That the information is comprehensive appears from the full bibliography given in the footnotes on each page.

"The Negro Problem"—Julia E. Johnsen; The H. W. Wilson Company, New York, 1921. $2.25. The purpose of this volume is to furnish an interpretation of the leading aspects of the Negro problem of today in compact and convenient form for the student debater or general reader. Following a preliminary view of the history and status of the Negro there are selected articles on, "Race Prejudice," "Amalgamation," "Education," "Lynching," "Race Riots," "Peonage," "Suffrage," "Segregation," "Colonization," etc. This is one of the handbook series, published by the H. W. Wilson Company and follows the usual plan of this series, reflecting with impartial references, opinions and conditions. This book has a carefully selected, classified and annotated bibliography.

"The Negro as An Economic Factor in Alabama"—Waights Gibbs Henry; Publishing House M. E. Church South, Nashville, Tennessee, 1919. This is a thesis submitted for the Ph. D. degree at Boston University. While showing much laborious effort and painstaking reasearch, there is no special addition to the already extant information relative to the Negro. The chief value of the book is that it emphasizes the point of view of an increasing number of Southern white people who are endeavoring to deal justly with the Negro

"Distinguished Service Citizenship, Proceedings Annual Meeting Southern Sociological Congress for 1919.—J E. McCulloch, Editor. As at previous meetings of the Congress the papers presented dealt with social improvement under the following heads: "Democracy," "Community Service," "Public Health," "Child Welfare," "Race Relations," "Industrial Progress," and "A Program for Churches." The section on "Race Relations," contains some important papers relative to the race problem.

"The Voice of the Negro"—Robert T. Kerlin; E. P. Dutton & Company, New York 1919. $2.50. The chief value of this book is that from a study of the literature of the Negro, his newspapers and magazines, a Southern white man has attempted to state what the Negro is thinking, how he is feeling and what are his grievances and demands. "The Voice of the Negro," is an important contribution to the literature of the race problem.

"The Negro Faces America"—Herbert J. Seligmann; Harper and Brothers, New York 1920. $1.75. The author presents a very informing discussion of the race problem. His presentation to a very large extent gives the point of view of the white persons who are backing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Especially valuable is the chapter on, "The Scapegoat of City Politics;" that is the Negro. This book is an important addition to the literature of the race problem.

"A Future Menace to World Peace, France's Black Militarism Sidelights on the French Colonial System"—By Ajax; Dietrich Reimer, Berlin, 1919, a booklet of 45 pages. According to this writer, the use of black troops by the French during the World War was to a large extent a failure. They were placed in the most exposed positions and were permitted to be killed off in exceedingly large numbers. In some instances the author claims that from 60 to 70 per cent of a battalion were destroyed. Thousands of others were killed by the cold weather. France, it is maintained, used most severe methods in recruiting these colonials in Africa. This book is clearly a propaganda publication designed to discredit the use of black troops by the French. In contrast we have from the French, and other sources, reports of the excellence of these black troops and the valuable service which they rendered in helping the Allies to win the war. The use of black troops in European wars, the author maintains, is contrary to the principles of international law and the position of France in this matter constitutes a future menace to world peace.

"Colonies and Calumnies, A Reply to Sir Hugh Cliffords German Colonies"—By Han George von Doering, Acting Governor of Togoland; Dietrich Reimer, Publisher, Berlin, 1919. As the title indicates, this booklet of 94 pages is a defense of Germany's treatment of the natives in Togoland. One gathers, however, from a reading of this publication that the question raised is not a just treatment of the natives, but as to whether the German treatment of the natives was less cruel than that of the English, as for example; a considerable space is devoted to the discussion of floggings as administered by the Germans and by the English. If only a part of the charges alleged in this booklet is true there was not just treatment of the natives either in Togoland, as ruled by the Germans or in the adjacent Gold Coast, ruled by the English.

"The Backward Peoples and Our Relations With Them"—Sir Harry H. Johnston; Oxford University Press, Oxford, England, 1920. A booklet of sixty pages in which the writer states that in India, Indo-Malaysia, North and South America, (Indians and Negroes) and in Africa, the "Backward Peoples" are found. He then devotes a chapter to "Why are They Backward?" naming as causes: adverse geographical conditions, wars, invasions diseases; but the "Backward Peoples" have mostly stopped in some rut, some siding of human culture. A considerable space is devoted to what the "Backward Peoples" owe to the white man in the way of better living conditions, the stopping of inter-tribal wars and the supression of the slave trade. He concludes with a section on "Where the White Man Wronged the Coloured." This is a very interesting publication; the writer, however, has not presented any new point of view or any significant suggestions as to the attitudes and relations of dominant nations to these so called "Backward Peoples."

"The Black Man's Burden,"—E. D. Morel; The National Labour Press, London, 1920. The author points out that while much has been said about the white man's burden, attention should be called to the burden which the white man has placed upon the black man. This burden, which the civilized nations of modern times have laid upon the black man, falls into two distinct periods: first, that of the slave trade, when millions of Africans were exported to America; second, the more recent period of invasion, political control, capitalistic exploitation, and what the author calls the more recent development of militarism; that is the use of the native African for military purposes. The great danger, however, in the author's opinion is that the power of modern capitalistic exploitation, assisted by modern engines of destruction may yet do what the slave trade, war, diseases and other things have thus failed to do. It is to this danger that the writer calls special atention. He suggests that the League of Nations could do much to protect Tropical Africa from the evils of capitalistic exploitation and militarism. The charge of militarism, it appears, is especially against the French. If one reads the author correctly, his position is that France should not in any future war make use of soldiers drawn from Negro Africa.

"Empire and Commerce in Africa"—Leonard Woolf; George Allen and Unwin, Ltd. This volume is a discussion of conditions in Africa immediately preceding the World War. The book is divided into three parts, under the headings: "International Economic Policy, "Economic Imperialism in Africa," and "Reflections and Conclusions." Although the book deals with conditions before the World War, nevertheless the descriptions and conclusions are applicable to conditions that now prevail. Concerning the future of Africa the writer says, "The land in Africa should be reserved for the natives. Systematic education of the natives with a view of training them (a) to take a part in, and eventually to control the Government of the country, and (b) to make the best use of their land and its mineral and other resources.

The application of all revenue raised in Africa to the development of the country and the education, health, etc., of the native inhabitants. Absolute prohibition of alcohol. Complete neutralization of Africa, i. e., in no case shall any military operations between European States be allowed in Africa; no recruiting of native troops; military forces to be reduced everywhere to the minimum for police duties and maintaining order, the dismantling of all fortifications and naval bases, and the prohibition of all submarines in African waters.

"Africa: Slave or Free?"—Jno. H. Harris; E. P. Dutton and Company, New York City 1920. In this volume the author discusses the problems of Africa in the light of the changes brought about in that continent as a result of the World War. He looks to the League of Nations as a means of preserving Africa from exploitation and to provide for the protection of the natives so that they will have opportunity for education, for industrial and political development and especially the preservation to them of the exercise of the franchise. Concerning this, the author says, "The first element in the super-structure is franchise. The presence of the European in Africa today is, we are told, due to hundreds of political instruments drafted, amended, and formally accepted by African rulers and councils. For the purpose of signing these documents European statesmen have invariably declared that Africans were in every case competent to arrive at decisions of far-reaching political importance. It is surely untenable for these same European statesmen now to deny the competence of Africans to consider, amend and agree to political and administrative instruments of relatively unimportant administrative value."

"The Red Book of West Africa," Historical and Descriptive, Commercial and Industrial Facts, Figures and Resources—Compiled and edited by Allister Macmillan; the W. H. and L. Collingridge Company, London, 1920. The title indicates the scope of this publication This book claims to be the first of its kind ever issued on West Africa. In addition to accounts of the businesses conducted by white firms in West Africa, there is extended information about the businesses conducted by native Africans. One is especially impressed by the number of businesses conducted by natives and the extent of their resources. It is not generally known that at Lagos, Accra, Calabar, Freetown and other places in West Africa the native business man is carrying on commercial transactions in the most approved and modern manner, and is handling the latest forms of merchandise; as for example, the S. Thomas and Company, African General Merchants of Lagos. "On the Marina at Elegbata, Itolo, Offin, and Idunmagbo are other stores, where large quantities of Nigerian produce are handled by the firm for export, including skins and hides. The firm has a tannery at Elegbata, and its specially prepared African sole leather is in great demand amongst colonial shoemakers. Branches of the business are established at Agege, Gbado, Agbesi, Alagada, Abeokuta, Eruwa Road, Ikoko, Ifo, Itori, Isawo, Ibadan, Ileigbo, Ikirun, Ilorin, Kano, Lafenwa, Lalupon, Owowo, Opeji, Olodo and Oshogbo, with an agency at Zaria and factories at Iwo, Ede and other stations. These branches, etc., are being increased by others at the Tin Fields, also at Calabar and in the Cameroons, with probable extensions to Sierra Leone and the Gold Coast." "W. A. Dawodu and Company, Importers of Motor Cars, Cycles Spare Parts and Accessories, Builder of Motor Transport Lorries, Rickshaws, General Mechanics. This firm has large premises in various parts of Lagos, including a big store in Egerton Square, and a retain depot in Bishop Street, their head office and works being in Daddy Alago Street; and the organization and equipment of the many departments testify well to the firm's thorough knowledge and practical ability in everything pertaining to their trade."

THE NEW MAP OF AFRICA

Native Population South Africa Increased More Rapidly Than Europeans.

In South Africa there has been in recent years a notable increase in the native population. When the Union of South Africa was established in 1904, that country had 1,116,806 Europeans or whites, and 567,962 coloured persons; that is, those of mixed blood—Hindu, Malay, etc., and 3,491,056 natives.

In 1911, there were in the Union of South Africa 1,276,242 Europeans, 678,146 coloured persons and 4,019,006 natives; an increase for the seven years for the whites of 14.28 per cent, for the coloured of 19.40 per cent and for the natives of 15.12 per cent.

In 1913, the population was: whites, 1,339,000; natives and coloured, 4,935,000. In 1920, the population was: whites, 1,504,000; natives and coloured, 5,801,000. The increase for the sixteen years, 1904-1920, was: for the whites, 387,194 or 34.6 per cent; for the natives and coloured, 1,742,000 or 42.9 per cent. The average increase per annum for the sixteen years was: for the whites, 24,199; for the natives and coloured, 108,875. The proportion of whites in the total population in 1904 was 21.5 per cent. In 1920, the proportion was 20.6 per cent.

In the province of Natal in 1901, there were 63,821 whites and 786,912 natives. In 1911, there were 98,582 whites and 951,808 natives; an increase of 34,761 or 54 per cent for the whites and an increase of 164,896 or 21 per cent for the natives. In the Province of the Orange Free State in 1890 there were 77,716 whites and 129,787 natives and coloured persons. In 1911 there were 175,189 whites and 352,985 natives and coloured persons; the increase for the whites during the twenty-one years was 97,473 or 125 per cent; for the natives and coloured 223,198 or 172 per cent. In the Crown Colony of Basutoland the native population increased in the twenty years 1891 to 1911, from 218,324 to 404,507 or 85 per cent.

In contrast to the rapid increase in native population in South Africa, it is claimed by some that in recent years there has been a great decrease in the native population of Central and Eastern Africa. The Sleeping Sickness and other diseases have in these regions destroyed many thousands of people. This is especially true in Uganda and in the Congo. The exploitation of the natives for commercial purposes has also, it is claimed, destroyed many thousands of them and by some it is said this cause is even more fatal to them than diseases.

WHERE BLACK MEN GOVERN.

ABYSSINIA

GOVERNMENT

The empire of Abyssinia, or Ethiopia, is made up of the kingdoms of Tigre and Lasta, in the Northeast; Amhara and Gojam in the West and center; Shoa in the South; and territories and dependencies as far as Kaffa in the South, and Harar in the Southeast. The area is 350,000 square miles. The population is estimated to be 8,000,000.

Abyssinia is a very ancient country. There is much evidence of early intercourse with the Jews. When the first European explorers came into the country they found the inhabitants chanting the psalms of David. Tradition is that here was the kingdom of the queen of Sheba and that the rulers of the country can trace their descent from Menelik, son of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

The political institutions are few in character and analogous to those of Mediaeval Europe. In 1908 a council of ministers was constituted by the emperor. Ministers were appointed for Justice, Finance, Commerce, War, Foreign Affairs, Posts and Telegraph, Interior, and a sort of Lord Privy Seal. The Minister of War is the most important. The regular army contingents from the various provinces, consist of about 150,000 men, and is supplemented by irregulars and a territorial army. In 1889 Menelik, king of Shoa, became emperor. He died December, 1913, and was succeeded by the son of one of his daughters, Li Yasu, born 1896. September 27, 1916, he was deposed and Waizeru Zanditu, another daughter of Menelik was made Empress. She was crowned Feb. 11, 1917. An agreement was signed December 13, 1906, whereby Great Britain, France and Italy undertook to respect and endeavor to preserve the integrity of Abyssinia. Neither power is to be granted an industrial concession that will work an injury to the other two powers. They are to abstain from intervention in Abyssinian internal affairs, to concert together for the safeguarding of their respective interests in territories bordering on Abyssinia, to make agreements concerning railroad construction in Abyssinia. Another convention of the same date provides for the prohibition or regulation of the importation of arms and ammunition into Abyssinia.

POPULATION

The population consists of Abyssinians, Gallas, Somalis, Negroes, and Falashas, with considerable number of non-natives, Indians, Arabs, Greeks, Armenians, and a few Europeans. Harar, the largest town has a population of about 50,000. The capital, Adis Ababa, has a population of about forty or fifty thousand.

RELIGION AND INSTRUCTION.

Christianity was introduced into the country about the middle of the fourth century by Frumentius. The Abyssian Church, while having relations with the Coptic Church, is practically independent. The head of the Church, the "Abuna" (our father), corresponds in a way to the Pope of the Roman Catholic Church. The Roman Catholics and the Protestant denominations have never been permanently successful in their missionary efforts among these Christians. The adherents of the Abyssinian Church number about 3,000 000.

Education was formerly restricted to the clergy; but in October, 1907 Emperor Menelik issued an edict enjoining compulsory education on all male children over twelve years of age. The edict became a dead letter. There is said to be only one Abyssinian school in the country. It is in Adis Ababa, and taught by a few Coptic teachers introduced by the Abuna. It is reported to have over 100 pupils. It is said that attendance is irregular and the institution is unpopular with the ignorant people.

AGRICULTURE

Agriculture is the chief occupation. Land is divided, not among individuals, but among families. The only title to land is occupation. Agricultural methods are of the most primitive sort.

Almost everything grows in Abyssinia that grows either in the temperate or the torrid zones; different varieties of sorghum, wheat, peas of many kinds, beans of all sorts, barley, corn, lentils, linseed and other oil seed, bananas, sweet potatoes, yams, white potatoes, water cress, pumpkins, cucumbers, calabashes gourds, cabbage, egg-plant, tomatoes, peppers, tobacco, coffee and cotton.

Almost every animal native to Africa is found in Abyssinia; the lion, the leopard, hyena, giraffe, many kinds of monkeys, a great many different kinds of antelope, buffalo, elephant, hippopotamus, zebra and crocodile. The domestic animals are horses, donkeys, mules, cattle, sheep and goats. There are many kinds of cattle found in the country. They are mostly the zebu or humped variety found throughout the East. The oxen are used to cultivate the soil.

COMMERCE

The exports consist mainly of hides and skins, coffee, wax, ivory, civet and native butter. The imports comprise gray shirting, cotton goods, arms and ammunition, provisions, liquors, railway material and petroleum. Trade is chiefly with England, France, Italy and the United States.

Abyssinia has commercial treaties with Great Britain (1897) for "most favored nation" treatment; with Italy (1897) terminable on six months' notice; with the United States (1903) for ten years, then subject to one year's notice; with Germany and Austria-Hungary (1905) for ten years, then subject to one year's notice; with France (1908) for ten years, and then subject to a year's notice.

COMMUNICATIONS

It is said that there are few, if any roads in Abyssinia other than mere tracks. Transportation is by mules, pack horses, donkeys, and in some places camels. There is one railroad in the country, the Franco-Ethiopan, which extends from Jibuti in French Somaliland to the Hawash River in Southeastern Abyssinia, a distance of about 330 miles. From here it is being extended to the capital, Adis Ababa. There are 1,056 miles of telegraph lines in the country and about an equal number of telephone lines. August 2, 1913, there was printed at Adis Ababa the first issue of the first paper ever published in Abyssinia, "Le Courrier d'Ethiopie." It was published by the French residents of the country.

MONEY AND CREDIT.

The bank of Abyssinia, with its main office at Adis Ababa, has branches at seven other towns in the empire. This bank has an authorized capital of $2,500 000, and a paid up capital of $625,000. The governor of the National Bank of Egypt is its president, and its governing body sits at Cairo, Egypt. The current coin of Abyssinia is the Maria Theresa dollar, which circulates over all East and Central Africa. There is, also, in circulation the Menelik dollar or talari, which is worth about fifty cents. Other silver coins are the half, quarter and sixteenth of a talari. There are, also, copper coins. Various articles, as bars of salt, are used all over the country as mediums of exchange. The Abyssinian ounce weighs about 430 grains, the weight of the Maria Theresa dollar. A pound of ivory contains twelve ounces, of coffee, eighteen ounces. Grain measures are the Kunna, one-eighth of a bushel, and the Daula, two and one-half bushels. Linear measures are the Sinzer, nine inches and the Kend, twenty inches.

LIBERIA.

GOVERNMENT

Liberia owes its origin to the efforts of the American Colonization Society of America, which was organized December 16, 1817, to settle free Negroes in Africa. In 1820 an unsuccessful attempt was made to locate the colony. In 1821 the attempt succeeded. In spite of many difficulties, dissensions and discouragements, the colony was enlarged and firmly established. On July 26, 1847, the State was constituted as the Free and Independent Republic of Liberia. The colony then became more prosperous, churches and schools were established, a postal system was introduced, newspapers were established, and slavery was abolished in the neighboring native States.

In 1909, at the request of Liberia, the United States Government sent three Commissioners to Liberia to report upon boundary disputes between that country and Great Britain and France, and to inquire thoroughly into the nation's conditions and needs and to make suitable suggestions for adjustment and improvement. The commissioners were Roland P. Falkner, of the Immigration Committee of the United States Senate; George Sale, Superintendent of Education for the American Baptist Home Mission Society, and Emmett J. Scott, Secretary of Tuskegee Institute. The Commission made to Congress an exhaustive report of the boundary troubles and the general condition of the country.

The boundaries were determined by the Anglo-Liberian Agreement of 1885, and the Franco-Liberian Agreements of 1892 and 1907-10. Under the latter Liberia lost about 2,000 square miles of territory. In 1911 an agreemtnt was concluded between the British and Liberian Governments transferring the territory of Kanre-Lahun to Sierra Leone in exchange for a strip of undeveloped territory of about the same area on the south side of Morro River, which now became the boundary.

CONSTITUTION—MODELED AFTER THAT OF THE UNITED STATES

The executive is vested in a president, a vice-president, and a cabinet of six ministers, and the legislative power in congress consisting of a Senate and a House of Representatives. Formerly the President and the House of Representatives were elected for four years and the Senate for two years. In 1907 an amendment to the Constitution extended these terms to four and six years, respectively. The President must be thirty-five years of age and have real estate property to the value of $600. Voters must be of Negro blood and be owners of real estate. But few natives avail themselves of the suffrage. Foreigners cannot own land without the consent of the Government. C. D. B. King now holds the office of President.

AREA AND POPULATION.

The total area is about 40,000 square miles. The coast line of about 350 miles extends from the British colony of Sierra Leone on the west to the French colony of Ivory coast on the east. The greatest width is about 200 miles. The total population is estimated at 1,500,000 to 2,000,000. The number of Americo-Liberians, according to the latest estimate, is about 12,000. About 50,000 of the Coast Negroes, including the Liberians proper, may be considered civilized.

There is a British Negro colony of about 500 and about 160 Europeans. Monrovia, the capital, has including Krutown, an estimated population of about 6,000.

RELIGION AND EDUCATION.

The Americo-Liberians are all Protestant (Episcopal, Presbyterian, Baptist or Methodist.) There are several American Missions at work and one French Roman Catholic. The government educational system is supplemented by mission schools, instruction being given both to American and native Negroes. The Government has 113 elementary schools, with 122 teachers and 4,100 pupils. There are eighty-seven mission schools and about 3,000 pupils. The mission schools give industrial training. The Methodists have a college at Monrovia, the Protestant Episcopalians, a high school at Cape Palmas, and three other important schools. The Government Institution, College of Liberia, has twelve professors and 120 students.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.

$471,335	$618,809	$531,500	$273,368	$295,233	273,106
470,000	529,548	531,500	266,861	232,332	255,767

The revenue is derived mainly from custom duties, $476,342 in 1913-14; there is a tax on rubber exported and on natives emigrating. The expenditure embrases chiefly the cost of general administration. A debt of $500,000 at seven per cent was contracted in 1871. The unpaid interest of the debt, in 1910, amounted to over 925,000. The total indebtedness of the country, on September 30, 1918, was $2,131,700. In 1910 the United States Government expressed to the other powers its willingness to assist Liberia by taking charge of her finances, military organization, and boundary questions. The details of the scheme were approved in October, 1911, by the United States, Great Britain, France, and Germany. An international loan of about $1,700,000 secured by the Customs, Rubber Tax, and Native Head Tax was made, until the world war. It was administered by an American controller and British, French, and German subcontrollers. The American controller acts as financial advisor for the Government For the security of the revenue a frontier police force sufficient for maintaining peace in Liberia was established. This force was organized and trained by United States military officers, headed by Major Charles Young (colored.) In 1915, $73,941 were spent on the force. Liberia was one of the allied nations in the world war. By the terms of the peace treaty Germany renounced all claims against Liberia. In September 1921, the United States arranged to loan Liberia $5,000,000 to assist in rehabilitating her finances which had almost been ruined by the war and the cessation of trade. The money chiefly used is British gold and silver, but there is a Liberian coinage in silver and copper. Accounts are kept generally in American dollars and cents. The Liberian coins are as follows: Silver, 50-, 25-, and 10-cent pieces; copper, 2- and 1-cent pieces. Weights and measures are the same as in Great Britain and the United States.

PRODUCTION AND COMMERCE

The forests are unworked; the soil is productive; cocoa and cotton are produced in small quantities; indigenous coffee is the staple product. Piassava fibre, prepared from the raphia palm, is largely exported. Palm oil and palm kernels are exported; Kola nuts, chillies, beni-seed and anatto-seed are produced for local consumption. In the forest there are rubber vines and trees of twenty-two species. The rubber industry is in the hands of the Liberian Rubber Corporation, which holds a concession for the exploitation of this product over 8000 square miles of government forests in addition to a considerable plantation area. Iron is worked by the natives. Gold in small quantities, copper, zinc, monazite, corundum, lead, bitumen or lignite, and diamonds have been at different times found in the interior, but not as yet in payable form or abundance.

NEGROES PROMINENT IN LIBERIAN HISTORY.

The three Negroes most prominently connected with the origin and establishment of Liberia are Paul Cuffee, the original advocate of African Colonization; Lott Carey, the first missionary to Liberia and Joseph Jenkins Roberts, the first Negro to rule Liberia

Paul Cuffee.—Noted Negro skipper, one of the first persons in America to advocate colonization of Negroes in Africa. He was born in Cuttyhunk, Massachusetts, 1759; died September 7, 1817. At Westport, Massachusetts, he owned a farm and a wharf where he built his own ships. In 1797 he built the first school-house in Westport and presented it to the town. February 10, 1780, with number of other free colored men he drew up and presented to the legislature a petition urging that persons who paid taxes should be allowed to vote and hold offie. Ultimately free Negroes were given all the privileges of the white citizens.

In 1811, he made a voyage to the newly founded colony of Sierra Leone, West Africa, where he organized among the colonists the Friendly Society of Sierra Leone. In June 1813, he presented a memorial to Congress asking permission to transport to Sierra Leone a number of free colored people. January 31, 1814, the petition was acted upon favorable by the Senate, but later was rejected by the House.

In December, 1815, after the close of the war with England, he sailed from America with a number of Negroes, who were to give instruction in Sierra Leone in farming and the mechanical arts. In addition to carrying these colonists in his own ship, free of charge, he expended about $4,000 in money for the benefit of the colony.

The report that Paul Cuffee had taken free Negroes to Africa was widely circulated in America. His memorial to Congress also attracted much attention. Two of the most prominent characters connected with the formation of the American Colonization Society were Samuel Mills and Robery Finley. Both were in correspondence with Cuffee. Mills was a personal friend of Cuffee, had worked with him in missionary activities and traveled 100 miles to be at his bedside when he died.

The estimation in which Paul Cuffee was held is indicated by the notice which appeared in Niles' Register of that year:

"Died at Westport, Massachusetts, on the 7th inst. Paul Cuffee, a very respectable and well known man of color, as a merchant, sea-captain, and philanthropist. He was a member of the Society of Friends, or Quakers, and much esteemed by all classes of people, for his morality, truth and intelligence."

His memory is still revered and honored. The Westport Society of Friends of which he was the most famous member, still boasts of him. His great grandson, Horatio P. Howard, of New York City, erected in 1913 a granite memorial at Westport to perpetuate his memory.

Joseph Jenkins Roberts.—Born in Virgina, 1809, died February 21, 1876. First man of color to rule Liberia. Roberts went to Liberia in 1829 as a trader. Later he entered the militia and in 1839 was placed at the head of the troops. He was the second governor of the colony and served in this capacity from 1841 to 1847, when largely through his instrumentality, Liberia became a Republic. He was the first president and held office from 1848 to 1856. During this time he visited the principal courts of Europe and secured from them a formal recognition of the Liberian State.

In 1871, the only time that there was any threat of civil war, Mr. Roberts was again elected to the Presidency and served from 1872 to 1876. "It is possible," says Sir Harry H. Johnston, "that but for this vigorous management during the seventeen years he served as Governor or President, the State might never have had any independent existence at all, but have drifted into such a condition as to render annexation by Sierra Leone a necessity for the welfare of West Africa."

Lott Carey.—First missionary to Liberia and one of the leading spirits in the founding of that colony. He was born a slave about 1780 on a plantation thirty miles below the city of Richmond and died in Liberia in 1828.

In 1804 Carey was taken to Richmond and employed in a tobacco warehouse. Because of his valuable services, he was made a sort of manager in the warehouse. He had great business ability, and his master often rewarded him for his commercial transactions. In this way and by extra work he accumulated almost sufficient money to purchase his freedom as well as that of his family. A number of merchants, learning of his efforts, gave him enough money to make up the required amount. He became free in 1813. He had already learned to read. He now studied eagerly and qualfiied for the ministry. Carey became greatly interested in the colonization scheme, and was selected as one of the principal assistants. He sailed for Liberia in 1821. In 1826, he was elected Vice -Agent of the colony, and in reality became the head of the colony.

HAITI

GOVERNMENT

Haiti was discovered by Columbus in 1492. In 1501, or earlier, Negro slaves were introduced into the Island; in 1697, the Island was ceded to France, and in 1793, France proclaimed the freedom of the slaves in Haiti. The French soldiers were expelled from the Island.

1803, and the Island was declared independent 1804. France recognized the independence of Haiti, 1825.

The constitution first adopted in 1805, and remodled in 1889, provides that the president be elected for seven years by the senate and chamber of communes in joint session. His cabinet of four members is nominated by himself.

The communes consist of ninety-five members, elected directly by the people for three years. The senate has thirty-nine members. They are chosen by the chamber of communes for six years from lists, one submitted by the President and one by the electors. The country is divided into five departments. The laws of the Republic are based on the Code Napoleon, and the form of legal procedure is the same as in France. Foreigners, and particularly white foreigners, are prohibited from owning real estate, and otherwise are discriminated against.

AREA AND POPULATION

The area of the Republic, which embraces the western portion of the island of Haiti is estimated at 10, 204 square miles. The population estimated to be 2,500,500 is mainly Negroes. There are also, large numbers of mulatto Haitians, the descendants of the former French settlers. There are some 5,000 foreigners, of whom about 10 per cent are white. The populations of the principal cities are Port-au-Prince, the capital, 100,000; Cape Haiti, 30,000; Les Cayes, 12,000; Gonaives, 13,000; Port de Paix, 10,000. The language of the country is French. Most of the common people speak a debased dialect known as Creole French.

RELIGION AND EDUCATION.

The religion is Roman Catholic. There is an Arch Bishop with four Suffragan Bishops. Public, elementary education is free. Nearly $1,000,000 annually is allotted for public instruction. In 1910, education was made compulsory. There are 400 national schools, besides private schools and five public Lycees.

FINANCE.

Revenue is derived almost exclusively from customs, paid in American gold on exports and imports. In 1914-1915 it amounted to $4,978,003. The debt of the country in 1914 amounted to $25,982,181 (gold dollars. February 28, 1916, the United States by treaty assumed control of Haiti's finances and police, and in 1917 placed the country under military rule. In 1922 this rule had not terminated.

PRODUCE AND COMMERCE.

The industries are mainly agricultural. The most important product is coffee. Cocoa, tobacco and sugar are grown. Logwood and other valuable woods are exported. Gold, silver, copper, iron, antimony, tin, sulphur, coal, kaolin, nickel, gypsum and limestone, are found but are little worked. Concessions have been granted for mining coal, iron and copper.

HAITI AND TOUSSAINT L'OVERTURE

Francois Dominique Toussaint, called L'Overture; soldier, statesman and liberator of Haiti, born 1743 near Cape Francois, Haiti, died April 27, 1803, in the Chateau Joux, near Besancon, France. Toussaint was one of the leaders of the insurrection of slaves in 1791. In 1796 he was made commander-in-chief of all the French forces in the Island. In 1799 he became the leader of the blacks against the mulattoes and in 1801 the whole island had come under his control. In July, 1802, he declared the Island of Haiti independent.

He was a full-blooded Negro. He claimed to be descended from an African chief and that his father, a slave in Haiti, was the chief's second son. His surname at first was Breda. Afterwards it was changed to L'Ouverture because of his bravery in opening a gap in the enemies' ranks. As a child, he manifested unusual ability and succeeded in obtaining a good education. He had the confidence of his master and was made overseer of the plantation. In the uprising of 1791 he won a prominent place among leaders of the insurrection. After the proclamation of freedom in 1793, Toussaint came over to the side of the French Republic and became the recognized leader of his race. In 1797, as commander-in-chief of the French forces on the island, he distinguished himself by compelling the surrender of the English who had invaded the island. In 1799 in the civil war between the blacks under Toussaint and the mulattoes under General Andre Rigaud, he crushed his opponent, and made himself master of the island. After 1801, under his rule, the island's prosperity revived. A constitution naming Toussaint president for life, was drawn up and submitted to Napoleon, who saw in this a move toward independence, and determined to put down Toussaint. Napoleon proclaimed the re-establishment of slavery in the island. Toussaint replied by a declaration of independence in July, 1801. Napoleon sent General Leclerc with 30,000 men to subdue the island. Leclerc resorted to treachery, and by fair promises Toussaint was induced to submit. He was then treacherously arrested and carried to France. There he was imprisoned without trial and died from cruelty and neglect. When the news of Toussaint's death reached Haiti the Negroes, aroused to fury by the treachery, renewed the war, and the same year that Toussaint died drove out the French.

SANTO DOMINGO

GOVERNMENT

Until 1844 Santo Domingo was a part of Haiti. In February of that year the eastern part of the Island proclaimed its independency of the Republic of Haiti. This same year a Constitution was adopted. It has since been remodeled a number of times. The president is elected for four years. The National Congress consists of a Senate of twelve senators and a Chamber of Deputies of twenty-four members. The term is four years. The President is chosen by an electoral college for a term of six years.

AREA AND POPULATION.

The area of Santo Domingo is estimated at 18,045 square miles and the population at 708,000 inhabitants. The population is mainly composed of Creoles of pure Spanish descent, and mixed race of Europeans, Africans and Indians. There are also many Turks and Syrians, especially in Santo Domingo City where the dry goods trade is almost exclusively in their hands. The populations of the principal cities are: Santo Domingo, the capital, 22,000; Santiago, 12,000; Puerto Plata, about 10,000.

RELIGION AND EDUCATION.

The religion of the State is Roman Catholic. Other forms of religion are permitted. Primary instruction is free and compulsory. The public schools are primary, superior, technical schools, normal schools and a professional school, In 1911 there were 590 schools in the Republic with 20,453 children.

FINANCE.

The revenue is derived chiefly from customs. There are also sugar, liquor and stamp taxes and considerable receipts from posts, telegraph , telephones and from civil registration. The total revenues for 1915 were 4,468,000. Under the Convention, signed on the part of the United States and Santo Domingo, an American citizen is General Receiver of Customs with authority to deposit $100,000 each month toward interest (5 per cent) and sinking fund in trust for all national creditors. In addition half of the Custom receipts in excess of $3,000,000 is applied to the same end. In May, 1916 the United States landed marines to preserve order. On November 29, 1916, the United States placed the country under military rule. In 1922 this rule had not been terminated.

Slavery In Africa
An Ancient Institution.

It is to be noted that slavery in Africa is a native institution and is very ancient.

The most common ways of becoming a slave were: (1) By being born a slave; (2) By being sold into slavery for debt; (3) By becoming a slave through capture in war; (4) By kidnapping individuals and selling them into slavery. This might be done for revenge or merely for greed and gain. (5) By being captured in a raid for slaves. This became the most fruitful source of slave supply.

Where Slaves Came From In Africa.

It appears that the slaves who were brought to America from Africa came from almost every part of that continent.

An indication of this is shown in the fact that the British in their attempts to suppress the slave trade concentrated at Sierra Leone, several thousand captive slaves. A study of the languages of these slaves showed that they came from all parts of the West Coast, the Upper Niger, the Sahara Desert region, Senegal, the Lake Chad region, Southwest Africa, the Zambesi Delta and the Southeastern Coast. The fact that slaves came from almost all parts of Negro Africa, throws light upon the differences in color, features, hair, etc., of the Negroes of the Western Hemisphere. These differences existed before the intermixtures that have taken place in this hemisphere between whites and Negroes; for there are among Africans, marked differences in features, hair, color, etc.

There are no exact figures as to the number of slaves brought from Africa to the Western Hemisphere. This importation went on for about 360 years. That is, from about 1517 to about 1880 when the last slaves were imported into Cuba and Brazil.

An estimate in the Catholic Encylopedia places the number of slaves brought from Africa at 12,000,000. Helps, "The Spanish Conquest in America" estimates that, from 1517 to 1807, not less than five or six million African slaves were imported into America.

Morel, on page 19 of "The Black Man's Burden," gives the following for the period 1666-1800:

"1666-1766—Number of slaves imported by the British alone into British French and Spanish American Colonies—three millions (quarter of a million died on the voyage.)

1680-1786—Slaves imported into the British American Colonies—2,130,000, Jamaica alone absorbing 610,000.

1716-1756—An average of 70,000 slaves per annum imported into all the American colonies, or a total of 3,500,000.

1752-1762—Jamaica alone imported 71,115 slaves.

1759-1762—Guadeloupe alone imported 40,000 slaves.

1776-1800—An average of 74,000 slaves per annum imported into all American colonies, or a total of 1,850,000. (Annual average: by British, 38,000; Portuguese, 10,000; Dutch, 4,000; French, 20,000; Danes, 2,000.")

Collins, on page '20, 'The Domestic Slave Trade of the Southern States," gives the following: "From 1808-1860 inclusive, 270,000 slaves were introduced into the United States as follows:

1808-1820	60,000
1820-1830	50,000
1830-1840	40,000
1850-1860	70,000

NEGROES AS EXPLORERS.

The charge is often brought against the Negro that one indication of his inferiority is the lack of initiative especially in the matter of being a pioneer. In contradiction, however, there are some very interesting facts such as the following concerning the part Negroes played in the discovery of America.

Negroes Migrated To America Before Columbus.

It has recently been pointed out by Professor Leo Weiner of Harvard University, that it is very proable that Negroes from Africa had migrated to the American continent long before the first voyage of Columbus.

Professor Weiner sets forth this view in a critical study from the sources which he is publishing in three volumes under the title, "Africa and the Discovery of America." He adduces facts to show that many of the practices, rites, ceremonies and words of the aborigines of the West Indian Archipelago came from Africa. He further points out that a number of supposedly Indian words are in reality of African origin, as for example, canoe and the appellations for the sweet potato and yam. Tobacco and its smoking, he brings evidence to show, were introduced into America by Africans, who in his opinion, long before the time of Columbus had crossed over to America from Guinea.

Negroes Accompany Spanish Explorers.

1492. Alonzo, Pietro, a Negro is credited by some authorities as having been the pilot of the ship, Nina, of the fleet of Columbus in the discovery of America. It is further reported that he accompanied Columbus on his second voyage to America. His name is said to appear in the list of the names of those who sailed with Columbus. Pietro's name appeared in the "Libretto," 1504, as Pietro Alonzo, il nigro. This is repeated in "Paesi Nouamente Retrouati, Venice, 1507, also in Simon Grynaeus' "Novus Orbis Regionum," Basle, 1532, also Peter Martyrs' "Decades" Seville, 1511.

1501. A Royal Edict permitted Negro slaves born in slavery among Christians to be transported from Spain to Hispaniola.

These, however, were not the first African slaves brought from Spain. The first African slaves were brought over by the Spanish slaveholders, who, as they emigrated, were accompanied by their Negroes.

1505. King Ferdinand sent slaves to Hispaniola. In a letter dated September 15, of that year, he said, "I will send you more Negro Slaves as you request. I think there may be a hundred."

1510. King Ferdinand sent from Seville fifty slaves to labor in the mines of Hispaniola.

1510. Direct traffic in slaves was established between Guinea and Hispaniola.

1516. Thirty Negroes are said to have accompanied Balboa. They assisted him in building the first ship constructed on the Pacific coast of America.

1517. Charles V., of Spain, who was also Emperor of Germany and the Netherlands, granted the exclusive monopoly to Flemish noblemen to import annually 4,000 Africans to Hispaniola, Cuba, Jamaica, and Porto Rico. This monopoly sold to some Genoese merchants for 25,000 ducats.

1522. Three hundred Negro slaves are said to have accompanied Cortez in his conquest of Mexico.

1526. Negro slaves were employed by Vanques de Ayllon in an attempt to establish a settlement on the coast of what is now North and South Carolina. This was the first introduction of Negro slavery into the territory of the United States. These slaves are said to have built the first ship constructed on the Atlantic Coast of America.

1527. A number of Negro slaves were in the expedition of Panfilo de Narvaez to conquer Florida; among them was Estevancio.

A Negro Was The Discoverer of Arizona and New Mexico

1528. The expedition, under De Narvaez, landed on the coast of Florida.

The expedition was unsuccessful. Estevancio, "Little Steve," a Negro, was a member of this expedition. Estevancio was afterwards the discoverer of Arizona and one of the first persons to cross the American continent. The survivors were wrecked on the coast of what is now Texas on November 6, 1528, and were made captives by the Indians. Estevancio, with two other companions, wandered over the plains of Texas and Mexico for eight years, until on the 24th of July, 1536, the city of Mexico was reached. In 1538 he led an expedition from Mexico in search of the fabled seven cities and discovered Arizona and New Mexico. He was killed at Cibola, in what is now New Mexico. He was the first member of an alien race to visit the New Mexican Pueblos. After a lapse of three and one-half centuries, the tradition of the killing of Estevancio still lingers in a Zuni Indian legend, which, among other things, says: "It is to be believed that a long time ago, when roofs lay over the walls of Kya-ki-me, when smoke hung over the housetops, and the ladder-rounds were still unbroken in Kya-ki-me, then the Black Mexicans came from their abodes in Everlasting Summerland. Then the Indians of So-no-li set up a great howl, and thus they and our anoients did much ill to one another. Then and thus was killed by our ancients, right where the stone stands down by the arroyo of Kya-ki-me, one of the Black Mexicans, a large man, with chilli lips."*

1539. African slaves accompanied the expedition of De Soto.

1540. The second settler in Alabama was a Negro. He was in the De Soto expedition. He liked the country and settled among the Indians.

1542. Three Negroes who accompanied the Corondo expedition remained behind at Triguex, near where Santa Fe, New Mexico, now is.

1562. The importation of slaves from Africa to the New World was begun by Englishmen.

1564-65. The first vessel to make the return voyage across the Pacific from the East Indies to Mexico was steered by a Negro pilot.

1565. Pedro Menendez de Aviles had a company of Negro slaves when he founded St. Augustine, Florida. They were brought from Spain and were trained artisans and agriculturists.

A Negro
At The North Pole.

Matthew A. Henson.—Born in Charles County Maryland, August 8, 1866. Most noted of all the Negro explorers. Accompanied Commander Robert E. Peary on all his expeditions in search of the North Pole except one. Henson was the only civilized person with Peary in his final dash to the pole, April 7, 1909. Henson made eight trips to the Arctic regions. In describing Henson's part in the discovery of the North pole, Commander Peary said:

> On that bitter brilliant day in April, 1909, when the Stars and Stripes floated at the North Pole, Caucasian, Ethiopian, and Mongolian stood side by side at the apex of the earth, in the harmonious companionship resulting from hard work, exposure, danger and a common object.
> Matthew A. Henson, my Negro assistant, has been with me in one capacity or another since my second trip to Nicaragua in 1887. I have taken him on each and all of my expeditions, except the first, and also without exception on each of my farthest sledge trips. This position I have given him primarily because of his adaptability and fitness for the work, and, secondly, on account of his loyalty. He is a better dog driver than any man living, except some of the best Esquimo hunters themselves.

NEGRO SLAVERY IN THE COLONIES.

First Africans
Brought to Virginia
Not Slaves But Servants.

1619. August. First African Immigrants landed in Virginia. They were probably not slaves, but servants indentured for a term of years. "About the last of August (1619) came in a Dutch man-of Warre, that sold us twenty negars." Narrative of Master John Rolfe.

> It was not an uncommon practice in this early period of ship masters to sell white servants to the planters; hence an inference that these twenty Negroes were slaves, drawn from the fact that they were sold to the colony or planters would be unjustified. Prior to 1619 every inhabitant of the colony was practically "a servant manipulated in the interests of the company held in servitude beyond a stipulated term" * * * * According to a census made in 1624-5 there were in the colony twenty-three Africans. They were listed as "servants," thus receiving the same class name as white persons enumerated in the lists According to Thomas Jefferson, "the right to these Negroes was common or perhaps, they lived on a footing with the whites, who, as well as themselves, were under absolute direction of the president." * * * * In the records of the county courts dating from 1632-1661, Negroes are designated as "servants," "Negro servants," or simply as "Negroes," but never in the records which we have examined were they termed "slaves."

First Record
Negro Servant for Life
Otherwise a Slave.

1631-36 Slavery in Connecticut. Gradual abolition begins 1784.
1636. Slavery in Delaware; abolished 1865.

1639. January 6. First discrimination in law against Negroes in Virginia. The General Assembly requires all persons "except Negroes" to secure arms and ammunition or be subject to a fine.

1640. First record of a "Negro servant for life," otherwise a slave, in Virginia His name was John Punch.

In that year three servants of Hugh Gwyn, a Dutchman called Victor, a Scotchman named James Gregory, and John Punch ran away. They were captured, given thirty lashes each. The Scotchman and the Dutchman were condemned to serve four years beyond their indenture—one year to their masters and three to the colony. John Punch was condemned to serve for life. Russell, "The Free Negro in Virginia," says: "The most reasonable explanation seems to be that the Dutchman and the Scotchman being white, were given only four additional years to their terms of indenture, while 'the third, being a Negro,' was reduced from his former condition of servitude for a limited time to a condition of slavery for life."

Statutory Recognition Slavery.

1641. Statutory recognition of slavery in Massachusetts.

Statutory recognition of slavery by other American colonies was as follows: Connecticut, 1650; Virginia, 1661; Maryland, 1663; New York and New Jersey, 1664; South Carolina, 1682; Pennsylvania and Rhode Island, 1700; North Carolina, 1715; and Georgia, 1755.

1642. Governor Calvert of Maryland bargains with a certain shipmaster for the delivery of thirteen slaves.

1646. Massachusetts and Rhode Island make slave raiding a capital offense.

1647. Slavery in Rhode Island; gradual abolition begins in 1784.

1649. Estimated there were three hundred Negroes in Virginia.

REFERENCE: Virginia Magazine of History. Vol. XVII p. 232.

1650. Connecticut passes an act making man-stealing a capital offense.

1651. First Negro landowners in Virginia.

In that year patents were granted to Negroes as follows: Anthony Johnson, 250 acres of land; John Johnson, 550 acres; and John Johnson, Sr., 50 acres. Richard Johnson, probably the first Negro to enter Virginia as free man, arrived the same year. Anthony Johnson and his wife are named among the twenty-three Negro "servants" listed in the census of 1624-5 as residents of the colony.

REFERENCE: Russell, The Free Negro in Virginia, 1619-1865. p. 24.

First Record Negro Slave Owner In United States.

1653. First record of Negro slave owner in the United States.

In that year John Castor, a Negro of Northampton County, brought suit against Anthony Johnson to obtain his freedom. He claimed, according to the records "Yt hee came into Virginia for seaven or eight years of Indenture, yt hee had demanded his freedom of Anth. Johnson, his Mayster; & further sd yet hee had kept him a servant seaven years longer than hee should or ought."

Anthony Johnson referred to is evidently the same Anthony Johnson who with his wife, Mary, were among the twenty-three African residents in the colony 1624-5 when they were listed as servants. It is evident, if the complaint of John Castor is true, namely, that Johnson had held him as a servant seven years beyond the period for which he was indentured, that Anthony Johnson must have been a free man as early as 1635. It is a record that Johnson was successful in the suit which Castor brought against him and retained the services of Castor apparently for life.

Slavery Is Made Hereditary.

1655. First record of voluntary emancipation in Virginia.

Richard Vaughn, of Northampton County, in emancipating one of his Negroes said in the following declaration: "These testify that Mr. Richard Vaughan doe hereby acquit and discharge one Negro Boye known by the name of James from all claymes or Demands of service for myselfe, heyers, Exors., adma. provided the negro does not covenant with any person but shall keepe himselfe free."

1661. March 1. First formal recognition of slavery in Virginia. Assembly declares that "Negroes are incapable of making satisfaction (for the time lost in running away), by addition of time."

1662. Slavery in Virginia made hereditary by the decree that the issue of slave mothers should follow their condition.

Slavery was declared hereditary in the other colonies as follows: Maryland 1663; Massachusetts, 1698; Connecticut and New Jersey, 1704; Pennsylvania and New York, 1706; South Carolina, 1712; Rhode Island, 1728; and North Carolina, 1741.

1665. Slavery in South Carolina; abolished 1865.

Original Heathenism Becomes Test For Slavery.

1667. Virginia Assembly declares that "Baptism doth not alter the condition of the person as to his bondage or freedom."

From this time on, original heathenism began to be a nominal test for slavery. It also began to be declared that it was not inconsistent for Christians to hold Christians as slaves if these slaves had formerly been heathens. In 1670 Virginia passed a law declaring "all servants not being Christians imported into this colony by ships" to be slaves for life. Twelve years later an act was passed repealing the law of 1670, and making slaves of all persons of non-Christian nationality thereafter coming into the colonies whether they came by land or sea, and whether or not they had been converted to Christianity after captivity.

In 1671, Maryland Assembly declares that conversion or the Holy Sacrament of baptism does not alter the status of slaves or their issue.

1682, Virginia denies the benefit of Christianity as a mode of securing freedom to all Negroes, mulattoes, hostile Moors and Turks, and to such Indians as were sold by other Indians as slaves.

1669. Slavery in North Carolina; abolished in 1865.

1670. Law passed in Virginia declared "no Negro or Indian, though baptized and enjoined for freedom, shall be capable of any purchase of Christians, but yet not debarred from buying any of their owne nation."

Free Negroes often purchased their slave wives and children and held them as bond slaves. This was particularly true after the passing of the law of 1806 that made illegal the continual residence of free Negroes manumitted from May 1, of that year.

1679. New Hampshire founded, slavery probably established; abolished 1783.

Negroes and Mulattoes Declared To Be Real Estate.

1681. Maryland Assembly passes an act declaring children born of white servant women and Negroes are free.

1681. Pennsylvania ceded to William Penn; slavery probably already established. Gradual abolition begins 1780.

1692. Maryland Assembly decrees that the issue of the union between any white woman or any slave or free Negro became servants for a long term.

1695. Maryland places a tax on imported slaves.

1699. Virginia imposes tax to check importation of slaves.

1705. October 4. General Assembly of Virginia presents an act declaring the the Negroes, mulattoes, and Indian slaves to be real estate.

1708. October 9. First use in Virginia of legislative power to emancipate a slave. Will, a slave of Robert Ruffin, of Surry County, Virginia, given his manumission papers by the General Assembly for revealing a slave conspiracy.

1712. Legislature of Pennsylvania passes an act restricting the increase of slaves.

Slaves Not To Be Allowed To Buy, Sell or Borrow.

1715. North Carolina passes law declaring slaves shall not be allowed to buy and sell or even borrow.

1717. Slavery introduced into Louisiana.

1729. Governor Gooch of Virginia and the State Assembly grant freedom to a slave for the discovery of an herb medicine by which wonderful cures were effected. In the same year, crown-attorney and solicitor-general of England declare that baptism in no way changed the slave's status.

1741. North Carolina enacts a law declaring that any Negro, mulatto, or Indian, bond or free, be found to have testified falsely, he shall have his ears nailed to the pillory then cut off, after which he was to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back.

1749. Slavery introduced in Georgia. From date of founding, 1733, to this time had been forbidden. Abolished, 1865.

1752. Maryland Assembly passess act forbidding manumission by will or otherwise during the last illness of the master.

1760 South Carolina attempts to restrict slave importation.

1769. Virginia Legislature declared that the discriminatory tax levied upon free Negroes and mulattoes since 1668 was "derogatory to the rights of free born subjects," and therefore should be repealed.

Somerset Case Brings Out Distinction Between English and Colonial Law.

1772. Somerset, James, brought by his master from Boston to England, was set free by Lord Mansfield on a writ of habeas corpus. The Somerset case brought out the distinction between the English and the Colonial law. Lord Mansfield allowed writ of habeas corpus on the ground that the state of slavery is of such nature that it is incapable of being introduced on any reason, moral or political. It is so odious that nothing can be offered to support it but positive law.

REFERENCE: Hurd, Freedom and Bondage I. 189-191.

1773. Eight petitions presented to the New Jersey Assembly from the inhabitants of six different counties, asking that the importation of slaves be prohibited and the opportunity of manumission be increased.

1774. October. Connecticut prohibits the importation of slaves.

1774. October 20. First Continental Congress declared in the Articles of Association that the United Colonies would "neither import nor purchase any slaves," and would "wholly discontinue the slave trade."

1776. April 16. The Continental Congress unanimously resolved that "No slaves be imported into any of the thirteen colonies."

1777. October 13. Continental Congress decides that slaves should be wholly exempt from taxation.

Slavery Declared To Be Contrary To Laws God Man Nature.

1778. Virginia passes an act prohibiting the slave trade.

1780. Pennsylvania prohibits further introduction of slaves.

1780. The meeting of the Annual Methodist Conference at Baltimore put this question and answered it in the affirmative: "Does this conference acknowledge that slavery is contrary to the laws of God, man and nature and hurtful to society; contrary to the dictates of conscience, pure religion, and doing that which we would not that others should do to us and ours; do we pass our disapprobation on all our friends who keep slaves, and advise their freedom?"

1782. May. A law bearing the title "An act to authorize the manumission of slaves" passed by the Virginia legislature.

The free Negro population of Virginia at that time was probably less than 3,000. It was more than doubled in the space of two years. In 1790 the number of free colored persons was 12, 866; in 1800, it had reached 20,000, and according to the census of 1810 it was over 30,000.

1783. Every Negro in Virginia who fought or served as a free man in the Revolutionary War was given the legislative pledge of protection by the Virginia Assembly and every slave who had rendered honorable service to the American cause was freed by special act at the expense of the State.

1783. Maryland prohibits the introduction of slaves for sale.

1783. April 1. Continental Congress decides that for purposes of taxation five slaves shouldbe counted as three freemen.

1784. Continental Congress votes not to prohibit slavery in the present States of Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi.

1784. Connecticut and Rhode Island prohibit the importation of slaves.

1786. North Carolina declares slave trade "of evil consequences and highly impolitic."

1786. New Jersey passes law against slave importation.

1787. July 13. Ordinance for the Government of the territory northwest of the Ohio passes. One section declares "there shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in the said territory, otherwise than in punishment of crimes whereof the parties shall be duly convicted."

SLAVERY IN THE STATES.

First Compromise Federal Government With Slavery.

1787. September 17. Constitution of the United States adopted.

Article 1, Section 2 contains the following passage, the first of a series of compromises of the Federal Government with slavery

Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to serve for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons.

Article 1, Section 9 contains the following provision relative to the slave trade:

The migration or importation of such persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit shall not be prohibited by Congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight; but a tax of duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding Ten Dollars for each person.

1788. October. Connecticut enacts law forbidding any inhabitant of State to receive on his vessel "any inhabitants of Africa as slaves."

1790. April 2. Congress accepts from the State of North Carolina the territory now included in the State of Tennessee, with the proviso "that no regulations made or to be made by Congress shall tend to emancipate slaves."

1790. July 16. Congress passes act accepting cessions from Maryland and Virginia for the District of Columbia upon condition that the laws of the two States should remain in force in their respective portions of the Districts, "until the time fixed for the removal of the Government thereto, and until Congress shall otherwise by law provide."

Congress Passes First Fugitive Slave Law.

1793. February 12. Congress passes first fugitive slave law, giving the owner or his agent the right to bring the alleged fugitive "before any magistrate of a county, city or town corporate," in order to obtain a decision ordering the return of the fugitive to the State or territory from which he had escaped.

1794. Congress passes an act to prevent the fitting out in ports of the United States of vessels engaged in supplying slaves to foreign countries.

1797. January 30. Petition presented to Congress by four North Carolina Negroes who had been freed by their masters. They had fled to Philadelphia and had been seized under the Fugitive Slave Law. Their petition denied by a vote of fifty ayes, thirty-three noes.

1800. May 10. The transportation of slaves from one foreign country to another prohibited.

1802. April 2. Georgia ceded to the Union her western territory, a part of what is now Alabama and Mississippi, on condition that slavery was not to be prohibited therein.

Federal Government To Assist In Restricting Importation Slaves.

1803. February 28. Congress enacts that the Federal Government should co-operate with such States as had already prohibited the importation of slaves, by assisting the States to carry such laws into effect.

1804. Gradual abolition begins in New Jersey.

1805. Maryland Assembly instructed the State's representatives in Congress to use their utmost exertions to obtain an amendment to the Constitution that would put an end to slave importation. The Assembly sent a copy of the resolutions to the Governors of all the States with the request that it be laid before the different legislatures for their concurrence and adoption.

1806. May 1. Law passed in Virginia requiring manumitted slaves to leave the State within twelve months from the time their freedom occurred; or, if under age from the time they reached their majority; otherwise they might be apprehended and sold by the overseers of the poor for any county or corporation in which they were found for the benefit of the poor of such country or corporation.

1806. George Wythe, chancellor of State of Virginia, gave his ground for declaring freedom of three persons claimed as slaves, "Freedom is the birthright of every human being. Decision overruled by the Court of Appeals. In giving his decision Judge Tucker asserted that the burden of the proof is not upon the claimant but upon the Negro to show that he is free; whereas, with a white man or an Indian in slavery the burden is with the claimant.

In his argument, Judge Tucker supposes that "three persons, a black or mulatto man or woman with a flat nose and woolly head, a copper colored person with long, jetty black or straight hair, and one with fair complexion, brown hair, not woolly nor inclined thereto, with a prominent Roman nose, were brought before the judge upon a writ of habeas corpus. How must the judge act in this case? If the whole case be left with the judge he must deliver the white and Indian out of custody, and must let the Negro remain in slavery until he can produce proof of his freedom."

Congress Passes Act Prohibiting Importation Slaves.

1807. March 2. Congress passes an act "to prohibit the importation or bringing of slaves into the United States or the territories thereof after the 31st day of December, 1808."

1810. Post Office Department organized. Enacted under a penalty of $50, that "no other than a free white person shall be employed in carrying the mail of the United States, either as a post rider or driver of a carriage carrying mail."

1819. March 3. President empowered to employ Navy for suppression of slave trade; also to issue the necessary orders for return to Africa of illegally imported Negroes. Former acts authorizing their enslavement by the State governments repealed. Government aid given to found the colony of Liberia in Africa.

1820. March 6. Missouri Compromise. Terms of, admitted Missouri as a slave State but forever prohibited slavery in the rest of the Louisiana territory lying north of latitude 36 degrees, 31 minutes N.

1820. May 15. The African slave trade made piracy.

1831. June 1. Maryland forbids importation into State of any slaves for sale or to reside there.

Law Makes it Crime To Open School For Negroes.

1832. Free Negroes in Virginia declared incapable of purchasing or otherwise acquiring permanent ownership except by descent of any slaves other than husband, wife and children. Contracts for any such purpose were declared void.

By the court of 1849, free Negroes were not allowed to purchase their own parents. Beginning March 31, 1858, the law was changed to read, "no free Negroes shall be capable of acquiring except by descent, any slaves." There is evidence, however, that this law was not enforced. Reuben West a free Negro barber, who lived in Richmond from 1830-60 and paid taxes on real property valued at $4,420, is said by William Mundin, another barber living in Richmond in 1913, to have owned a slave house servant whom he sold for insubordination. James H. Hill, another contemporary of Reuben West, owned two slaves and one of them was a mulatto barber.

1833. Connecticut passes a law making it a crime to open a school for Negroes in the State. (See Prudence Crandall Case.)

The Amistad Case.

1839. August. The slaver, Amistad, captured by the United States brig, Washington, off Montauk Point, Long Island. The capture of this slaver gave rise to the Amistad Case which resulted in freeing the slaves on board who had revolted, taken possession of the ship, and sought to make their way back to Africa.

March 9, 1840, Justice Story gave the opinion of the Supreme Court, "that the Africans were kidnapped and unlawfully transported to America, and did not become pirates and robbers in taking the Amistad and trying to regain their country.

The Amistad had brought African slaves, kidnapped in April, from Lenboko in the Mendi country near Liberia. Fifty-three of these slaves were purchased by Jose Ruiz and Pedro Montes, and were re-embarked on the Amistad at Havana for Guanajai, Porto Principe. On the fifth night out, the slaves rose under the leadership of Joseph Cinquez, killed the captain and the cook, slew two men of the crew and tried to return to Africa. The ship was two months on the ocean during which time it was boarded several times, once by an American Schooner from Kingston, which remained along side for twenty-four hours and traded with the Negroes, finding that they had plenty of money. The ship was finally captured on August 26th.

The owners of the cargo claimed the ship and its passengers on the ground that they were pirates and should be tried for their crimes in Cuba. The case of the Africans was taken up by the anti-slavery people, who claimed that the Africans had been kidnapped from their homes, that they were free and had the rights of all free people to use whatever force necessary to regain their freedom. This view was quoted by the decision of the court, and thirty-five Africans who still survived were returned to Africa, November 25, 1841. From this band of Negroes on the Amistad sprang the Mendi Mission.

1842. Free Negroes of Maryland forbidden to become members of secret societies within or without the State.

1842. Acts forbidding all societies of blacks modified at Baltimore City so that the free Negroes there could have beneficial societies for the relief of the destitute of their race.

New Jersey Abolishes Slavery.

1846. Slavery abolished by statute in New Jersey.

1847. Connecticut, by a large majority, rejects proposal to allow Negro men the ballot.

1850. September. Compromise of 1850. The bill provided that (1) California be admitted as a free State. (2) Territories of Utah and New Mexico be organized without any provision concerning slavery. (3) Texas be paid $10,000,000 as compensation for the territory of New Mexico. (4) Slave trade be prohibited in District of Columbia. (5) A more stringent fugitive slave law be passed.

1850. September 18. Second Fugitive Slave Law passes, providing Commissioners with jurisdiction concurrent with that of the courts. They were to receive a larger fee if they decided in favor of the claimant than if they decided in favor of the fugitive. Testimony of the alleged slave was barred and he was denied a trial by jury. Enforcement of the law was placed wholly in the hands of the Federal officials.

1853. The State of Georgia by legislative enactment purchased Ransom Montgomery, a slave as a reward for his having saved a bridge on the Western and Atlantic Railroad over the Chattahoochee River. This railroad is the property of the State of Georgia. Under the law o' slavery it was not allowable to grant absolute freedom so the legislature purchased Montgomery and authorized the chief engineer of the railroad to employ him at a reasonable wage. In this manner he was practically free during the remainder of his life. This is perhaps the only instance where a state of the Union purchased and became the direct owner of a slave.

1854. May 31. Kansas-Nebraska Bill, repealing compromise of 1820, provided that "all questions pertaining to slavery in the territories and the new states to be formed therefrom, are to be left to the decision of the people residing therein, by their appropriate representatives, to be chosen by them for that purpose."

1857. Connecticut passes last statutory act relating to slavery; decrees that any person held to service as a slave in any other State or country, and not being a fugitive from another of the United States coming into this State or being therein, shall forthwith become and be free.

Dred Scott Decision Declares Negro Not A Citizen.

1857. May 6. Dred Scott decision.

Dread Scott, a slave in Missouri, had been, in 1834, taken by his owner into Illinois, a State prohibiting slavery, and in 1836 into what is now Minnesota, a part of the Louisiana Purchase in which slavery was expressly prohibited by the Missouri Compromise. In 1838 he was taken back to Missouri. In 1848 he sued for his freedom on the ground that through his residence in territory where slavery was prohibited he had lost his status as a slave, and acquired that of a free man. The United States Supreme Court decided Scott was not a citizen of any State, and therefore was not entitled to any standing in the courts, also that Congress had no power to prohibit a citizen of any State from carrying into any Territory slaves or any other property; and that Congress had no power to impair the Constitutional protection of such property while thus held in a Territory.

1861. May 24. General B. F. Butler declares slaves contraband of war.

1861. August 6. Congress passes a confiscation bill, one section of which declares that the claims of owners should be forfeited to those slaves who should be required to take up arms or should be used in any way against the National Government.

1861. August 31. General John C. Fremont issues premature proclamation of emancipation in Missouri. September 2nd, President Lincoln modifies Fremont's proclamation.

President Lincoln Proposes Compensated Emancipation.

1862. March 6. President Lincoln proposes to Congress compensated emancipation.

1862. March 13. Congress amends Military Code forbidding Federal officers to surrender fugitive slaves.

1862. April 2. Congress passes act offering compensated emancipation to the border slave States. No State claimed its benefits.

1862. April 16. Slavery abolished in the District of Columbia. Owners of slaves were compensated; $100,000 appropriated to colonize the Freedmen beyond the limits of the United States. Each emigrant was to receive $100. The President calls a committee of colored persons to meet him in order to work up sentiment among the Freedmen in favor of colonization, the Freedmen refused to be colonized.

1862. April 24. An efficient treaty for the suppression of the African Slave Trade concluded between the United States and Great Britain.

1862. May 9. Maj. General David Hunter at Hilton Head, S. C., issues proclamation declaring slaves free in Georgia, Florida and South Carolina. May 19, President Lincoln rescinds General Hunter's proclamation.

1862. May 9. Freedmen first armed as soldiers in war of rebellion.

1862. June. Congress passed an act prohibiting slavery in all the present territories of the United States, and any territory that should hereafter be acquired.

1862. July 22. Congress passes the second confiscation act declaring forever free the slaves of those convicted of treason and rebellion and also the slaves of rebel owners, who took refuge within the lines of the Union Army or in any way came under the control of the Federal Government; and denying the protection of Fugitive Slave Law to any owners of slaves except those loyal to the Union.

Emancipation Proclamations 1862 And 1863.

1862. September 22. Preliminary proclamation of emancipation.
1863. January 1. Emancipation Proclamation issued.
1863. June 19. West Virginia admitted as a State with a constitution providing for gradual abolition.
1864. January 11. Constitution of Missouri amended, abolishing slavery.
1864. March 14. Constitution of Arkansas amended, abolishing slavery.
1864. May 11. Constitution of Louisiana amended, abolishing slavery.
1864. June 28. Fugitive Slave Acts of 1793 and 1850 repealed.
1864. July 6. Constitution of Maryland amended, abolishing slavery.
1865. February 3. West Virginia abolishes slavery.
1865. February 22. Constitution of Tennessee amended, abolishing slavery.
1865. March 3. Congress passed a bill declaring free the wives and children of Negro soldiers.

1865. July 13. James Johnson, provisional governor, declares slavery abolished in Georgia.

1865. July 20. Lewis E. Parsons, provisional governor of Alabama, proclaims "There are no slaves now in Alabama."

1865. July 21. Constitution of Mississippi amended abolishing slavery.

1865. June 19. General Robert S. Granger, who had command of the District of Texas, issues a proclamation to the colored people of Texas, telling them that they are free.

July 25, General A. J. Hamilton, provisional governor, formally declares slavery abolished in Texas.

1865. August 3. William Marvin, provisional governor, declares slavery abolished in Florida.

1865. September 28. Constitution of South Carolina amended, abolishing slavery.

1865. October 2. Constitution of North Carolina amended, abolishing slavery
1865. December 18. The Thirteenth Amendment to Constitution adopted. Slavery abolished in the United States.

THE CIVIL STATUS OF THE SLAVE AND THE FREE NEGRO.

THE STATUS OF THE SLAVE.

White Servitude Legal Basis For Negro Slavery.

White servitude preceded and formed the legal basis upon which Negro slavery was erected. The first Africans brought to Virginia were servants of the colony, received in exchange for public provisions and were put to work upon the public lands to support the governor and other officers of the Government.

Slavery grew up in Virginia and other States by the gradual addition of incidents modifying the law and custom of servitude, as applied to the Negro. From the very first, however, servitude in the case of the Negro was different in practice, though not in law, from servitude in the case of the white man.

For example, in Providence Island, where slavery came into existence at about the same time and in the same manner as in Virginia, it appears that in 1633 twenty or thirty Negroes were introduced for public works and it was recommended "that they should be separated among various families of officers and industrial planters to prevent the formation of plots. "This apparent difference in the treatment of the black and white servants, due to fear of an alien and pagan people, is no doubt typical of other differences and distinctions made between the races, which, as they became traditional and gained the sanction of custom, gradually modified the status of the African and transformed Negro servitude into Negro slavery.

The transition from servitude to slavery was effected in the case of the black man when the custom established itself of holding Negroes "servants for life."

"The distinguishing mark of the state of slavery is not the loss of liberty, political and civil, but the perpetuity and almost absolute character of that loss, whether voluntary or involuntary in origin. It differs then, from other forms of servitude limited in place or time, such as medieval vassalage, villainage, modern serfdom, and technical servitude, in degree rather than in kind; its other incidents being very similar and in many cases even identical with theirs." The efforts of planters to lengthen the terms of service of their servants which failed with the white servants succeeded with the black. Public sentiment supported the change because the blacks were regarded as dangerous if left uncontrolled.

The second step by which Negro servitude was converted into Negro slavery was taken when the condition and status of the mother was extended to and continued in her offspring.

This change which had undoubtedly been effected in custom long before it was formally sanctioned by law, was recognized by statute in Virginia, 1662; Maryland, 1663; Massachusetts, 1698; Connecticut and New Jersey, 1704; Pennsylvania and New York, 1706; South Carolina, 1712; Rhode Island, 1728; North Carolina, 1741.

The transmission from mother to child of the conditions of slavery for life grew naturally out of the fact that the master necessarily controlled the child, controlling the mother. It was evident that parents, under an obligation of life service, could make no valid provision for the support of their offspring, and that a just title to the service of the child might rest on the master's maintenance, a principal which was later commonly applied in cases of bastardy in servitude.

The Growth of Conception That The Slave Was Property.

The most important disabilities incident to the condition of the slave grew out of the fact that, under a condition of servitude, the master had not merely a right to the services of his servant, but he had also the right to sell those services, to transmit them by inheritance, etc. The effect of the conception where applied to the slave was "to completely confound and identify the person of the slave with the thing owned."

The conception of the slave as property made him liable to be seized in payment of his master's debts. Even after such slaves had been emancipated they were still liable to seizure for the payment of debts contracted to their emancipation.

In 1805 certain Negroes set free by a deed of gift from their owner were, in pursuance of a decision of the supreme court of appeals, taken in execution for the satisfaction of the debts of the slave-owner's wife, notwithstanding the fact that the Negroes belonged to their owner before he married the wife for whose debts the Negroes were held.

The courts were generally opposed to the separation of families, and in 1695 the General Court of Virginia declared that devises of unborn children to be neither "convenient nor humanitarian," as the owner of the mother would not be careful of her pregnancy nor of the children when born, "and many children might hence die; and besides," said the court, "it was an unreasonable charge" without benefit to the owner of the mother. Still cases of "devise of increase" continued to come into court for adjudication. In 1727, Isaac Warner bequeathed "To Wife Ann . . . a Negro woman named Sarah . . . To daughter Ann Warner, an unborn child of the above named Sarah."

The conception of the slave as property rather than as person, added a further disability to the legal or civil status. He could neither own nor enjoy property in his own right.

"A limited property right, not unlike the Roman peculium, was allowed the slave by custom, though not by law. Masters frequently gave them horses, cattle or hogs for free disposal in their own right, and the Negro servants reduced to slavery in 1661 doubtless were possessed of property. This right was taken away by law in 1692, which converted such property for the use of the master, and upon his neglect to appropriate it, it was to be forfeited to the parish for the support of the poor. The custom, however, of masters assigning to slaves such property for management as peculium continued in spite of the law, and extended even to small tracts of land.

A slave could not make a legal contract. He could not therefore engage in trade. Slave marriages had no standing in court. In spite of this fact, masters did frequently enter business contracts with their slaves, granting them the license required by law for freedom of movement and the right to trade in consideration of a stipulated payment to be made by the slave."

Recognition Person of Slave In Law And Custom.

The conception of the slaves a property was not, however, absolute and the law recognized the person of the slave in various ways.

Negro slaves, male and females, were taxed along with male whites, Indian servants 16 years of age and free Negroes. This liability to taxation was retained upon free Negro women up to 1769, and was an inheritance from servitude.

By the acts of 1779 and 1781 slaves were still liable to a poll tax of five pounds and ten shillings, respectively, to be paid by the owners.

The court of Chancery also recognized slaves "as rational beings entitled to the humanity of the court," and the chancellor often protected freedmen from sale under a creditor's execution and would even enforce a contract between master and slave which had been wholly or in part complied with on the part of the slave, although the common law courts refused to recognize the ability of the slave to make a contract.

The slave's personal liberty allowed by custom on holidays and Sundays and during free time and his right to free movement was not restricted in Virginia until 1680.

"Hitherto they had been allowed to assemble freely at feasts and burials as was their custom, and to absent themselves from their master's plantation. Now the right of free movement was limited upon certificate from his superior, master or overseer, which could only be given on special and necessary occasions. Without this the slave could not absent himself from his owner's plantation nor could he carry any weapon, offensive or defensive."

The slave has the right to personal security. Maiming a slave according to the unanimous decision of the General Court on the act of 1805 was as much a penetentiary offence in Virginia as maiming a free man.

It was partly to protect the master in his property rights, but partly also, in recognition of the slave's personal rights that slave-stealing was early made a grave offense. A law of 1798 in Virginia made it punishable by death without benefit of clergy, but after the construction of a State penitentiary this was changed to imprisonment from three to eight years.

In Maryland the legislature went to considerable pains to prevent the sale South of Negroes, who were "slaves for a term of years" and not for life. "As early as 1789, the attention of the House of Delegates was called by the Society of Friends and by others, to the exportation by fraud or violence of slaves for terms of years, and for a generation thereafter, efforts for stringent and effective legislation were frequently made, especially by the Society of Friends.

"In 1839, two men attached to a New York schooner stole a Virginia Slave, and a requisition for them was refused by Governor William H. Seward of New York on the ground that they had not committed treason or felony within the provisions of the United States Constitution, which did not embrace State laws; that there was no such crime as a slave stealing in common law, as slavery was not so recognized; that New York had abolished slavery and the offense was a crime by statute law of Virginia. For this action the Governor was accused by several New York and Massachusetts papers of having infringed not only a precedent of one of his predecessors in office, but also a decision of the Supreme Court of New York, and of violating a provision of the United States Constitution."

Right of The Master To Punish Slave.

The right of the master to punish his slave was based not on the conception of the slave as property but on the authority of the master as head of the patriarchal organization represented by the plantation and was common to English servitude, villianage, apprenticeship and indentured servitude.

"Developed as an incident of servitude, corporal punishment was retained when this status passed into that of slavery. Humanity and self-interest were at first supposed to be sufficient motives to limit the extent of this power of the master to its rational use, but when they failed to do so the law intervened."

In 1829 a case arose in North Carolina, however, in which a master was indicted for beating a slave. The court in rendering its decision acquitted the master and affirmed the master's right to inflect any kind of punishment upon his slave short of death. In this decision chief justice Ruffin expressly denied that the relation of master and slave had any of the patriarchal element about it.

It was a mistake, he declared, to say that the relations of master and slave were like those of parent and child. The object of the parent in training his son was to render him fit to live the life of a free man, and, as a means to that end, he gave him moral and intellectual instruction. With the case of the slave it was different. There could be no sense in addressing moral considerations to a slave. The Chief Justice summed up his opinion upon this point in these words:

"The end of slavery is the profit of the master, his security and the public safety; the subject, one doomed in his own person and his posterity to live without knowledge and without capacity to make anything his own, and to toil that another may reap the fruits. What moral consideration shall be addressed to such a being to convince him, what it is impossible but that the most stupid must feel and know can never be true—that he is thus to labor upon a principle of natural duty, or for the sake of his own personal happiness. Such services can only be expected from one who has no will of his own, who surrenders his will in implicit obedience to that of another. Such obedience is the consequence only of uncontrolled authority over the body. There is nothing else which can operate to produce the effect. The power of the master must be absolute to render the submission of the slave perfect."

Not Liable To Prosecution For Killing Slaves.

Until 1723, if a slave chanced to die as a consequence of "a lawful correction" it was viewed as a lamentable and accidental homicide. In that year an act was passed in Virginia making such killing of a slave manslaughter, and not liable to prosecution or punishment. But if a single creditable witness declared that the slave was killed "wilfully, maliciously, or designedly," the person who perpetrated the crime might be punished as a murderer. In 1788 this law was repealed, and thenceforth the killing and maiming of a slave was made punishable as if he were a free white man.

"There was nothing, however, to prevent excessive beating of a slave that did not result in death or maiming, except the "deep and solemn reprobation of the tribunal of public opinion," though a person who cruelly beat a horse or other beast was subject to a fine of $50.

In 1850, a master convicted of torturing and killing a slave was sentenced in the Circuit Court of Hanover, Virginia, to five years in the penitentiary. "This penalty was so manifestly inadequate to the offense that the case was carried up to the General Court, where it was unanimously adjudged not manslaughter, but murder in the first degree. The presiding judge declaring as his belief that the records of criminal jurisprudence do not contain a case of more atrocious and wicked cruelty."

The following item from the American Weekly Mercury, April 29, 1742, is the kind of punishment in Pennsylvania of a white man who killed a black:

"Yesterday at a Supreme Court held in this City, sentence of Death was passed upon William Bullock, who was....Convicted of the Murder of his Negro Slave."

Slave Punished For Intention As If Committed Crime.

For more serious crimes and for offenses committed outside of the master's household, the slave was punishable by the State. So far he was regarded as a legal person with the same liability as any other free agent. Prior to 1692, slaves guilty of capital crimes were entitled to the same procedure, including trial by jury, as free whites. After that time they were given a summary trial by a commission selected by the sheriff, who indicted and convicted offenders without the intervention of a jury. In 1705, a master was allowed to appear in defense of his slave.

"The chief discrimination against the slave involved in punishment for capital crimes was that bare intention or attempt to commit a felony, though unsuccessful or not resulting in actual breach of the peace, was punishable as if the offense had been committed, while in the case of free whites intention was not punishable as it was in the case of slaves, unless the deed was committed. An attempt against the virtue of a white woman by a free white was a high misdemeanor, not a capital crime. Free Negroes were likewise punished by confinement in the penitentiary for three or more years for many crimes that were capital in the slave.

The following crimes were misdemeanors punishable by whipping: (1) hog stealing, first offense; (2) unseasonable killing of deer, if on the slave's own responsibility; (3) presence at unlawful meetings; (4) going abroad without leave; (5) carrying offensive or defensive weapons or ammunition without permission; (6) raising his hand against a Christian white unless wantonly assaulted. The penalty in each case was corporal punishment upon the bare back, the number of lashes varying from ten to thirty-nine, being specifically stated. Free colored persons and whites received like punishment, though a fewer number of lashes, where, like the slave, they could not make satisfaction by money payment. By 1847 the crimes of (7) provoking language, as well as a menacing gesture to a white; (8) making a seditious speech; and (9) selling, keeping or administering medicine in other families without consent, were specifically added, and punishment was not to exceed thirty-nine lashes at one time.

Baptism Did Not Alter Condition of The Person As To His Bondage Or Freedom.

The theory of slavery, developed in Europe under the influence of the Christian church, was that slavery should be confined to the heathen and that when an individual was accepted into the fellowship of the Christian religion he should not be longer held in slavery. The Negro, being a heathen, fell naturally into the same category as Jews, Mohammedans and Indians.

One excuse first advanced for slavery by the Spanish conquerors and later adopted by other apologists for slavery was, that in this way it was possible to give the infidel races the benefit of the Christian religion. The effect of this doctrine, however, was to induce masters to neglect the religious instructions of their slaves, since membership in the church seemed inconsistent with servitude for life.

To meet this difficulty the Virginia Legislature passed a law in 1667 declaring:

"Baptism doth not alter the condition of the person as to his bondage or freedom; in order that diverse masters freed from this doubt may more carefully endeavor the propagation of Christianity."

In 1670, the benefits of Christianity as to freedom were limited to servants imported from Christian lands. In 1682, the benefits of Christianity as a mode of securing freedom were definitely denied to all Negroes, mulattoes, Moors, and Turks, and to such Indian slaves as were sold by other Indians where original heathenism was affirmed.

By 1776, when the Virginia Declaration of Rights was adopted, in which more explicitly than in the Declaration of Independence the natural equality and inalienable right of every man "to life, liberty and the ursuit of happiness" is affirmed, slavery had come to be so thoroughly accepted as the natural condition of the Negro, that hardly a question was raised as to the effect of this declaration on the institution of slavery.

Chancellor Wythe, of the State of Virginia, did indeed lay down the rule that whenever one person claims to hold another in slavery "the burden of proof lies on the claimant," on the ground that freedom is the birthright of every human being. But the Virginia Court of Appeals disclaimed the decree of the Chancellor so far as it related to "native Africans and their descendants," who had been and were then held as slaves, but approved it as related to whites and American Indians. In the case of the Negro the presumption was that he was a slave until he was proven to be free.

THE STATUS OF THE FREE NEGRO.

Origin of Free Negro Class.

As Negro Servitude preceded Negro slavery, the first Free Negroes were recruited from the class of indentured servants. Others, as for example, Richard Johnson in 1651 probably came in not as servants but as free men.

As late as 1673 a judgment was rendered by the general Court against George Light for holding a Negro-indentured servant beyond his contract of five years. It was ordered that the Negro should "be free from his master and that said Mr. Light pay him Corne and Clothes according to the Custome of the Country and four hundred pounds tobac and cattle for his service Done him since he was free and pay costs."

After 1682 no Negroes were permitted to come into Virginia as servants and acquire freedom after a limited period of servitude. Not until the non-importation law of 1778 declared, "that every slave imported into this commonwealth, contrary to the time, intent and meaning of this act, shall upon importation become free," did Virginia recruit its class of few Negroes from imported Negroes.

A certain number of Free Negroes were descended from white women by Negro men. They were free according to the law that the children followed the status of the mother.

Benjamin Banneker, the Negro astronomer, was, through his grandmother on his mother's side, decended from a white woman, Molly Welsh, who after serving seven years as a redemptioner had purchased a farm with two slaves one of whom she emancipated and married.

Complaint was made in North Carolina in 1723 of immigrants "that several of them have intermarried with the white inhabitants; in contempt of the acts and laws in those cases made and provided;" and it was ordered that all white persons so married be subject to the same tax as was imposed on Negroes.

Free Negroes And Manumitted Slaves.

The first law recognizing the right of the master to manumit his slaves was one that restricted it. In 1691 a law was passed in Virginia declaring that no Negro or Mulatto was to be set free unless the person so doing should pay the charges for transporting the manumitted Negro beyond the limits of the colony. By an act passed in 1723 a master was forbidden under any pretext whatever to manumit a slave without the license of the governor and the council. If the law was violated, it became the duty of the church wardens of the parish to apprehend the Negro and sell him "by public outcry."

The right of the master to emancipate his slave, so far as it existed in the customary law was derived, like slavery itself, from the conditions of white servitude.

"Before slavery as an institution had fully diverged from identured servitude it borrowed from that institution the practice of manumission by individual masters. * * * * Now, in the seventeenth century the processes by which masters set Negroes free, whether they were recruits for a time or for life, were more like discharges from servitude than manumission from slavery."

REFERENCES: Russell the free Negro in Virginia, p. 46.

In Maryland, the first law defining the rights of manumission was passed in 1752. It declares that to be manumitted slaves must be sound in body and mind and capable of labor and not over fifty years of age. The purpose of this law was to prevent masters abandoning their slaves after they ceased to be profitable. By the provisions of this act, masters were bound to take care of all slaves unable to support themselves "in fitting food and clothing" and keep them from begging. Manumission was declared illegal when it would operate to the prejudice of creditors.

North Carolina, by a law enacted in 1715, prohibited masters from liberating slaves except for meritorious conduct, and in 1741 this law was modified so that meritorious conduct must be judged and certified by the county court.

New Jersey, by the terms of a law passed in 1744, provided that masters should not manumit their slaves only on condition that they enter into "sufficient surety" with "two sureties in the sum of 200 pounds" to pay the Negro an annuity, of twenty pounds ($100) per year. This law was apparently, like the first law on this subject in Maryland, intended to prevent the abandonment of worn out slaves. A similar motive led to the passage of the Connecticut law of May, 1702, which provided that slaves set free and coming to want must be relieved by their owners, their heirs, executors or administrators. To this was added a law providing that if owners refused to maintain the slaves they had emancipated, it should be the duty of the selectmen of the various towns to do so and then to sue the owners for the expenses incurred. A similar law was passed by Pennsylvania in 1725-27.

War of Independence And Manumission Of Slaves.

Sentiment aroused by the War of Independence in favor of personal liberty and of natural rights resulted in the passage of the law of May 1782, giving masters in Virginia the right to free their slaves. From this time on the number of free Negroes multiplied. The reason for emancipation is frequently stated as a "conviction and persuasion that freedom is a natural right," or "that freedom is the natural right of mankind."

Directly after the War of Independence a number of slaves in New Jersey who had become the property of the State as a result of the confiscation of Tory estates were set free by special act of the legislature. 1786 a law was passed by the terms of which slaves between the ages of 25 and 35, and able to support themselves, might be set free by their masters without security being given for their support.

From this time on the courts interpreted the law regulating manumission in a liberal spirit. Verbal declarations by a master that a slave should be free after the master's death were declared by the courts to have the effect of an actual manumission to take effect after the master's death. Slaves left by will to be sold for a term of years and then set free were held to be free from the time of sale and to have the status of indentured servants.

By law passed in May, 1777, in Connecticut, slaves were able to procure by bounty hire, or in any other way, such a sum as they were reasonably worth, to be paid to their masters, might enlist in the Patriot army and were thereupon declared de facto free, and the master was exempt from the support of such a free man in case he became dependent and unable to support himself.

The law of 1725-27 in Pennsylvania seems to have had less effect in limiting the number of emancipated slaves than in other colonies, for the reason that the Germans and Quakers who were the first settlers in Pennsylvania were conscientiously opposed to holding slaves. March 1, 1780, a law was passed providing that after that date no child born in Pennsylvania should be a slave, but if born of a slave mother should be held as a servant until he or she were twenty-eight years of age; and that all slaves not registered before November 1st should be free.

The Free Negro And Divergence North And South On Slavery.

The year 1782 marks the beginning of the divergence in sentiment between the Northern and Southern States in regard to slavery. In Northern States like New Jersey, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania, the movement for emancipation never lost the impetus which it had gained during the Revolutionary War. Virginia was divided. That part of the State which is now West Virginia was strongly anti-slavery, but the tide-water region on the other hand became increasingly pro-slavery.

By 1806 liberal sentiment aroused by the war had subsided. By the terms of the law passed in that year all slaves manumitted after May 1,1806, were required to leave the State within twelve months of the date of theire mancipation. With the passage of this law a new method was introduced for getting rid of free Negroes and at the same time giving freedom of conscience to those who desired to emancipate their slaves. This was the Colonization Movement.

In North Carolina, at the beginning of the War of Independence, complaint was made that "some evil-minded persons intending to disturb the public peace," liberated their slaves and left them at large in the community. The authorities of Perquimons and Pasquotank Counties took them up and resold them into slavery. The legislature confirmed these sales and provided that other such slaves might be sold in the same way; provided that this law did not extend to such Negroes as had enlisted in the Patriot army. The evil-minded persons referred to were Quakers.

The harshness of this law led to the adoption of several subterfuges to escape its provisions. In 1817 William Dickinson conveyed a slave to the trustees of the Quaker society of Contentnea to be kept at work but to receive the profits of his labor. Chief Justice Taylor declared that this was emancipation in everything but name and, being contrary to the policy of the law, was void.

One of the immediate results of the passage of the law of 1806 is Virginia which compelled emancipated slaves to leave the State, was the passage of countervailing acts forbidding free Negroes from other States to take up permanent residence within their borders. Law forbidding the immigration of free Negroes into their territories were passed by Maryland in 1806; Kentucky and Delaware in 1807. Similar laws were passed in the course of the succeeding twenty-five years, in Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, North Carolina and Tennessee.

Free Negroes were not welcomed in any part of the United States. A refugee slave was more likely to be received hospitably in the Northern States than a free Negro. The Philadelphia North American, quoted in Dubose's Commecial Review, Volume XXVII p. 731, said, "If there is one fact established by steadily accumulating evidence it is that the free Negro cannot find a congenial home in the United States. He is exotic among us." When John Randolph's 325 emancipated slaves reached Mercer County Ohio, having left Virginia in compliance with the laws, they were not allowed to remain even for three days upon land purchased by them in that county, although they were able to comply with Ohio's law, requiring immigrant free Negroes to give a bond for good behavior.

Free Negroes Not Welcome In Any Part United States.

The Virginia law of 1806 remained in force with slight modifications until the close of the slavery regime. In 1850 it was made part of the constitution of the State. The effect of this law was to diminish the number of manumissions. Coupling freedom with banishment not only made manumission more difficult to the masses, but freedom less desirable to the slave.

"Many of (slaves) preferred to continue as slaves in their master's household rather than be sent homeless into a strange land. Lucinda, a Negro woman manumitted about 1812 by the last will of Mary Matthews, refused to be moved to Tennessee with other Negroes set free by the same will, deliberately remaining in the State long enough to forfeit her freedom and petitioning the legislature to vest the title to her in William H. Hose. Sam, a Negro petitioner, declared to the legislature in 1808 that he preferred slavery to being forced to leave his wife and family, all of whom were slaves." (Russell, The Free Negro in Virginia, p. 76.)

A secondary result of the Virginia law of 1806 was that many free colored men who had purchased their wives and children continued to hold them as slaves. In 1809 a colored man by the name of Frank died in Amelia County, Virginia, who had purchased his wife and children and although he had intended that they should be virtually free, had not made them actually so because he would then have had to remove them from the State. The legislature intervened in this case because the purchase by Frank of his family took place before the enactment of the law of 1806. Bowling Clark, a free Negro of Campbell County, had purchased his wife a few years after the act of 1806 went into operation. As both were declining in years, they preferred to maintain the status of master and slave rather than accept the alternative of banishment.

Liberia And Colonization Free Negroes.

After the great slavery debate in Virginia in 1832 there arose a new school of apologists for slavery represented by Thomas R. Dew, Professor of History and Metaphysics in William and Mary College; George Fitzhugh, and Alfred F. Bledsoe, Professor of Mathematics in the University of Virginia. These men contended that slavery so far from being an economic and political evil was a positive good. About this time the rise of the Abolition Movement in the North made slavery a distinct sectional issue.

In 1831 a law was passed in Maryland declaring that all blacks thereafter emancipated should be turned over to the Maryland Colonization Society, and either with or without their consent removed to Liberia.

If any person manumitted should refuse to leave Maryland the sheriff should be called upon by State Board of Managers to arrest and transport such persons. In case any slaves manumitted could not be removed without separating the family it was provided that the slaves might renounce their freedom and remain at home as slaves. The Board of Managers could hire out manumitted person whom they might have to remove to pay the expenses of the removal.

In practice these stringent regulations were not enforced. There is only one instance recorded in which the sheriff was called upon, under the law of 1831, to remove a manumitted slave from the state. On the other hand numerous petitions were granted by the legislature allowing manumitted slaves to remain within the limits of the State. In 1835, a free Negro was empowered to manumit his wife and four children whom he had purchased but could not free under the law. When a certain free colored man died in 1834 without manumitting his wife and children as he had intended to do, the legislature declared them free, capable of holding property, and heirs of each other. One freedman left at his death several hundred dollars and a slave,—his only son. The children of his old master petitioned that the slave might be bought with the money and freed, and this petition was granted.

Anti-Slavery Controversy Causes Laws Prohibiting Manumission.

Fear of insurrections and excitement over the anti-slavery controversy tended to increase the pro-slavery sentiment and tighten the laws regarding the manumission of slaves. In 1858 a law was enacted in Maryland that no slave thereafter manumitted by a deed or a will upon condition of leaving the State or any other condition should be entitled to freedom until the condition had been performed. In 1860 manumission was totally prohibited in Maryland and free blacks over eighteen years of age were empowered if they chose to get permission through the courts to renounce freedom and choose masters.

Regardless of what views he might hold respecting slavery in general, many masters continued, in recognition of long and faithful service to manumit their slaves.

In 1859 Edmond Ruffin, lamenting the abuse of testamentary manumission by slave owners "of morbidly tender consciences, ... especially of old men and old women" compared the motives of such slave owners to the motives appealed to by priests in the dark ages "when inducing rich sinners to smooth and pay their future pass to heaven."

The will of J. A. Schwartz, of Nottoway County, affords a striking illustration of the way in which the reflections of slave-masters in their last illness often impelled them to acknowledge their debt of gratitude to their slaves while there was opportunity. With his slaves standing around him as he lay upon his deathbed, Schwartz questioned them separately before dictating orally what was intended for his will in respect to them.

'Bob, do you wish to be freed?'

'I am willing to serve you, but I had rather be freed than have another master,' said Bob.

'He should be free,' answered the master.

When a similar conversation had taken place between Frank and the dying man with a like result, Polly enquired: 'What are you going to do for poor me?' 'Polly and her children,' said he, should be free.'

Gradual Decline Status Free Negro With Growth Slavery.

Before slavery had been finally established in the English colonies and while there was as yet no clear distinction between white servitude and Negro slavery, the Free Negro, whatever his social status may have been, seems to have enjoyed all the rights of white men. As slavery extended and developed the status of the Free Negro declined and his freedom and liberty of action were abridged.

"But as slavery advanced toward a more complete inclusion and subjection of the Negro race in Virginia, the social and industrial privileges of the free Negro were gradually curtailed. The denial to him, by laws passed in 1723, of the right to vote, the right to bear arms, and the right to bear witness is proof of the fact that prejudice had extended beyond a demand for race separation and race purity to an imposition upon the Negro of a low and servile station."

The Free Negro had the right to acquire and hold property upon practically the same terms as the white man. However, a law passed in Virginia in 1607 declared that "noe negro or Indian though baptized and enjoyed their own freedome shall be capable of any purchase of Christians, but yet not debarred from buying any of their own nations." In 1832, a law was passed in Virginia which denied to Free Negroes the right to acquire slaves by descent other than husband, wife and children, and in 1858 they were prohibited from acquiring slaves except by descent.

"The courts still upheld the property rights of free Negroes by holding that when a bequest of slaves was made to persons in trust for free Negroes, the slaves must be sold or exchanged for a kind of property which free Negroes could lawfully possess, and that the proceeds of the sale must be distributed among the free Negroes according to the provisions of the will."

"In 1723, free Negroes, mulattoes, and Indians were forbidden to 'keep or carry any gun, powder or shot or any club or other weapon whatsoever offensive or defensive.' In many parts of the country Negroes were also forbidden to own a dog. In 1805, a bill was passed in Maryland allowing a free black man to keep one dog only, by a yearly license from a justice, and making any free black who should go abroad with any firearm, liable to forfeit the same to an informer, and to pay all costs, unless he had a certificate from a justice renewable yearly, that he was an orderly and peaceable person."

Free Negroes Lose Standing In The Courts.

Prior to 1832, in the method of trial for crimes, Free Negroes were on the same footing as white men.

"In the session of the legislature following the Southampton insurrection in 1831, free Negroes were denied by statute the right of trial by jury, except for offenses punishable by death. Thereafter they were tried by courts of oyer and terminer, which had been in use since 1692 for the 'speedy prosecution of slaves . . . without the solemnity of jury.' No fewer than five justices of the county or corporation could sit as a unanimous decision was necessary for conviction. The decisions of the court comprehending both the law and the fact, were final."

The law of evidence, after many modifications came to be based strictly on the color line. "Colored persons, free or slave, could testify for or against colored, but not in any case in which a white person was concerned."

"A free black of Somerset County asked leave of the Assembly, in 1832, to prove accounts against white persons but the House Committee deemed the prayer unreasonable. A free black of Anne Arundel, for instance, an industrious carpenter, who had undertaken large repairs on the farm buildings of a neighbor found himself unable, when the neighbor died, to prove the accounts to the executor, and had to enlist the interest of a white man, who knew of the work done, to testify of his statements."

Intermarriage between the races was always extremely rare, and in 1691 a law passed in Virginia prescribed for "any white woman marrying a Negro or mulatto, bond or free, the extreme penalty of perpetual banishment." Soon after Anna Wall, an English woman, was arraigned in the county court of Elizabeth City on the charge of "keeping company with a Negro under pretense of marriage." Upon conviction, she and two of her mulatto children were bound for terms of service to a man living in Norfolk County, and a court order was recorded to the effect that in case she ever returned to Elizabeth City, Norfolk County, she should be banished to the Barbadoes.

In Pennsylvania, "if a free Negro man or woman married a white person, that Negro was to be sold by the justices of the Quarter Session as a slave for life. For a white person offending the penalty was seven years of servitude, or a fine of thirty pounds. If the offense was fornication or adultery the free Negro was to be sold as a servant for seven years. The white person thus guilty was to be punished by whipping, imprisonment, or branding with the letter 'A.'

By the act of 1681 in Maryland, "children born of white servant women and Negroes were free. After 1692, the issue of a union between any white woman and any slave or free Negro became servants for a long term. By the act of 1715, ministers and magistrates were forbidden, by fine, to marry any white to 'any Negro whatsoever, or Mulatto Slave.' By this, a white and free mulatto could marry. And an act, two years later, to provide penalties against the parties marrying unlawfully, under this act of 1715, made a free Negro or mulatto liable to service for life—except mulattoes born of white women, who had to serve, like the whites, for only seven years. Again, by act of 1728, free mulatto women who might have children by 'Negroes and other slaves' were to be punished by the same penalty as white women for the same offense—which was declared to be as heinous for a free mulatto as for a white."

Free Negroes Not Permitted To Move From One State To Another.

The right of free movement which the Free Negro possessed with little or no restriction in the colonial period, was more and more restricted in the later years of slavery. In 1793, Free Negroes in Virginia were forbidden to enter the State to take up permanent residence.

"A free Negro living within the State could not go from one town or county to another to seek employment without a copy of his register which was kept in the court of his county or corporation. Violators of this law were often committed to jail until they made proof of their freedom and paid the jailor's fee. If they were unable to pay this fee they were hired out to the highest bidder for a time sufficient to pay the charges. By an act of 1801, any free Negro who, even though in possession of 'free papers,' removed into another county or corporation was declared an intruder, and made liable to arrest as a vagrant. By a later act they were denied the right to change their residence from one county or town to another without permission from the court of the county or corporation to which they wished to go. After 1848 no free Negro could leave the State for the purpose of education, or go for any purpose to a non-slaveholding State and return."

The law of Maryland was still more stringent. "Any Negro who might leave Maryland and remain away over thirty days, would be deemed a non-resident and liable to the law, unless before leaving he should deposit with the county clerk a written statement of his plans, or on returning, could prove by certificate that he had been detained by sickness or coercion."

"A respectable colored minister of Annapolis—who paid taxes on property assessed at over Five Thousand Dollars—asked in 1846 for an act to allow his children to visit him from time to time, and again in 1861, to allow his sons to return to Maryland, but both petitions seemed to have remained with the committee."

"A free Negro of the District of Columbia obtained permission to visit his wife, a slave of Prince George's County, by giving bond with security in fifty dollars that he would not come there for employment, that he would not stay over four days at a time, barring illness, and that he would behave well." There were similar regulations in some of the Northern States.

White Women Exempt But Free Negro Women Compelled To Pay Poll Tax.

Free Negroes were frequently required to pay a higher poll tax than the free white man. Up to 1769, Free Negro women were compelled to pay a head tax in Virginia, although white women were exempt. In 1813, a special poll-tax of $1.50 was placed upon all male Free Negroes over sixteen years of age. This was later increased to $2.50.

"In 1814, $8,322 was paid into the treasury by 5,547 free Negroes, or about ninety per cent of the male free Negroes within the taxable age. In 1815, when the rate was $2.50, instead of $1.50, as in the two preceding years, and only such as were between the ages of sixteen and forty-five were taxable, 4,023 free Negroes paid their assessments, which amounted to $10,057.50."

The right to hold office was taken away from Free Negroes in Virginia and by a law passed in 1723 they were not allowed to vote. The act declared that "no Negro, mulatto, or Indian shall hereafter have any vote at the elections of burgesses or any elections whatever."

In Maryland Free Negroes had the right to vote down to 1783. In that year it was enacted that "no colored person freed thereafter, nor the issue of such, should be allowed to vote, or to hold any office, or to give evidence against any white, or to enjoy any other rights of a freeman than the possession of property and redress at law or equity for injury to person or property."

"An amendment to the Constitution, adopted in 1810, limited the right of suffrage to whites. The Declaration of 1851 repeated the words of the Declaration of 1776, that no freeman should be deprived of life, liberty, or property, but by judgment of his peers or the law of the land—But added that "this should not be construed to prevent the Legislature from passing such laws as it might deem fit for the government and disposition of the free colored population.

Besides Georgia and South Carolina, which continued the distinction made in colonial times, between 1792 and 1834, the four border states of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Kentucky absolutely forbade suffrage to Negroes; and every other slave State admitted by Congress came into the Union with a constitution prohibiting Negroes from voting. In the remaining slave State, North Carolina, every freeman who paid a public tax was entitled to vote, and it was notorious that Negroes could and did take part in elections till, in 1835, a constitution excluded them from the suffrage.

Free Negroes Denied The Right Public Assemblage.

In many States, and this was especially true after 1831, the year of the Southampton Insurrection, the right of assembly was denied or greatly restricted. By the act of the Maryland legislature in 1831, persons were "forbidden to assemble or attend meetings for religious purposes which were not conducted by white licensed clergymen or by some respectable white of the neighborhood authorized by the clergyman."

"In 1842, the judges of Baltimore City Court communicated to the Assembly the presentment by the Grand Jury of a number of associations of blacks in Baltimore for secret purposes." The Grand Jury of Baltimore County had similarly called the attention of the County Court to such societies professing to be Masonic. There was enacted accordingly that any free colored person convicted of becoming, or of continuing to be, a member of any secret society whatever, whether it held its meeting in Maryland or without, should be deemed a felon, and be fined not less than Fifty Dollars—half to the informer, half to the State—or, in default be sold for a term of service sufficient to pay the fine. For a second offense, the penalty was sale out of the State as slave for life. "In 1845, Negro camp meetings and other protracted out door meetings were forbidden, as being deemed nuisances to the public."

Free Negroes were permitted to engage in most occupations open to white men, but in the later years of slavery these occupations were greatly restricted. In Maryland they were not allowed to navigate vessels of the size required by government laws to be registered.

"In 1838 a free black asked leave to sail his own boat, but the House Committee reported unfavorably. In 1856, a bill passed the Senate without opposition to allow two free blacks of Harford County to run their own vessel to and fro between Baltimore City and the Bush and Gunpowder Rivers, but the House threw it out by a vote of forty-four to five; and the petition of another black, two years later, to run a vessel without a white on board, was left on the table."

Free Negroes were permitted to sell liquor in Maryland up to 1831, after obtaining the customary license, but after that time licenses were granted to them only by the order of the court, instead of by the clerks, as in the case of the whites.

In 1852, this law was made still more stringent and no white person was allowed to employ a Negro clerk.

"In May, 1860, a resident of Baltimore was indicted, under the act of "52, for employing as his clerk in a retail store in Annapolis a colored man of that city. On pleading guilty before Anne Arundel circuit, he was fined Five Hundred Dollars and costs, for the payment of which, the father of the clerk, a prosperous and respectable mulatto of Annapolis, became his surety."

Schools Denied Free Negroes In Virginia and Education Restricted In Maryland.

Several insurrections of the slaves in the early part of the century led the legislatures in those States where there was any large body of Free Negroes to pass laws denying to Free Negroes the opportunities of education.

"By an act of April 7, 1831, 'all meetings of Free Negroes or mulattoes at any school-house or other place of teaching them reading, or writing, either in the day or night, under whatever pretext,' were declared to be unlawful assemblies. If a white person attempted to teach free Negroes for pay, he was liable to a fine of Fifty Dollars and imprisonment. After 'Brother' Nat Turner's insurrection the ban was put on upon Negro preachers and teachers by an act declaring it unlawful for Negroes, whether ordained or licensed or otherwise, to preach, exhort, or conduct any meeting for religious or other purposes."

"Some free colored persons who possessed sufficient means began sending their children to the North to be educated; but in 1838 all such efforts were forestalled by an act declaring that any free person of color who should go beyond the State for education should be considered to have emigrated. From 1838 to the close of the Civil War the only educational advantage that could lawfully be given to the free Negroes was strictly private instruction. Rarely and with difficulty did some free colored families procure white persons to teach their children privately."

In 1841, a law passed in Maryland declared it to be a high crime punishable with imprisonment for ten or twenty years "for any free colored person who should, knowingly, call for or receive at any post-office, or receive or have in his or her possession, any abolition hand-bill, pamphlet, newspaper, pictorial representation or other paper of any inflammatory character."

"At the April term, 1857, of the circuit of Dorchester County, a free black was tried—before the court by his choice—on two indictments. On one he was found not guilty, but on the other, for knowingly having in his possession 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' he was given a minimum term of ten years."

The status of the Free Negro at the close of the slavery regime was succinctly stated by General Broadnax, a leading member of the Virginia Legislature. "In truth," he he said, "free Negroes have legal rights but no constitutional ones."

Many free Negroes owned slaves. There were in Charleston, S. C. in 1860, 132 Negroes who owned slaves. It is estimated that in the course of slavery in this country there were in the South 6,000 Negro slave owners and that in that time 18,000 slaves were held by Negroes.

SLAVE INSURRECTIONS.

It is estimated that some twenty-five insurrections of slaves took place in the United States prior to the American Revolution. This takes no account of the insurrections in Louisiana and in the Spanish, French and English colonies in the West Indies.

The most important insurrection in the West Indies was the uprising in 1791 of the slaves on the Island of Haiti, by which that country gained its Indendence. 1804 the Republic of Haiti established.

1526. First insurrection of Negro slaves within present limits of United States in Ayllon's colony, on the coast of what is now South Carolina.

1664. Insurrection planned in Virginia by white bondmen and Negro slaves. At that time there was hardly 1,000 Negroes in the colony.

1687. Attempted insurrection of Negroes in the Northern Neck of Virginia. Negro population was about equal to that of whites.

1710. Negro insurrection planned in Surry County, Virginia. One of the conspirators, Will, a slave of Robert Ruffin, revealed the plot and as a reward was emancipated.

1712. First serious insurrection of slaves in the Thirteen Colonies in New York. The garrison saved the city from being reduced to ashes.

1720. Charleston, South Carolina, white people attacked in their houses and on the streets. Twenty-three slaves arrested, of whom six were convicted and three executed.

1722. Armed body of about 200 Negroes gathered near the mouth of the Rappahannock River, Virginia, for the purpose of attacking the people while they were in church. The plot was discovered.

1723. April 13. Governor Dummer, of Massachusetts issued a proclamation concerning the "fires which have been designedly and industriously kindled by some villainous and desperate Negroes or other dissolute people as appears by the confession of some of them." April 18, the Rev. Joseph Sewell preached a sermon on "The late fires that have broken out in Boston, supposed to be purposely set by ye Negroes." April 19, the selectmen of Boston made a report consisting of nineteen articles, Number 9 of which said, that if more than two Indians, Negro or mulatto servants or slaves be found in the streets or highways, in or about the town, idling or lurking together, unless in the service of their master or employer, every one so found shall be punished at the House of Correction."

1730. August. Insurrection in Williamsburg, Virginia.

1730. Rebellion of slaves reported from South Carolina.

1734. Conspiracy of slaves to gain their freedom by massacre of the whites discovered near Somerville, New Jersey. About thirty Negroes apprehended two hanged, some had ears cut off, others whipped.

1739. Slave conspiracy in Prince George's County, Maryland. The leader was tried and executed.

1740. Insurrection at Stone River, in South Carolina, was led by a slave Cato. Houses were burned and men, women and children murdered.

1741. Insurrection in New York City; population 12,000 whites and 2,000 blacks. Thirteen conspirators burned alive, eighteen hung, and eighty transported.

1741. Rumors of an insurrection among Negroes around Hackensack, N. J. Seven barnes were burned, two Negroes charged with the crime burned.

1768. Insurrection of slaves planned in Savannah, Georgia. A disagreement about the method of procedure, caused plot to fail. The population of the city consisted at this time of 3,000 whites and 2,700 blacks.

1772. Insurrection at Perth Amboy, New Jersey, threatened.

1775. Reported insurrection in Pitt Beufort and adjoining counties in North Carolina; a number of slaves arrested and some whipped severely, but none were proven to have been connected with any conspiracy.

1800. Two Negroes, Gabriel and Jack Bowler, were leaders in an attempted revolt in Henrico County, Virginia. A thousand Negroes marched on the city of Richmond. Forced by a swollen stream to halt, they disbanded with the understanding that they would renew the attempt the following night. The plot was discovered and Gabriel and Bowler were caught and executed.

1802. Slave insurrection reported in Northeastern part of North Carolina in the counties of Camden, Currituck, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Chowan, Hertford, Martin, Bertie, Beaufort and Washington. June 10th had been set for the beginning of the insurrection. Two of the leaders were executed.

1805. Slave insurrection occurred in Wayne County, North Carolina. One Negro burned at the stake and two hanged.

1811. Parish of St. John the Baptist, thirty-six miles above New Orleans, about 500 Negro slaves organized and marched toward the city. They destroyed plantations on the way and forced other slaves to join them. Insurrection suppressed by the garrison from Fort St. Charles.

1816. Insurrection planned by slaves at Fredericksburg, Virginia. It was betrayed. The leaders were hanged. In this same year slave uprising reported at Camden, South Carolina.

1818. Rebellion of slaves at Charleston, S. C.

1819. Attempted insurrection at Augusta, Georgia.

1822. Extensive conspiracy organized at Charleston, South Carolina, by a free Negro, Denmark Vesey. Slaves for forty or fifty miles around Charleston were concerned in the uprising. The plan was to slaughter the whites and free the blacks. A recruiting committee was formed and every slave enlisted was sworn to secrecy. Peter Poyas, one of the conspirators, is said to have personally enlisted six hundred persons. The plot was revealed by a household servant. After a month's investigation, only fifty of the thousands supposed to have been concerned were apprehended. Vesey, with thirty-four others, was put to death. They died without revealing their secrets.

1831. Southampton Insurrection, Southampton, County, Virginia, Nat Turner, the leader of this insurrection, a slave preacher. His mother, it is said, taught him that, like Moses, he was to be the deliverer of his race. Turner's plan was to collect a large number of slaves in the Dismal swamp in the extreme southeastern section of Virginia. August 21, he set out with six companions, the band soon numbered sixty or more. Sixty white persons on different plantations killed. The local militia and United States troops were called out, and after more than a hundred insurrectionists had been killed the uprising was crushed. Fifty-three Negroes were tried, twenty-one were acquitted, twelve were convicted and sold out of the State, and twenty others, including Turner and one woman, were hanged.

1831. October 4. There was to be an uprising of the Negroes in Sampson, Dublin and New Hanover Counties, North Carolina. They were to assemble at Wilmington. Plot was revealed by a free Negro.

1845. Slave insurrection in Charles County, Maryland.

1853. April. Rumored uprising of slaves in Dorchester, Maryland.

1857. Rumored slave insurrection in Prince George's County, Maryland.

1859. October 16. John Brown's raid on Harper's Ferry. This was the last of the attempted slave insurrections. Of the five Negroes who accompanied him two were killed; two were captured and executed, one escaped. Osborne Perry Anderson, was a printer by trade, born July 27, 1830, at West Fallowfield, Pennsylvania, died, December 13, 1872, at Washington, D. C. John Anthony Copeland, jr., for a time a student in Oberlin, was born free, August 15, 1834, at Raleigh, North Carolina; executed December 16, 1859. Shields Green, born a slave escaped from slavery on a sailing vessel from Charleston, S. C.; executed December 16, 1859; he was said to have been about twenty-three years of age. Lewis Sheridan Leary, saddler and harnessmaker, was born free at Fayetteville, North Carolina, March 17, 1835; killed October 17, 1859. Dangerfield Newby was born a slave in 1815 in Fauquier County, Virginia. His father, a Scotchman, freed his mulatto children. Killed, October 17, 1859.

1859. After the John Brown raid, rumor spread that there was to be a slave insurrection in the eastern portions of Maryland and Virginia.

1859. October 19. Rumored slave insurrection at Frederick, Maryland.

THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD.

The secret routes for transporting fugitive slaves to the free States of the North and to Canada were popularly known as "underground railroads." Friends of the fleeing slaves, by systematic and co-operative efforts, aided them to elude the pursuit of the slave hunters.

There were at convenient distances "stations," that is, the houses of persons who held themselves in readiness to receive fugitives, singly or in numbers, at any hour of the day or at night, to feed, shelter and clothe, if necessary, and to conceal until they could be dispatched with safety to some other station along the route. There were other persons known as conductors who held themselves ready at all times to take the fugitives by private or public conveyance and transport them to the next station. If they went by private conveyance, they generally traveled in the night, by such routes and with such disguises as gave the best warrant against detection either by the slave catchers or their many sympathizers.

As early as 1786, there are evidences of an underground road. A letter of George Washington, written in that year, speaks of a slave escaping from Virginia to Philadelphia, and being there aided by a society of Quakers formed for the purpose of assisting in liberating slaves. It was not, however, until after the War of 1812, that escaped slaves began to find their way by the underground roads in considerable numbers to Canada.

From Maine to Kansas, all the northern States were dotted with the underground stations, and covered with a net work of underground roads. It is estimated that between 1830 and 1860 over 9,000 slaves were aided to escape by way of Philadelphia. During this same period in Ohio, 40,000 fugitives are said to have escaped by way of the underground railroads. A number of slaves also escaped from Texas and the Southwest into Mexico. There is at present at Nacimiento Coahuila, Mexico, a colony of about 300 Negroes which is made up of the descendants of fugitive slaves and Negro soldiers who remained in Mexico when the United States Army went there to drive the French out of the country. When the American Army crossed the Rio Grande it was divided into two parts. One part went to help drive out the French. The Negro soldiers, under the command of Colonel Shafter, went westward and fought against the Indians. For services which these Negroes rendered, the Mexican Government granted them fourteen leagues of land which is at present held as a reservation so that it can be protected from intruders. The papers setting aside this grant were signed by the representatives of the government of Mexico and of the United States.

NEGROES CONNECTED WITH ABOLITION AND UNDERGROUND RAILROAD.

Brown, William Wells.—Anti-slavery agitator. Agent of the underground railroad. Born a slave in St. Louis, Mo., 1816.

As a boy, Brown worked in the printing office of Elijah B. Lovejoy. In 1834 he escaped to the North and obtained a position on a Lake Erie steamer. Here he was of great service in assisting slaves to make their way to Canada. In 1843, he became a lecturer for the Anti-Slavery Society and continued in that position until 1849. He is the author of several books, the most important of which are "The Black Man," "The Rising Sun," and "Sketches of Places and People Abroad."

Douglass, Frederick.—Noted American anti-slavery agitator and journalist. Born a slave at Tuckahoe, near Easton, Maryland, February, 1817. Died February 2, 1895.

In 1838 Douglass escaped from slavery under the disguise of a sailor He went first to New York City and then to New Bedford, Massachusetts. In 1841 he attended an anti-slavery convention at Nantucket and spoke with such power and eloquence that he was immediately sent out as a lecturer under the auspices of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society. He became one of the most prominent anti-slavery agitators. He received and accepted an invitation to lecture in Great Britain. In 1847 he settled at Rochester, New York, and began to publish an abolition paper, "The North Star." In 1845 he published his autobiography. In 1882 his autobiography was republished under the title, "Life and Times of Frederick Douglass." He held a number of prominent political positions the more important of which were: Marshal of the District of Columbia, Recorder of Deeds of the District and Minister to Haiti.

Whipper, William.—Successful business man, anti-slavery agitator, editor of The National Reformer.

Mr. Whipper began the lumber business in Columbia, Pennsylvania, in partnership with Stephen Smith. In order to have a better field for their operations they moved to Philadelphia and opened one of the largest wood and coal yards in the city. The firm owned many rafts and employed many boatmen and raftsmen. In 1849, the firm was said to hold, besides many thousand bushels of coal, 250,000 feet of lumber, 22 merchantmen cars running between Philadelphia and Baltimore, and $9,000 worth of stock in the Columbia bridge Their notes were accepted for any amount. Mr. Whipper gave much of his time to the advocacy to the freedom of the slave. In 1838 Mr. Whipper became editor of the National Reformer, a monthly magazine published by the American Moral Reform Society. This magazine was the first effort in journalism by Philadelphia Negroes.

Forten, James.—Negro abolitionist. Born in Philadelphia, September 6, 1776; died March 4, 1842. Forten was a sail-maker by trade.

He was educated in the school of the Quaker abolitionist, Anthony Benezet. Forten acquired considerable wealth. With the assistance of Richard Allen and Absolom Jones he helped to raise 2,500 colored volunteers for the protection of the city of Philadelphia when it was threatened by the English. He was chairman of the first convention of free Negroes held in Philadelphia, 1817. He was a warm friend and supporter of William Lloyd Garrison It is said that several times, by personal contributions, he enabled Garrison to continue the publication of the "Liberator."

Harper, Mrs. Frances E. Watkins.—Distinguished anti-slavery, lecturer, writer and poet. Born of free parents, 1825, Baltimore, Maryland; died February 22, 1911.

Mrs. Harper went to school to her uncle, Rev. William Watkins, who taught a school in Baltimore for free colored children. About 1851 she moved to Ohio and began teaching, but later came to Little York, Pennsylvania, where he became acquainted with the workings of the underground railroad and thereafter determined to devote her life to the anti-slavery cause. In 1854 she began her career as a public lecturer, and in 1860 married Fenton Harper. By 1864 she had become known as an anti-slavery writer both in poetry and prose. After the close of the Civil War she came South, but later returned to Philadelphia and devoted her time to writing and lecturing for temperance work. For a time she had charge of the W. C. T. U. work among colored people. She published several books of poems. "Iola Leroy, or the Shadows Uplifted" is her best prose work.

Hayden, Lewis.—Born 1815, died 1889. Runaway slave from Kentucky to Boston, Abolitionist.

Mr. Hayden's home was a common meeting place for councils affecting his race. It was also a station of the underground railroad. He himself came as a fugitive from Kentucky in 1844. Through native strength of character he soon became a dominant figure in Boston's Negro colony, and so remained until his death. He was probably the only Negro office holder before the war. In 1859 he was appointed messenger to the Massachusetts Secretary of State, which position he held, except for a short interval, until his death. He was in 1873, elected to the State Legislature.

Ray, Charles B.—Anti-slavery Agitator. Agent Underground Railroad. Born Falmouth, Mass., December 25, 1807; died New York City, August 15, 1886. Congregational minister and editor of the Colored American from 1839 to 1842.

In 1[illegible] became identified with the abolition movement. Was associated with Henry Ward Beecher, Gerrit Smith, Lewis Tappan and others prominent in the anti-slavery movement. Mr. Ray was secretary of the Local Vigilance Committee in New York City and also of the State Vigilance Committee. He was prominently connected with the work of the Underground Railroad. His home was an important station where almost daily fugitives were received.

Bell, William C.—Anti-slavery agitator and author of Boston. In 1840 was a leader in the agitation for public schools to be thrown open to Negro children.

Continued a leader in the agitation until they were opened to all children regardless of race. Mr. Bell's works are "Services of Colored Americans in the Wars of 1776 and 1812," Boston, 1852, and "Colored Patriots of the American Revolution," Boston, 1855.

Lane, Lunsford.—Born a slave at Raleigh, N. C. He is placed in Prof. Brawley's "History of the Anti-Slavery Leaders of North Carolina" among the four prominent abolitionists of that State.

It is said that Lane waited on LaFayette when he passed through Raleigh in 1825. Lane's ambition was to be free, and he began early in life to save money to purchase his freedom. He and his father manufactured a superior kind of smoking tobacco. They were at length permitted to manufacture this tobacco on their own account. At the end of eight years Lane had saved a Thousand Dollars with which to purchase his freedom. In 1839 he bought a home and negotiated for the purchasing of his wife and children for $2,500. Because of the laws of North Carolina, Lane was compelled to go to New York City to have the articles of the emancipation executed. When he returned he was arrested and was informed that under the law he must leave the State within twenty days. Before he could close up his business he was arrested and taken before the mayor on the charge of "delivering abolition lectures in Massachusetts." Replying to this charge, Lane made a statement before the Mayor's Court which was probably the only abolition speech ever made by a Negro before a Southern audience.

[illegible] Brawley, Anti-Slavery Leaders in North Carolina, Johns Hopkins University Studies; Washington, The Story of the Negro; and W. G. Hawkins, Lunsford Lane, Boston, 1863.

Purvis, Robert.—Anti-slavery agitator; chairman of the Philadelphia Vigilance Committee of the Underground Railroad, and member of the first Anti-slavery Convention in 1833.

Purvis was one of the signers of the Declaration of Sentiments. He was at that time the most prominent anti-slavery man of the Negro race. In 1883 at the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Anti-Slavery Convention held in Philadelphia he was one of the three original signers present. John G. Whittier, the poet, and Elizur Wright, the anti-slavery editor, were the other two.

Redmond, Charles Lenox.—Born at Salem, Massachusetts, 1810 died 1873. First Negro to take lecture platform as an anti-slavery speaker.

He was president of the Essex County Anti-Slavery Society and was a vice president of the New England Anti-Slavery Society. In 1838 he took the field as a lecturer under the auspices of the American Anti-Slavery Society. In this capacity he canvassed New England. In 1840 he went to England as a delegate to the first World Anti-Slavery Convention held in London. While abroad he delivered many anti-slavery lectures. On his return he brought a remarkable document, an "Address" from the Irish people to their countrymen and countrywomen in America. With the name of Daniel O'Connell at its head, sixty thousand names were appended to this monstrous memorial. The Irish-Americans were called upon to treat the Negroes as brethren and everywhere to unite with the abolitionists.

Russwurm, John Brown.—Born in Jamaica, 1799; died in Liberia, 1851. Editor of the first Negro newspaper published in the United States, the "Freedmen's Journal," published in New York City, 1827.

Mr. Russwurm, one of the first Negroes to graduate from a college in the United States, graduated from Bowdoin College in 1826; in 1829 he went to Liberia and became superintendent of the public schools and editor of the Liberia Herald. In 1836 he was appointed Governor of the District of Maryland in Liberia, in which position he died.

Tubman, Harriet.—Fugitive slave and one of the most famous of the Underground railroad operators, died March 10, 1913.

Harriet Tubman escaped from slavery in Maryland about 1849 when between twenty and twenty-five years of age, and at once began to make trips into the South to aid others to escape. In nineteen trips she is said to have led over three hundred fugitive slaves into the Northern States and Canada. She was employed during the Civil War in the secret service of the Federal Army. After the war she founded a home at Auburn, New York, for aged colored persons. She retained much of her vigor until she was over eighty years old. For the two years previous to her death she was cared for by friends and particularly the New York State Federation of Colored Women's Clubs.

Truth, Sojourner.—A noted anti-slavery speaker, born about 1775, in Africa. Brought when a child, to America, she was sold as a slave in the State of New York.

After slavery was abolished in New York in 1827, Sojourner Truth became widely known in the North and was a prominent figure in anti-slavery meetings. Sojourner Truth was noted as a public speaker. She was able to "bear down an audience by a few simple words." She was greatly admired by Wendell Phillips, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and other prominent anti-slavery agitators.

REFERENCE: Narrative Sojourner Truth, Boston, 1850.

Still, William.—Secretary of the Philadelphia Vigilance Committee of the Underground Railroad. Born October 7, 1821, in Burlington County, New Jersey.

Still's father purchased his freedom. His mother was a fugitive slave. His brother was kidnapped and carried to Alabama. The Vigilance Committee was the directing body for all the numerous lines of the underground railroad which centered in Philadelphia. William Still, as secretary, kept a record of all the fugitive slaves who passed through the hands of the committee. In 1872 this record was published in book form under the title "Underground Railroad." This book is one of the most remarkable records extant concerning the history of slavery.

Walker, David.—First Negro to attack slavery through the press. Born free at Wilmington, North Carolina, 1785.

Walker early went to Boston and began business. In 1829 he published an anti-slavery pamphlet, "Walker's Appeal,' which was widely circulated and stirred the South as no other anti-slavery pamphlet up to that time had done. Governor Giles of Virginia, in a message to the Legislature, referred to the appeal as "a seditious pamphlet sent from Boston."

Gibbs, Mifflin Wistar.—Lawyer and anti-slavery agitator; born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, April, 1823. He died in Little Rock, Ark., July 11, 1915.

He was actively connected with the anti-slavery movement and the underground railroad. In 1849 he lectured on the anti-slavery platform. In 1850 went to California and engaged in the dry goods business. On the discovery of gold in British Columbia, in 1858, Mr. Gibbs went to Victoria and established there the first mercantile house other than that of the Hudson Bay Company. In 1868, after having read law with an English lawyer at Victoria, he returned to the United States and entered the law department of Oberlin College, from which he was graduated in 1870. He settled in Little Rock, Arkansas, and was admitted to the bar. In 1873 he was elected city judge, being the first Negro to hold such an office in the United States. In 1877 he was appointed Register of the United States land office in Little Rock. In 1897 he was appointed United States Consul to Tamatave, Madagascar. He has written an autobiography under the title of "Lights and Shadows."

Knights of Liberty.—In 1846 Moses Dickson and eleven other free Negroes organized at St. Louis, The Knights of Liberty for the purpose of overthrowing slavery. Ten years was to be spent working slowly and secretly making their preparations and extending the society.

At the end of this time because of changes in conditions North and South the plan of operation was altered and Underground Railroad work was done. It is said that the Knights of Liberty assisted yearly hundreds of slaves to escape. After emancipation Mr. Dickson in memory of the original organizers, established in 1871, The Knights and Daughters of Tabor Society.

The Union Benevolent Society.—Organized by free Negroes at Lexington, Kentucky, in 1843. Its purpose was to care for the sick, bury the dead, encourage education and industry among free Negroes and help slaves to freedom. The white people knew of this society and aided it. In1852 a lodge was permitted to be organized among the slaves. The masters did not know that this society was actively engaged in Underground Railroad work.

SLAVERY AND RELIGIOUS DENOMINATIONS.

1806. The first division of a religious denomination in the United States, on account of slavery, said to have occurred among the Baptist of Kentucky.

1821. The Alabama Synod of the associated Reformed Presbyterian Church severed its connection with the central body which had excluded slave holders from communion.

1829. The True Reformed Dutch Church embodied in its proposed rules that: "Slavery, and all trafficking whatever in human flesh and blood, if it still exists among us, shall be forever abolished in the True Reformed Dutch Church, immediately upon the adoption of these ecclesiastical ordinances."

1841. A small number of Methodists withdrew from the regular connection and formed in Michigan a separate connection, under the name of Wesleyan Methodists. May 31, 1843, at Utica, New York, Wesleyan Methodist connection of America was established.

1845. May 7. The Southern Methodist Episcopal Conferences organized at Louisville, Kentucky, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This done in accordance with a plan of separation adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1844.

1845. Baptist Associations in the South met at Augusta, Georgia, and organized Southern Baptist Convention.

1845. The Free Presbyterian Church organized. This was a small group of churches which separated from the Old School Presbyterian Church because of the slavery question. The Free Presbyterians were earnestly opposed to slavery. Many members of this church in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana were conductors on the Underground Railroad. The Civil War settled the slavery question, and so in 1865, the Free Presbyterians again united with the Old School Presbyterian Church.

1854. General convention of the Christian Church adopted resolutions concerning slavery. The Southern delegation withdrew and formed a separate organization which continued until 1890 when a reunion was formed.

1855. A Classis of the German Reformed Church in North Carolina was refused admission into the Dutch Reformed Church because some of the members of this Classis were slave holders.

1858. Division in the Protestant Church, the Northern and Southern wings separated, reunited in 1877.

1858. The synods and assemblies of the New School of the Presbyterian Church in the border States withdrew and formed the United Synod of Presbyterian Churches. December 4, 1861, forty-seven Presbyteries withdrew from the Old School Assembly; organized the General Assembly of the Confederate States of America. In 1864 the United Synods and the General Assembly of the Confederate States united under the name of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, better known as the Presbyterian Church, South.

1861. July. The Southern bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church met at Montgomery, Alabama and organized the Protestant Episcopal Church in the Confederate States. After the close of the war the different dioceses in the South became again a part of the General Convention.

1863. Number of synods of the Lutheran Church withdrew and organized at Concord, North Carolina, the United Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the South.

EMANCIPATION

PRELIMINARY PROCLAMATION OF EMANICIPATION.

I. Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States of America, and Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy thereof, do hereby proclaim and declare that hereafter as heretofore, the war will be prosecuted for the object of practically restoring the constitutional relation between the United States and each of the States, and the people thereof, in which States that relation is or may be suspended or disturbed.

That it is my purpose, upon the next meeting of Congress to again recommend the adoption of a practical measure tendering pecuniary aid to the free acceptance or rejection of all slave States, so called, the people whereof may not then be in rebellion against the United States, and which States may then have voluntarily adopted, or thereafter may voluntarily adopt immediate or gradual abolishment of slavery within their respective limits; and that the effort to colonize persons of African descent, with their consent, upon this continent or elsewhere, with the previously obtained consent of the governments existing there, will be continued.

That on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, all persons held as slaves within any State or designated part of a State, the people whereof shall then be in rebellion against the United States shall be then, thenceforward and forever free; and the Executive Government of the United States, including the military and naval authority thereof, will recognize and maintain the freedom of such persons and will do no act or acts to repress such persons, or any of them, in any efforts they may make for their actual freedom.

That the Executive will, on the first day of January aforesaid, by proclamation, designate the States and parts of States if any, in which the people thereof respectively shall then be in rebellion against the United States; and the fact that any State, or the people thereof, shall on that day be in good faith represented in the Congress of the United States, by members chosen thereto at elections wherein a majority of the qualified voters of such State shall have participated, shall, in the absence of strong countervailing testimony, be deemed conclusive evidence that such State, and the people thereof, are not then in rebellion against the United States.

That attention is hereby called to an act of Congress entitled "An Act to Make an Additional Article of War," approved March 13th, 1862, and which act is in the words and figures following:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That hereafter the following shall be promulgated as an additional article of war for the government of the army of the United States, and shall be obeyed and observed as such:

Section 1. All officers or persons in the military or naval service of the United States are prohibited from employing any of the forces under their respective commands for the purposes of returning fugitives from service to labor who may have escaped from any persons whom such service of labor is claimed to be due; and any officer who shall be found guilty by a court-martial of violating this article shall be dismissed from the service.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That this act shall take effect from and after its passage.

Also, to the ninth and tenth sections of an act entitled "An Act to Suppress Insurrection, to Punish Treason and Rebellion, to Seize and Confiscate property of Rebels and for other Purposes," approved July 16, 1862, and which sections are in the words and figures following.

Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That all slaves or persons who shall hereafter be engaged in rebellion against the Government of the United States or who shall in any way give aid or comfort thereto, escaping from such persons and taking refuge within the lines of the army; and all slaves captured from such persons, or deserted by them and coming under the control of the Government of the United States; and all slaves of such persons found on (or) being within any place occupied by rebel forces and afterwards occupied by forces of the United States, shall be deemed captives of war, and shall be forever free of their servitude, and not again held as slaves.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That no slave escaping into any State, Territory, or District of Columbia, from any other State, shall be delivered up, or in any way impeded or hindered of his liberty, except for crime, or some offense against the laws, unless the person claiming said fugitive shall first make oath that the person to whom the laboror service of such fugitive is alleged to be due is his lawful owner, and has not borne arms against the United States in the present rebellion, nor in any way given aid and comfort thereto: and no person engaged in the military or naval service of the United States shall under any pretense whatever, assume to decide on the validity of the claim of any person to the service or labor of any other person, or surrender up any such person to the claimant, on pain of being dismissed from the service.

And I do hereby enjoin upon and order all persons engaged in the military and naval service of the United States to observe, obey, and enforce, within their respective spheres of service, the act and sections above recited.

And the Executive will in due time recommend that all citizens of the United States who shall have remained loyal thereto throughout rebellion, shall (upon the restoration of the constitutional relation between the United States and their respective States if that relation shall have been suspended or disturbed) be compensated for all losses by acts of the United States, including the loss of slaves.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-secon d day of September, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, and of the Independence of the United States the eighty-seventh.

By the President:

William H. Seward,
Secretary of State.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, on the 22nd day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, a proclamation was issued by the President of the United States, containing among other things, the following, to wit;

That on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, all persons held as slaves within any States or designated part of a State, the people whereof shall then be in rebellion against the United States shall be then, henceforward, and forever free; and the Executive Government of the United States, including the military and naval authority thereof, will recognize and maintain the freedom of such persons, and will do no act or acts to repress such persons, or any of them, in any efforts they may make for their actual freedom.

That the Executive will, on the first day of January, aforesaid, by proclamation, designate the States and parts of States, if any, in which the people thereof respectively shall then be in rebellion against the United States; and the fact that any State, or the people thereof shall on that day be in good faith represented in the Congress of the United States, by members chosen thereto at elections wherein a majority of the qualified voters of such State shall have participated, shall, in the absence of strong countervailing testimony, be deemed conclusive evidence that such State, and the people thereof, are not then in rebellion against the United States.

Now, therefore, I, ABRAHAM LINCOLN, President of the United States, by virtue of the power in me vested as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States in time of actual armed rebellion against the authority and Government of the United States, and as a fit and necessary war measure for suppressing said rebellion, do, on this first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three and in accordance with my purpose so to do, publicly proclaimed for the full period of one hundred days from the day first above mentioned, order and designate as the States and parts of States, wherein the people thereof respectively are this day in rebellion against the United States, the following, to wit:

"Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana (except the parishes of St. Bernard, Plaquemine, Jefferson, St. John, St. Charles, St. James, Ascension, Assumption, Terre Bonne, Lafourche, St. Mary, St. Martin, and Orleans, including the city of New Orleans) Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia (except the forty-eight counties designated as West Virginia and also the counties of Berkley, Accomac, North Hampton, Elizabeth City, York, Princess Anne and Norfolk, including the cities of Norfolk and Portsmouth), and which excepted parts are, for the present, left precisely as if this proclamation were not issued.

"And by virtue of the power and for the purpose aforesaid, I do order and declare that all persons held as slaves within said designated States and parts of States, are and henceforward shall be free; and that the Executive Government of the United States, including the military and naval authorities thereof, will recognize and maintain the freedom of said persons.

"And I hereby enjoin upon the people so declared to be free, to abstain from all violence unless in necessary self-defense; and I recommend to them that, in all cases when allowed, they labor faithfully for reasonable wages.

"And I further declare and make known that such persons of suitable conditions will be received into the armed service of the United States to garrison forts, position, stations, and other places, and to man vessels of all sorts in said service.

"And upon this act, sincerely believed to be an act of justice, warranted by the Constitution upon military necessity, I invoke the considerate judgment of mankind, and the gracious favor of Almighty God.

"In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my name and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 1st day of January, in the year of our Lord 1863, and of the independence of the United States the eighty-seventh.

By the President: ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

William H. Seward,
Secretary of State.

13th AMENDMENT TO CONSTITUTION.

Sec. 1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

Sec. 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Adopted December 18, 1865.

FREEDMEN'S BUREAU.

Congress on March the 3rd, 1865, established the "Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen and Abandoned Lands." This Bureau was in the War Department and was to be maintained through the war and one year thereafter. It had the supervision and management of all abandoned lands and the control of all subjects relating to refugees and freedmen. The President was authorized to appropriate for the use of freedmen the confiscated and abandoned lands within the Southern States.

Not more than forty acres, however, for a period not longer than three years, were to be assigned to each freedman thus aided. Provisions, fuel and clothing were distributed free to destitute freedmen and loyal refugees.

The administration of the Bureau was placed in the hands of a chief commissioner, General Oliver O. Howard.

July 16, 1866, Congress extended for two years the Bureau's statutory life. At the same time the powers of the Bureau were increased. Confederate public property was authorized to be sold for educational purposes. The Bureau was given military jurisdiction over infringement of civil rights.

In June, 1868, second bill was passed extending the term of the Bureau for one year in un-reconstructed States. January 1, 1869, the work of the Bureau, excepting educational, ended. This was concluded in 1870. (See below under Education.) Over $20,000,000 was expended by the Bureau.

When the Bureau was discontinued, $200,000 of its funds were unexpended. A recent bill introduced in Congress proposed to use this money for the erection, in the District of Columbia, of a home for aged and infirm colored persons.

THE NEGRO AND CIVIL RIGHTS.

Status Free Negro At Beginning The Civil War.

Questions relative to the political and civil status of Free Negroes became prominent in 1862. United States Attorney General Bates, in an elaborate opinion, concerning the right of a Negro to be master of a vessel, engaged in the coasting trade, ruled that free persons without distinction of race or color if native born, were citizens.

He then distinguished between the inherent rights of citizens and the political privileges of certain classes. "All citizens," he said, "have a right to protection, but only certain classes enjoy the privilege of voting and holding office. A child or a woman is a citizen, though not always privileged to vote or hold office."

For the purpose of drafting soldiers, Governor Andrew, of Massachusetts, ordered Negroes as well as whites to be enrolled. The attorney general of the State justified the order on the ground that "Congress and the War Department both leave out the word white from the description of the class to be enrolled."

In contrast to the above it was decided in Illinois that Negroes were not citizens. One W. C. Lowry had contracted with the trustees of a certain school district in Montgomery County of that State to teach their school. The trustees were enjoined from paying Lowery on the ground that he was one-fourth Negro. The court in rendering its decision, sustaining the injunction, said, "The Constitution of this State, and the statutes adopted in pursuance thereto, forbid the migration to and settlement in this State of such persons. They are forbidden to vote, sit upon juries, hold offices, and to testify in cases where white persons are parties." In June of 1862 the electors of the State of Illinois voted upon the adoption of a new constitution. The results with reference to that part relating to Negroes were as follows: For the continued exclusion from the State of Negroes and mulattoes, a majority of 100,000; against granting the right of suffrage or to hold office to Negroes or mulattoes, a majority of 176,000.

Senator John Sherman, of Ohio, in a speech in Congress, said: "The Negro race is looked upon by the people of Ohio as a class to be kept by themselves, to be debarred of social intercourse with the whites, to be deprived of all advantages which they cannot enjoy in common with their own class. They have always been deprived of the elective franchise in this State, and no party among our citizens has ever contemplated that they should be given the right of citizenship and for aught that appears to the contrary, the colored man in Ohio will not, in all future time that he may remain an inhabitant of the State, attain any material improvement in the social or political rights over what he now enjoys.

Emancipation Proclamation Gives Freedmen Status Free Negroes.

With the close of the Civil War and the adoption of the Thirteenth Amendment all the slaves in the South become free. Between 1865 and 1868, when the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted, numerous black laws were passed by the legislatures of the Southern States to control the Freedmen who were considered to have the same status as the Free Negroes of ante-bellum days.

The constitution of Mississippi, as amended August 1, 1865, abolished slavery and gave the legislature power to make laws for the protection and security of the persons and property of the freedmen and to protect "them and the State against any evils that may arise from their sudden emancipation.

The same year South Carolina passed a law that "although such persons (Negro) are not entitled to social or political equality with white persons" they might hold property, make contracts, etc., except as should be hereinafter modified.

There were some attempts to restrict the movements of the Freedmen. As early as 1863 the legislature of Kentucky declared that it was unlawful for any Negro or Mulatto claiming to be free under the Emancipation Proclamation of January 1, 1863, or any other proclamation of the United States, to migrate, or remain in the State. Any Negro who violated this law was to be treated as a runaway slave.

The Georgia Constitution of 1865 gave the General Assembly power to make laws for the regulation or prohibition of the immigration of free persons of color into the State from other places.

South Carolina in 1865 provided that if a person of color should come into the State to reside, he must within twenty days after his arrival, give bond with two free holders as security binding him to good behavior and binding sureties to support him if he should become unable to support himself. If he failed to make the required bond he was required to leave the State within ten days or be liable to corporal punishment.

Restrictions Placed Upon Occupations Of Freedmen.

There were some restrictions placed upon Negroes in respect to occupations. South Carolina enacted a law that no person of color should follow the trade of artisan, mechanic or shoemaker, "or any other trade, employment or business (besides that of husbandry or that of a servant and a contract for service or labor) on his own account and for his own benefit or in partnership with a white person or as aid or servants of any person" until he should have obtained the license.

In Mississippi a statue in 1865 gave the freedmen the right to sue and be sued, to hold property, etc., but prohibited them from renting or leasing any lands except within the corporate limits of a town or city in which place the corporation authorities should control the same.

Under the same statute every free man, Negro or mulatto, was required to have on January 1, 1866, and annually thereafter, a lawful home and employment with written evidence thereof. If he lived within an incorporate town and was not under contract for service he must have a license from the mayor authorizing him to do regular job work. If he lived outside of a town he must have a similar license from a member of the board of police of his precinct.

The sale of firearms and liquor was in most instances forbidden to Negroes. Alabama made it unlawful for a Negro to run a tavern or sell liquor. In South Carolina Negroes might not own a distillery or a place where liquor was sold, and disobedience might be punished by corporal punishment. The legislature of Florida, in 1866, passed a law, making it unlawful for a Negro to have in his possession firearms or ammunition of any kind unless he had obtained a license from the legislature or Probate Judge of the court.

In order to secure the license it was necessary to present the certificate of two respectable citizens of the county as to the peaceful and orderly character of the applicant. The violation of this statute was punishable by the forfeiture of the firearms and ammunition, and by standing in the pillory one hour or being whipped not over thirty-nine stripes.

In Mississippi it was unlawful for a free Negro or mulatto, not in the military service of the United States, not having a specific license, to keep or carry firearms or ammunition, dirk or bowie-knife. In South Carolina if a Negro was the owner of a farm he was permitted to keep a "shot gun or rifle such as is ordinarily used in hunting, but not a pistol, musket or firearm or weapon appropriate for purposes of war."

Labor Contracts Bound The Laborer From Sunrise to Sunset.

In general it was specified that all contracts for personal service with persons of color should be in writing and properly attested by some white person. South Carolina had the most elaborate laws for the government of labor contracts. The hours of labor on the farm were minutely regulated. Except on Sundays they were to be from sunrise to sunset with a reasonable interval for breakfast and dinner.

The servants "rise at dawn in the morning, feed, water and care for the animals on the farm, do the usual and needful work about the premises, prepare their meals for the day, if required by the master, and begin the farm work or other work by sunrise." Servants must be quiet and orderly in their quarters and at their work. They were required to extinguish their lights and fire and retire to rest at reasonable hours. They were permitted to leave home on Sunday, if not needed to care for the premises or animals. Those away on Sunday, however, must be back by sunset. The masters were given the right to give the servants tasks. If the servant complained of the task the district judge or a magistrate might reduce or increase it.

"Visitors could not be invited or allowed by the servants to come on the premises of the master without his express consent, nor could servants be absent from the premises without such permission."

Severe Apprentice Laws And Their Application To Freedmen.

Between 1865 and 1868, the Legislatures of the South made detailed apprentice laws. Although many of the statues make no mention of race, they had in mind, primarily, Negroes. In some instances, however, it was specifically stated that the application was to them. The Alabama statue said that "if the minor be a child of a freedman, the former owner of the child should have the preference of apprenticing him, if a suitable person."

In Kentucky, if the apprentice was white, the master must teach him reading, writing and common arithmetic up to and including the "Rule of-Three;" if a Negro, the master must pay at the end of the apprenticeship Fifty Dollars to a girl and One Hundred Dollars to a boy, but if the master should teach the apprentice to read and write, he was not bound to pay any money. In Kentucky, also, in apprenticing Negroes, preference was given to their former owners, "if the latter were suitable persons."

Mississippi and South Carolina had apprentice laws which related only to freedmen, free Negroes and mulattoes.

Under the Mississippi law "The Sheriffs, justices of the peace and other civil officers of the county had to report to the probate court semi-annually, in January and July, the names of all freedmen, free Negroes and mulattoes, under the age of eighteen, who were orphans or whose parents were unable or unwilling to support them. It was the duty of the court to order the apprenticing of such minors, preference being given to their former masters if suitable persons. The master had to furnish a bond payable to the State, conditioned upon his furnishing the minor with sufficient food and clothing, treating him humanely, giving him medical attention when sick, and, if the minor was under fifteen, teaching him or having him taught to read and write. Males were bound till they were twenty-one; females, till they were eighteen.

If the apprentice ran away the master might pursue him and bring him before a justice of the peace who could remand him to the service of his master. If the apprentice refused to return, he might be put into jail until the next term of the court when his case would be investigated. If it was found that he had left without cause, he could be punished like a hired freedman; but if he had a good cause, the court might discharge him and enter judgment against his master for not over One Hundred Dollars to be paid to the apprentice."

The constitutionality of these apprentice laws was tested in 1867. A Negro girl who had been a slave in Maryland and had been freed by the Constitution of that State November 1, 1864, was two days later, apprenticed by her mother to her former master. The laws governing Negro apprentices differed from those governing white apprentices in that the master did not obligate himself to teach the Negro apprentice reading, writing, and arithmetic, and retained the right to transmit the apprentice anywhere in the county. Upon a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, the Federal Court held that the Maryland law resulted in practical slavery, and, hence, violated the Thirteenth Amendment and the Civil Rights Bill of 1866.

Vagrancy Laws Made To Apply Specially To Freedmen.

The present vagrancy laws of the South, so far as their wording is concerned, apply to both races equally. In the first years after the Civil War, vagrancy laws were enacted which had special application to Negroes. The South Carolina Legislature included in the Act to establish and regulate the domestic relations of persons of color and to amend the laws in relation to paupers and vagrancy, the following list of persons who were to be classed as vagrants.

All persons who have not some fixed and known place of abode, and some lawful and reputable employment; those who have not some visible and known means of a fair, honest and reputable livelihood; all common prostitutes, those who are found wandering from place to place, vending, bartering, or peddling any articles or commodities without a license; all common gamblers; persons who lead idle or disorderly lives, or keep or frequent disorderly or disreputable houses or places; those who, not having sufficient means of support, are able to work and do not work; those who (whether or not they own lands, or are lessees or mechanics) do not provide a reasonable and proper maintenance for themselves and families; those who are engaged in representing publicly and privately, for fee or reward, without license any tragedy, interlude, comedy, farce, play, or other similar entertainment, exhibition of the circus, sleight-of-hand, wax works; those who for a private gain, without license, give any concert or musical entertainment, of any description; fortune tellers; sturdy beggars; common drunkards; those who hunt game of any description, or fish on the land of others or frequent the premises, contrary to the will of the occupant."

The Mississippi Vagrancy list was almost as extensive as that of South Carolina, with the addition, "that any freedmen, free Negroes, or mulattoes, over eighteen years of age, found on the second Monday of January, 1866, or thereafter, with no lawful employment or business, or found unlawfully assembling themselves together in the day or night time, and white persons so assembling with freedmen, free Negroes or mulattoes . . . 'on terms of equality, or living in adultery or fornication with a freedwoman, free Negro, or mulatto, should be considered vagrants."

Each Race Made Liable To Support Own Paupers.

The close of the war found the South facing the problem of how to meet the needs of its paupers, white and Negro. A large part of the property of the whites had been swept away or had been greatly depreciated in value. The Negroes, with a few exceptions, had no property to lose. They lost their right to look to the white people for sustenance. The Legislatures of the South adopted the plan of levying a tax upon each race for the support of its own indigents.

"In South Carolina when a person of color was unable to earn his support and was likely to become a public charge, the father and grandfathers, mother and grandmothers, child and grandchildren, brother and sister of such person should each according to ability contribute for the support of his or her relative. In each judicial district there was a 'Board of Relief of Indigent Persons of Color,' consisting of from four to eight magistrates each magistrate looking after the indigent Negroes in his precinct. There was a fund composed of fees paid for the approval of the contracts for service, instruments of apprenticeship, licenses, fines, penalties, forfeitures, and wages of convicts, for the relief of indigent Negroes. If this fund was insufficient, the board might impose a tax of one dollar upon all male persons of color between eighteen and fifty, and fifty cents upon each female between eighteen and forty-five. This tax had to be paid on the day fixed or the person rendered himself liable to pay a double tax."

The law of Mississipp provided the same liabilities should rest on Negroes to support their indigents, as upon white persons to support theirs. It levied a tax of One Dollar upon every freedman, free Negro, or Mulatto between eighteen and sixty, to go into the Freeman's Pauper Fund. If a Negro refused to pay the tax he might be arrested and hired out until he had worked out the amount.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

The Thirteenth Amendment adopted December 18, 1865, made slavery in the United States unconstitutional. The Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments conferred upon the descendents of the slaves and upon the descendents of the Free Negroes, the constitutional rights which had been denied them under the so-called "Black Laws," passed by the different States. Under the Amendments conferring upon Negroes all the fundamental rights of white men, race distinctions were not abolished but race discriminations were made illegal.

"It is important at the outset to distinguish clearly between race distinctions, and race discriminations; more so, because these words are often used synonymously, especially when the Negro is discussed. A distinction between the Caucasian and the Negro, when recognized and enforced by the law, has been interpreted as a discrimination against the latter. In fact there is an essential difference between race distinctions and race discriminations. North Carolina for example, has a law that white and Negro children shall not attend the same schools, but that separate schools shall be maintained. If the terms of all the public schools in the State are equal in length, if the teaching force is equal in numbers and ability, if the school buildings are equal in convenience, accommodations and appointments, race distinction exists but not a discrimination.

"There is no discrimination so long as there is equality of opportunity, and this equality may often be attained only by a difference in methods. On the other hand, if the term of the Negro School is four months and that of the white eight; if the teachers of the Negro Schools are underpaid and inadequately or wrongly trained, and the teachers of the white schools are well paid and well trained; if Negro children are housed in dilapidated uncomfortable, unsanitary buildings, and white children have new, comfortable, and sanitary buildings; if courses of study for Negro children are selected in a haphazard fashion without any regard to their peculiar needs, and a curriculum is carefully adapted to the needs of white children; if such conditions exist under the law, race distinction exists which are at the same time discriminations against Negroes. A race distinction connotes a difference and nothing more. A discrimination necessarily implies partiality and favoritism."

14th AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

(Ratified July 28, 1868.)

Sec. 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the State wherein they reside. No States shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Sec. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportions which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

Sec. 3. No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress or Elector of President and Vice President or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive, or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

Sec. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void.

Sec. 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

15th AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

(Ratified March 30, 1870.)

Sec. 1. The right of the citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States, or by any State, on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

2. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

FEDERAL LEGISLATION.

The First Civil Rights Bill was passed by Congress, April 9, 1866. It prescribed that "all persons born in the United States and not subject to any foreign power, excluding Indians not taxed, are hereby declared to be citizens of the United States; and such citizens of every race and color, without regard to any previous condition of slavery or involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime * * * shall have the same right, in every State and Territory in the United States, to make and enforce contracts, to sue, * * * and to full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings, in the security of persons and property, as is enjoyed by white citizens, and shall be subject to like punishment and penalties, and to none other."

The Civil Rights Bill of 1866 was in a large measure superseded by the Fourteenth Amendment, adopted July 28, 1868. The purpose of this Amendment was "(1) to make the Bill of Rights (the first eight Amendments to the Constitution) binding upon the States as well as upon the Nation; (2) to give validity to the Civil Rights Bill of 1866, and (3) to declare who were citizens of the United States."

Another Civil Rights Bill was passed March 1, 1875, which declared that all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States should be entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the accommodations, advantages, facilities, and privileges of inns, public conveyances on land or water, theaters and other places of public amusement, subject only to the conditions established by law and applicable alike to citizens of every race and color, regardless of any previous condition of servitude.

This law was the last effort of Congress to guarantee to the Negro his civil rights. In 1883 the Supreme Court of the United States declared the Civil Rights Bill of 1875 unconstitutional.

That year five cases having to do with Civil Rights of Negroes reached the Supreme Court. "Two of them concerned the rights of colored persons in inns and hotels, two their rights in theaters, and one in railroad cars. Mr. Justice Bradley, delivering the opinion of the court, took the ground that the first and second sections of the Civil Rights Bill were unconstitutional for these reasons: (1) They are not authorized by the Thirteenth Amendment, abolishing and prohibiting slavery, because the separation of the races in public places is not a badge of servitude . . . (2) The Civil Rights Bill is not authorized by the Fourteenth Amendment, because that refers to action by the State, while the Bill refers to individual discrimination. It is State action of a particular kind that is prohibited."

In June, 1913, the Supreme Court reaffirmed the ruling of 1883 and extended its application to Federal territory and navigable waters of the United States.

STATE LEGISLATION.

A number of States in the North have enacted Civil Rights Bills which undertake to guarantee equality of accommodation in public places.

On May 16, 1865, Massachusetts declared that there should be no distinction, discrimination, or restriction on account of color or race in any licensed in public place of amusement, public conveyance, or public meeting and imposed a fine of Fifty Dollars for the violation of this law. The next year it included theaters within the prohibition.

After the Federal Civil Rights Bill was declared unconstitutional in 1883, and the burden of securing to Negroes equality of accommodation in public places was placed upon the States, many of them outside of the South adopted bills which practically copied the Civil Rights Bill of 1875. The following is a list of the States that have such Civil Rights Bills with dates of their adoption:

Connecticut	1884 and 1905	Minnesota	1885, 1897 and 1899
Iowa	1884 and 1892	Nebraska	1885 and 1893
New Jersey	1884	Rhode Island	1885
Ohio	1884 and 1894	New York	1893, 1895 and 1913
Colorado	1885 and 1895	Pennsylvania	1887
Illinois	1885	Washington	1890
Indiana	1885	Wisconsin	1895
Massachusetts	1885, 1893 and 1895	California	1897
Michigan	1885

SEPARATION OF RACES*—IN PUBLIC CONVEYANCES.

Separation of Passengers in Railroad Cars.—The general requirements of the law are that "persons of color," "persons of African descent," etc., on the one hand, and white persons on the other, shall occupy separate seats, compartments or coaches.

Excepting Missouri all the Southern States have laws separating the races in railroad cars.

The dates of the enactment of these laws were as follows: Tennessee, 1881; Florida, 1887; Mississippi, 1888; Texas, 1889; Louisiana, 1890; Alabama, 1891; Kentucky, 1891; Arkansas, 1891; Georgia, 1891; South Carolina, 1898; North Carolina, 1899; Virginia, 1900; Maryland, 1904; Oklahoma, 1907.

Separation of the Races on Street Cars.—The extent of legislation for this purpose is as follows:

Georgia and Oklahoma include street cars in their laws for the separation of the races on railroad trains.

Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia have special statutes applicable to street cars. Arkansas requires a separation on street cars in cities of the first class; and South Carolina on suburban lines.

In Maryland, South Carolina, Alabama, Kentucky and Missouri the State laws do not require the races to be separated on street cars in cities.

In Alabama and South Carolina there are either municipal laws for the separation of the races on street cars or the street railway companies provide for and require separation.

In the cities of Kentucky, Maryland and Missouri the races are not separated on street cars.

IN SCHOOLS

Public Schools.—In Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia, the law requires the separation of the races in public schools. In Arizona, Indiana, Kansas, and Wyoming, discretionary power is given the school boards to establish separate schools.

Private Schools.—Florida, Kentucky, Oklahoma, and Tennessee are the only States which expressly prohibit the teaching of white and colored persons in the same private school. The laws of the other Southern States say that schools which admit both races shall not receive public funds.

Florida is the only State which prohibits white persons teaching in Negro schools and Negroes teaching in white schools. This act was passed in 1913. It has never been enforced.

*The origin of the expression "Jim Crow," appears to have arisen thus: In Charleston, South Carolina in the early part of the nineteenth century there was a hotel keeper who had two slaves both of whom were named James. In order not to have both respond when he called, he instructed one to answer only to the "Jim;" as a further designation, the boarders, because he was very black, added "Crow." "Jim Crow" appears to have led an eventful life. He was born in Richmond about 1800, and was sold first to Charleston, then to New Orleans and later was emancipated. He lived for some time in London, where he acquired quite a fortune. In 1839 there was published in London an anti-slavery book of 231 pages entitled "The History of Jim Crow."

NEGRO SUFFRAGE BEFORE CIVIL WAR.

Negro Suffrage Before 1790.

North Carolina, 1715; South Carolina, 1716; Virginia, 1723; and Georgia, 1761, passed laws limiting the right of suffrage to white men. Virginia and South Carolina 1776; Georgia 1777, and Delaware, 1792, by constitutional amendments excluded Negroes from voting.

The first recorded argument concerning Negro suffrage appears to have been a long debate in the 1777-1778 session of the Massachusetts Constitutional Convention. The question of Negro suffrage was debated in the New York council of revision, 1785, and in the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention, 1789-1790. A strong minority in New York favored it. In 1790, the question of Negroes' right to vote was raised at a heated election in Philadelphia. In 1795, the Pennsylvania courts decided that Negroes did not have the right of suffrage.

Maine, 1819; Vermont, 1790; Kentucky, 1792; and Tennessee, 1796 were the only states admitted under the constitution without a suffrage discrimination against the Negro until the admission of Nebraska in 1867. Kentucky in 1799 and Tennessee in 1834, barred Negroes from voting. In the latter state where a considerable number had voted the constitutional convention by a vote of thirty-three to twenty-three excluded them from the franchise.

There was no color discrimination in the Northwest territory ordinance of 1787. In 1800, the part of the ordinance relating to suffrage was applied to Mississippi Territory and Indiana Territory, in 1805 to the Territory of Orleans (Louisiana) and the territory Michigan, and in 1809 to the territory of Illinois. This was the last time until after the Civil War that an act providing for territorial government did not contain a clause denying suffrage to Negroes. The question of Negro suffrage was debated in the discussion, 1820, on the admission of Missouri and in the New York Constitutional Convention 1821, which enacted that Negroes could vote provided they had resided three years in the state and paid taxes on $250 worth of property above all encumbrances. In North Carolina as in Ten essee there was strong sentiment in favor of Negro suffrage. In the Constitutional Convention of 1834 after a long and heated debate it was defeated by a vote of 66 to 61. In the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1837-1838 suffrage after a long discussion was restricted to white men.

Negro Suffrage And The Anti-Slavery Movement 1838-1846.

Although prior to 1838, the question of Negro Suffrage had several times been a matter of considerable popular concern the discussions of the subject were more or less isolated. After 1838 Negro suffrage became in some degree a party question.

It was not however, incorporated as a plank in party platforms and votes for and against it were not confined by party lines. The agitators in favor of it in most instances were more or less definitely connected with the abolition and the anti-slavery movement. In 1838-1841 and 1846 Negro suffrage was discussed in connection with the changes of the constitutions of New York, Rhode Island and New Jersey.

Struggle for Negro Suffrage in The Northwest, 1844-1857.

The most notable efforts during the forties and fifties to secure Negro suffrage were in the Northwestern States. In the Constitutional Conventions of each of the states of this section the question of Negro suffrage was discussed. In Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin the question was submitted to popular vote. Although in each instance lost, the large number of votes for it indicated the strength of the sentiment in favor of it.

Negro Suffrage And Political Parties.

There appears to have been an intimate connection between the Liberty and Free Soil parties and the sentiment for Negro suffrage.

"The votes for Free Soil candidates and for Negro suffrage were numerouse in the same areas and were approximately equal in number For example the Free Soil vote of Wisconsin in 1848 was 10,418, while a year and a half before the vote for suffrage had been 7,664; the Free Soil vote of Michigan in 1848 was 10,389, while the vote for Negro suffrage in 1850 was 12, 046; the vote for Negro suffrage in Connecticut in 1846 was 5,616; for Van Buren in 1848, it was 5,005. The same New York counties which gave majorities for equal suffrage in 1846, gave large votes for Van Buren in 1848. The northern counties of Illinois and the northeastern counties of Ohio, from which delegates favorable to abrogation of color distinctions, and the eastern counties of Wisconsin where the vote for Negro suffrage was heaviest, were all regions of Free Soil strength; while in Michigan, both the vote for colored suffrage, and the Free Soil vote, were evenly distributed throughout the state."

Negro Suffrage and the Republican Party 1857-1860.

While the Republican party was not committed to Negro suffrage nevertheless from 1857 to 1860 the party had considerable to do with this question. In Iowa through the Republicans the State Constitutional Convention submitted the question of Negro suffrage to popular vote. Although the measure was lost, one-fifth or more of the voters of this state supported it.

In the Minnesota Constitutional Convention of 1857 there was strong sentiment in favor of Negro suffrage. This same year Negro suffrage was submitted for the third time to the voters of Wisconsin. The vote stood 40,106 against, and 27,550 for. In 1860 a Negro suffrage measure was defeated in New York by a vote of 337,984 against, and 197,503 for.

Growth of Sentiment, 1837-1860, In Favor of Negro Suffrage.

The growth of sentiment in favor of Negro suffrage from 1837 to 1860 was very marked. In 1840 there was no especial movement to grant political privileges to Negroes.

In the Northwest, however, sentiment in favor of this movement grew until it almost furnished a principle for the Republicans in Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin. From 1846 to 1860 the sentiment in New York grew from one-sixth in the former year to more than one-fourth in the latter year.

THE NEGRO AND RECONSTRUCTION.

Lincoln's Plan of Reconstruction and Negro Suffrage.

In his proclamation of amnesty, December 8, 1863, President Lincoln outlined his plan of Reconstruction as follows,—"Whenever, in any of the States of Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, and North Carolina, a number of persons not less than one-tenth in number of the votes cast in such States at the presidential election of the year of our Lord, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty, each having taken the oath aforesaid, and not having since violated it, and being a qualified voter by the election law of the State existing immediately before the so-called act of secession, and excluding all others, shall re-establish a State Government. Such shall be recognized as the true Government of the State."

With reference to Negro suffrage, President Lincoln, in letter of March 13, 1864, to Governor Hahn of Louisiana said, "Now you are about to have a convention, which among other things, will probably define the elective franchise. I barely suggest, for your private consideration, whether some of the colored people may not be let in, as, for instance, the very intelligent, and especially those who have fought gallantly in our ranks. They would probably help, in some trying time to come, to keep the jewel of liberty in the family of freedom. But this is only a suggestion, not to the public, but to you alone." In his last public speech, April 11, 1865, in speaking of the New Louisiana Government he said: "It is also unsatisfactory to some that the elective franchise is not given to the colored man. I would myself prefer that it were now conferred on the very intelligent and on those who serve our cause as soldiers."

Negro Suffrage Under The Johnson Plan Of Reconstruction.

President Johnson's policy of reconstruction as outlined in a proclamation of Amnesty, May 29, 1865 and in a plan of reconstruction for North Carolina of the Same date, was in substance, that, with certain exceptions, amnesty and pardon were extended to all who had "participated in the existing rebellion."

Provisional governors were appointed and the State government reinstated. In elections only those could vote who had exercised that privilege prior to 1860 The final qualifications for suffrage were to be decided by the state legislatures or constitutional conventions. Johnson, "like Lincoln confined the voters to white men and like him, favored a qualified suffrage for Negroes, although in his opinion that was a matter for the states themselves to determine." Congress opposed Johnson's plan, refused recognition to the state governments established under it and maintained that reconstruction was a matter for the Legislative instead of the Executive branch of the Government to handle.

The Fourteenth Amendment Plan Of Reconstruction.

The Fourteenth Amendment was enacted by Congress for ratification by the states, June 13, 1866. Under it Negroes were made citizens. Representation in Congress from the Southern States based on Negro population was to be reduced unless those states gave the Negro the suffrage. (For other provisions see the amendment.)

The eleven states which joined the confederacy had under the census of 1860, sixty-one representatives in Congress, sixteen of which were based on the three-fifth provision relative to slaves. If these states enfranchised the Negro they would have seventy members, if they denied the vote to the Negro, their representation would be reduced to forty-five. Under the Fourteenth Amendment Plan of Reconstruction, Negro suffrage was not forced upon the South but was optional with each state.

The Southern States Refuse To Ratify The Fourteenth Amendment.

In the meantime the breach between President Johnson and Congress widened. An appeal, through the congressional elections of 1866, was made by both sides for endorsement. The result was over-whelmingly in favor of Congress. These elections decided that as a condition of re-admission to the Union the late Confederate States must ratify the Fourteenth Amendment. This through their legislatures they refused to do.

Dates of the Rejection by the Southern States of the Fourteenth Amendment.

Texas	Oct. 13, 1866	South Carolina	Dec. 20, 1866
Georgia	Nov. 9, 1866	Kentucky	Jan. 8, 1867
Florida	Dec. 3, 1866	Virginia	Jan. 9, 1867

North Carolina	Dec. 13, 1866	Louisiana	Feb. 6, 1867
Arkansas	Dec. 17, 1866	Delaware	Feb. 6, 1867
		Maryland	Mar. 23, 1867

James Ford Rhodes, in vol. VI, pp. 6-7 of his "History of the United States 1850-1877 sums up the objections of the South to the Fourteenth Amendment as follows: "Most of the states presented in one way or another the reasons for their action. Objection was made to the adoption of a constitutional amendment when ten Southern States were unrepresented in Congress, and also to the menace of a reduced representation, but the most formidable obstacle to ratification lay in the so-called penal section which disfranchised from holding office the political leaders of the South. The Southern people, it was said, were asked to be the instruments of their own dishonor by fastening a stigma upon men who had their sympathy and whom they had followed with pride. The amendment is an "insulting outrage" declared the governor of Mississippi; it is a denial of the equal rights of many of our worthiest citizens."

The Congressional Plan Of Reconstruction.

The rejection by the Southern States of the Fourteenth Amendment plan of Reconstruction left "the way" open for congress to impose upon the South its plan of reconstruction. This plan as passed over the President's veto March 2 and 23 and July 17, 1867, said that to enforce peace and good order the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida, Texas and Arkansas were divided into five military districts. To the command of each district an officer of the Army was to be assigned.

Provisions were made for elections in these ten states of conventions to frame constitutions. All male citizens twenty-one years old and upward of whatever race, color or previous condition, resident in the state one year, previous to election, except such as were disfranchised for participation in the rebellion or for felony had the right to vote for delegates to these conventions. It was stipulated that these state constitutions must provide for universal Negro suffrage to be ratified by popular vote and approved by Congress.

Each of these states, through their legislatures must also adopt the Fourteenth Amendment.

The Freedmen Exercise The Right of Suffrage.

During the year 1867 the freedmen generally exercised the right of suffrage in the South. On February 25, 1866, they exercised that right in the District of Columbia. In February, 1867, the legislature of Tennessee granted the suffrage to Negroes. Under the congressional plan of reconstruction Negroes took part as voters and as candidates in the election of delegates to the constitutional convention.

Negro Suffrage, 1865 to 1870.

1865—Connecticut, Wisconsin and Minnesota decided against Negro suffrage.

1866—Congress established Negro suffrage in all territories. Alabama, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Texas voted against it.

1867—Kansas, Minnesota and Ohio refused to grant suffrage to the Negro.

1868—Michigan and New York votes against Negro suffrage. Iowa and Minnesota extended the suffrage to Negroes. The Fourteenth Amendment (see under Civil Rights) was adopted July 28. In 1868 and 1869 the reconstruction constitutions of the Southern States extended the suffrage to Negroes. They were now elected as members of the legislatures and as members of congress.

NEGRO SUFFRAGE FROM 1870-1890.

The Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution was ratified March 30, 1870. (See under Civil Rights the Fifteenth Amendment.)

After the Fifteenth Amendment was ratified California, Colorado, Connecticut, Deleware, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Nevada, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon, and Pennsylvania still restricted the suffrage to white persons.

In order to make the provision of the Fifteenth Amendment effective Congress on May 31, 1870, passed an act, the first section of which declares:

> "All citizens of the United States who are or shall be otherwise qualified by, law to vote at any election by the people in any State, territory, district, county, city, parish, township, school district, municipality, or other territorial division, shall be entitled and allowed to vote at all such elections without distinction of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, any constitution, law, custom, usage, or regulation in any State, territory, or by or under its authority to the contrary notwithstanding."

NEGRO SUFFRAGE FROM 1890-1915.

Beginning with 1890, Southern States have by the adoption of constitutional amendment sought to restrict Negro suffrage.

Southern States Whose Laws Restrict the Suffrage.—Suffrage amendments have been adopted by the Southern States in the following order: Mississippi, 1890; South Carolina, 1895; Louisiana, 1898; North Carolina, 1900; Alabama, 1901; Virginia, 1901; Georgia, 1908; and Oklahoma, 1910.

The substance of the laws restricting suffrage is that the prospective voter must have paid his full taxes and then, in order to register, must own a certain amount of property, or must be able to pass an educational test or must come under the grandfather clause.

Tax Test.—Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia require the payment of poll taxes as a prerequisite to voting. In Georgia all taxes legally required since 1877 must be paid six months before the election.

Property Test.—The property requirement in Alabama is forty acres of land in the State or real or personal property worth three hundred dollars ($300) on which the taxes for the preceding year have been paid.

In Georgia it is forty acres of land in the State or five hundred dollars ($500) worth of property in the State.

The Louisiana requirement is three hundred dollars ($300) worth of property and payment of personal taxes.

South Carolina prescribes three hundred ($300) worth of property on which taxes for the preceding year have been paid.

Mississippi, North Carolina and Virginia have no property test.

Educational Test.—Alabama requires that the applicant, unless physically disabled, must be able to read and write the Constitution of the United States in English.

In Georgia he must, unless physically disabled, be able to read and write the Constitution of the United States in English; or if physically disabled from reading and writing, to "understand and give a reasonable interpretation" of the Constitution of the United States or of Georgia, when read to him.

Louisiana requires that the applicant must be able to read and write and must make an application for registration in his own handwriting.

In Mississippi he must be able to understand or reasonably interpret any part of the Constitution of the State.

In North Carolina the requirement is the ability to read and write the State Constitution in English.

The Constitution of Oklahoma says the applicant "must be able to read and write any section of the Constitution of the State."

South Carolina requires ability to read and write the Constitution.

Virginia requires that the applicant must make out his application in his own handwriting and prepare and deposit his ballot without aid.

Grandfather Clause.—The Grandfather Clause permits a person who was not able to satisfy either the educational or property tests to continue a voter for life if he was a voter in 1867 (or in Oklahoma in 1866) or is an old soldier or the lineal descendent of such voter or soldier, provided, except in Oklahoma, he registered prior to a fixed date.

The expiration of the date when such persons could register was in South Carolina, January 1, 1898; Louisiana, September 1, 1898; Alabama, December 20, 1902; Virginia, December 31, 1903; North Carolina, December 1, 1908; Georgia, January 1, 1915. The Oklahoma Grandfather Clause intended to be permanent, provided that:

No person who was on January 1, 1866, or at any time prior thereto, entitled to vote under any form of Government, or who at that time resided in some foreign nation, and no lineal descendant of such person, shall be denied the right to register and vote because of his inability to so read and write such Constitution. The Supreme Court of the United States, June 21, 1915, declared the Grandfather Clause invalid. Mississippi had no Grandfather Clause.

Understanding and Character Clauses.—Only two States Georgia and Mississippi, have permanent understanding and character clauses. Although in Georgia a person may have neither property nor education he may be permitted to register if he is of good character and understands the duties and obligation of citizenship under a republican form of government.

The Mississippi law permits one who cannot read to register if he can understand and reasonably interpret the Constitution when read to him.

In Alabama, South Carolina and Virginia the Understanding clause is a part of the Grandfather sections and became inoperative with the "Grandfather Clauses."

LEGAL DEFINITION OF A NEGRO.

The statutes of Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Texas state that a person of color is one who is descended from a Negro to the third generation inclusive though one ancestor in each generation may have been white.

According to the law of Alabama one is a person of color who has had any Negro blood in his ancestry in five generations. In Michigan, Nebraska, and Oregon one is not legally a person of color who has less than one-fourth Negro blood. In Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Missouri and South Carolina a person of color is one who has as much as one-eighth Negro blood. In Virginia a person of color is one who has one-sixteenth or more Negro blood. The Constitution of Oklahoma provides:

"Whenever in this Constitution and laws of this State the word or words 'colored' or 'colored race' or 'Negro' or 'Negro race' are used, the same shall be construed to mean or to apply to all persons of African descent. The term 'white' shall include all other persons."

In Arkansas, persons of color include all who have a visible and distinct admixture of African blood. The other States have no statutes defining Negro.

MISCEGENATION.

Miscegenation is the amalgamation, or mixing of racial stocks. This may take place in wedlock or out. Twenty-nine States have laws which make intermarriage between the races illegal.

In Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and and Texas, together with the Northern States of Colorado, Indiana, Idaho, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, marriages of whites is denied with Negroes. In Arizona, California, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Utah, and Oregon, marriage with Mongolians also is prohibited. North Carolina prohibits marriage with Negro and Crotoan Indian blood, and Nevada with persons of the Ethiopian, Malay, Mongolian or American Indian races.

The general rule with reference to intermarriages between races is this: "If the applicant for a marriage license had even only one great-grand parent who was a full-blooded Negro he may not receive a license; but if that great-grandparent were a mulatto and in all later generations mating took place (illegally, of course) with a white person, then the person in question is legally white and may marry a white person. Otherwise stated, the descendant of a Negro to the third generation inclusive, though one ancestor in each generation were pure white, is excluded; or persons having one-eighth or more of Negro blood are excluded from marrying a white person. In Nebraska and Virginia, the limit is set at one-fourth or more of Negro blood. The State of Georgia sets no limit, but declares 'marriages between white persons and persons of African descent is forever prohibited; such marriages are null and void.' Louisiana forbids the marriage of whites to 'persons of color.' In Jamaica, too, a person with less than one-eighth Negro blood becomes legally white."

Mr. Charles B. Davenport, Director of the Eugenics Record Office of Cold Springs Harbor, Long Island, which is established for the purpose "of accumulating and studying records of physical and mental characteristics of human families to the end that the people may be better advised as to fit and unfit marriages," has made a study of the effects of miscegenation and also of the State laws relating thereto. In a recent published bulletin, "State Laws limiting Marriage Selection examined in the light of Eugenics," he offers the following criticism of laws relating to miscegenation and suggests an outline based on the conclusions of present day science, for legislation on this subject.

In summing up the results of his investigation of the biological effects of miscegenation, Mr. Davenport concludes with the statement that "the skin-color is not of itself a matter of social moment—it should not be at any rate."

In regard to present legislation he says: "The reasonable conclusion, then, would seem to be this: in legislating, forget skin-color and concentrate attention upon matters of real importance to organized society. Prevent those without sex control or educability or resistance to serious disease from reproducing their kind. This may be done by segregation during the reproductive period, or even as a last resort, by sterilization. Encourage, on the other hand, such marriages as will produce effective offspring. The problem of the socially fit must be treated not as one of color, but as a problem of the spread of feeblemindedness and physical weakness in organized society. From this point of view the social problem in the South is the same as that in the North, only it is larger, in that it involves a larger proportion of the whole population. However, if the demand for cheap labor in the North shall long continue to lure the weaklings of Europe to our Northern cities, the North will soon have on its hands as large a problem as the South has now—a problem which in its turn arose from the demand for cheap labor. Both sections alike must not be content merely to bow their heads before the oncoming storm, but must take positive measures to increase the density of socially desirable traits in the next generation by education, segregation, and sterilization; and by keeping out immigrants who belong to defective strains."

In answer to the question "What legislation concerning miscegenation would square with biological knowledge?" Mr. Davenport makes the following suggestion:

"No person having one-half part or more Negro blood shall be permitted to take a white person as spouse. Any person having less than one-eighth part of the Negro blood, shall not be given a license to marry a white person without a certificate from the States Eugenics Board."

Blanche K. Bruce.—United States Senator from Mississippi, 1875 to 1881. Born a slave March, 1841 in Prince Edward County, Virginia; died in Washington, D. C., March 17, 1898.

He was educated with his master's son. After freedom came, he taught school for some time in Missouri and also studied for a short time at Oberlin. In 1869 he came to Mississippi and became a planter. He entered politics, held a number of offices, including that of sheriff and superintendent of schools. Finally elected to the United States Senate. In 1881 was made Register of the United States Treasury.

Hiram R. Revels.—First colored United States Senator. Born free at Fayetteville, North Carolina, September 1, 1822.

In 1847 he graduated from Knox-College, Galesburg, Illinois. He became a preacher and lecturer. At the outbreak of the Civil War he was serving as pastor of a Methodist Church in Baltimore. He assisted in raising the first colored regiment organized in Maryland. He afterwards organized a colored regiment in Missouri. He finally settled at Natchez, Mississippi. January 1870, he was chosen United States Senator for that State and on February 25th, took his seat in Congress.

FIRST NEGRO MEMBERS OF A STATE LEGISLATURE.

Edward G. Walker and Charles L. Mitchell who were elected in 1866 to the Massachusetts House of Representatives from Boston were the first Negroes in the history of the race to sit in the legislature of any State in the Union.

Ebenezer Don Carlos Bassett, of Philadelphia.—First Negro given an appointment by the United States Government. In 1869 was appointed minister resident and consul general to Haiti. It was the first appointment ever given to a man of color by the United States Government.

He was born of Indian and mulatto parentage at Litchfield, Connecticut, October, 16, 1833, and died in Philadelphia, November 13, 1908. He filled the position until the end of 1877. He was Consul and Consul General of Haiti at New York, 1879-1888. In 1833 he was appointed Charge d'Affaires of the Haitian Government at Washington, but as it is not customary for the United States to receive its own citizens as diplomatic representatives of other governments he was only conditionally recognized in that capacity. The three years, 1889-1892, were spent in Haiti. Mr. Bassett then returned to the United States and engaged in literary work. He is the author of the Handbook of Haiti, issued by the Bureau of American Republics at Washington and published in English, French, Spanish and Portuguese languages. He was a member of the American Geographical Society and of the Connecticut Historical Society. He was educated at the High School, Birmingham, Connecticut, the Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Massachusetts and the Connecticut State Normal School. He was principal of a public school in New Haven, Connecticut, 1853-1855. During this time he was a student at Yale College. In 1857 he became principal of the colored high school in Philadelphia and attended the University of Pennsylvania, 1857-1858. He remained at the head of the High School until he received his appointment in 1869 as minister to Haiti.

NEGRO SOLDIERS.

THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

It is estimated that there was an average of thirty-five Negroes in each white regiment in the Revolutionary War. According to an official report there were in the army under General Washington's immediate command on the 24th of August, 1778, seven hundred and seventy-five Negroes. This does not appear to include the Negro troops furnished by Connecticut, New York, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island. There were altogether about 3,000 Negro soldiers employed by the Americans.

Negro soldiers have served with distinction in every war that the United States has waged. Free Negroes and slaves were employed on both sides in the Revolutionary War. They were found in all branches of the patriot army. They generally served in the same regiments with the white soldiers. A Hessian officer under date of October 3, 1778, wrote "the Negro can take the field instead of his master and therefore no regiment is to be seen in which there are not Negroes in abundance."

Some of the most heroic deeds of the War of Independence were performed by the black men. The first martyr in the Boston massacre, March 5, 1770, was the Negro, Crispus Attucks. Samuel Lawrence, a prominent white citizen of Groton, Massachusetts, led a company of Negroes at the Battle of Bunker Hill. It was the Negro, Peter Salem, who at the Battle of Bunker Hill fired the shot that mortally wounded Major Pitcairn. Solomon Poor, another Negro, so distinguished himself at the Battle of Bunker Hill that a petition was drawn up by some of the principal officers to secure him recognition by the Massachusetts Colony. At the fight at Brandywine, Beach Sampson, a giant Negro, armed with a scythe swept his way through the British works. See Poem in Skinner's "Myths of Our Own Land." The Black Legion, organized in 1779 in St. Domingo by Count D'Estaing, consisted of 800 young freedmen, blacks and mulattoes. At the siege of Savannah on the 9th of October, 1779, this legion by covering the retreat and repulsing the charge of the British, saved the defeated American and French Army from annihilation.

Only a small number of Negroes were allowed to serve in the patriot army of the Southern colonies. Toward the close of the struggle however, there was a growing sentiment among these colonies to use a large number of Negro troops. In 1780, Col. John Laurens, of South Carolina, seconded by General Lincoln, urged that State to raise black troops. In 1782, General Greene proposed to the governor of South Carolina a plan for raising black regiments. Negroes were also employed in the British army during the Revolutionary War. This fact helped to gain them admittance into the patriot army. It is estimated that 30,000 slaves were carried off by the British troops and used in pioneer work and in building fortifications.

In 1775, Lord Dunmore, the royal governor of Virginia, issued a proclamation offering freedom to all Negroes and indentured white servants who might enlist in the British army. In 1776, the British formed a regiment of 800 Negroes on Staten Island. In 1782, a Mr. J. Cruden, of Charleston, wrote a letter to Lord Dunmore, proposing that 10,000 black troops be raised in the province of South Carolina.

Lord Dunmore wrote to Gen. Clinton approving this scheme and declared his perfect willingness "to hazard his reputation and person in the execution of the measure." Letters containing the proposal were also sent by Lord Dunmore to London. Before they reached there, however, peace negotiations began. It appears that it was the intention of the highest British and American military authorities to begin a general policy of arming the Negro slaves and employing them as soldiers. The closing of the war, alone, prevented this policy from being carried into effect.

IN THE WAR OF 1812.

Commodore Perry spoke highly of the braverv and good conduct of the many Negroes who were under his command at the battle of Lake Erie. He said: "they seemed to be absolutely insensible of danger." The legislature of New York, October 24, 1814, authorized the raising of two regiments of men of color. As a result, 2,000 black men were enlisted and sent forward to the army at Sackett's Harbor. Two battalions composed of 500 Negroes distinguished themselves at the battle of New Orleans. Three months before the battle, General Andrew Jackson issued a proclamation "To the Free Colored Inhabitants of Louisiana."

As sons of freedom, you are now called upon to defend our most inestimable blessing. As Americans, your country looks with confidence to her adopted children for a valorous support, as a faithful return for the advantages enjoyed under her mild and equitable government. As fathers, husbands, and brothers you are summoned to rally around the standard of the Eagle, to defend all which is dear in existence.

To every noble-hearted generus freeman of color volunteering to serve during the present contest with Great Britain, and no longer, there will be paid the same bounty, in money and lands now received by the white soldiers of the United States, viz.: One Hundred and Twenty-four Dollars in money, and one hundred and sixty acres of land. The non-commissioned officers and privates will also be entitled to the same monthly pay, and daily rations, and clothes furnished to any American soldier.

On the eve of the battle, General Jackson reviewed the white and colored troops and had read to them his famous address. To the colored troops he said:

"To the Men of Color.—Soldiers! From the shores of Mobile I collected you to arms,—I invited you to share in the perils and to divide the glory of your white countrymen. I expected much from you; for I was not uninformed of those qualities which must render you so formidable to an invading foe. I knew that you could endure hunger and thirst and all the hard ships of war. I knew that you loved the land of your nativity, and that, like ourselves, you had to defend all that is most dear to man. But you surpassed my hopes. I have found in you, united to these qualities, that noble enthusiasm which impels to great deeds.

"Soldiers! The President of the United States shall be informed of your conduct on the present occasion; and the voice of the Representatives of the American nation shall applaud your valor, as your General now praises your ardor. The enemy is near. His sails cover the lakes."

THE CIVIL WAR.

Something like 178,975 Negro soldiers were employed in the Civil War. These made up 161 regiments, of which 141 were infantry, seven were calvary, twelve were heavy artillery, and one light artillery.

The first colored regiments to be organized were the First South Carolina, in wh ch the first enlistments were made May 9, 1862; the First Louisiana Native Guards, September 27, 1862; the Fifty-fourth Massachusetts, February 9, 1863 the Second Carolina Volunteers, February 23, 1863.

Under the direct authority of the General Government, and not credited to any State Negro soldiers were recruited as follows:

Alabama	4,969	Mississippi	17,869
Arkansas	5,526	North Carolina	5,035
Colorado	95	South Carolina	5,462
Florida	1,044	Tennessee	20,133
Georgia	3,486	Texas	47
Louisiana	24,052	Virginia	5,723

"There were also 5,896 Negro soldiers enlisted at large or whose credits are not specifically expressed by the records."

The Negro troops were engaged in many of the bloodiest battles of the war. The engagements in which they particularly distinguished themselves were the battle of Milliken's Bend, on the Mississippi, near Vicksburg, July 6, 1863; the assault on Port Hudson (near Baton Rouge, La.), May 27, 1863; the assault on Fort Wagner, a defense of Charleston, S. C., July 18, 1863; the assault on Petersburg, Va., June 15, 16, and July 30, 1864, and at the battle of Nashville, Tenn., December 15 and 16, 1864.

NEGRO SOLDIERS IN THE CONFEDERATE ARMY.

The use of slaves as soldiers with the reward of freedom to those who survived, was strongly advocated at different times by members of the Confederacy during the Civil War. Slaves were employed as laborers on the fortifications in all parts of the Confederacy. Both slaves and free Negroes offered their services. A considerable number of the latter enrolled themselves.

The Charleston Mercury for January 3, 1861 announced that 150 able bodied free colored men of Charleston had offered their services gratuitously to the Governor to hasten forward the important work of throwing up defences along the coast. In Lynchburg and Petersburg, Virginia in April 1861 free Negroes enrolled for the purpose of offering their services to the Governor for the defence of the State.

"ATTENTION, VOLUNTEERS: Resolved by the Committee of Safety, that C. Deloach, D. R. Cook, and William B. Greenlaw be authorized to organize a volunteer company composed of our patriotic freemen of color, of the city of Memphis, for the service of our common defence. All who have not enrolled their names will call at the office of W. B. Greenlaw & Co.

"F. W. FORSYTHE, Secretary."

In June 1861, the Legislature of Tennessee passed an act authorizing the Governor to receive into military service free persons of color between the ages of eighteen and fifty. Pay and rations were assigned them November 23, 1861, there was a review in New Orleans of 28,000 Cronfederate troops Among these was one regiment composed of 1,400 i ree colored men. On the 9th o February, 1862, there was another g and review of Confederate troops in New Orleans. The Picayune contained the following paragraph concerning this review:

"We must also pay a deserved compliment to the companies of free colored men, all very well drilled, and comfortably uniformed. Most of these companies, quite unaided by the administration, have supplied themselves with arms without regard to cost or trouble. One of these companies, commanded by the well-known veteran, Captain Jordan, was presented, a little before the parade, with a fine war-flag of the new style. This interesting ceremony took place at Mr. Cushing's store, on Camp, near Common Street. The presentation was made by Mr. Bigney, and Jordan made, on this occasion, one of his most felicitous speeches."

Mulattoes of Mobile whose ancestors were made free by the treaty with France in 1803 were enlisted in 1862 for the defense of that city. The next year, according to Flemming, they were received into the Confederate service as heavy artillerymen.

In February, 1864, the Confederate Congress passed an act making all male free Negroes (with certain exceptions) between the ages of eighteen and fifty liable to perform such duties in the army or in connection with the military defences of the country in the way of work upon the fortifications, or in government work, etc., as the Secretary of War might from time to time prescribe, and providing them rations, clothing and compensation. The Secretary of War was also authorized to employ for similar duty 20,000 male Negro slaves.

In February, 1865, at a meeting held in the African Church in Richmond to acquaint the people concerning the failure of the Peace Conference held at Fortress Monroe, Mr. Judah P. Benjamin, Secretary of State, proposed that legislation by the States be immediately effected so that the slaves could be armed. The next day a bill was presented in the House to give effect to Mr. Benjamin's suggestion, and providing for the volunteer enlistment of slaves for military service. A motion to reject was lost by ayes 21, nays 53; a motion to postpone the matter indefinitely was also lost; another to refer it to the Military Committee was also lost, and the motion of the original mover for a select committee passed. A resolution had already been offered in the Senate instructing the Committee on Military Affairs to report a bill with the least possible delay to take into the military service of the Confederate States, by volunteer enlistment with the consent of the owners, or by conscription, not exceeding 200,000 Negro soldiers. The resolution was defeated.

Dr. A. T. Augusta.—October 2, 1863, was appointed surgeon of the Seventeenth Regiment U. S. Colore Volunteers. He is said to have been the first colored man commissioned in the medical department of the United States Army.

Andrew W. Abbott.—Born 1840. Died December 30, 1913. One of the first colored men to be admitted to the army medical service.

Dr. Abbott was a graduate from the Medical Department of Toronto University about the beginning of the Civil War. He enlisted in one of the colored regiments. After the war he returned to Toronto, Canada, and practiced his profession. He was successful and when he died left an estate valued at $61,000.

Henry M. Turner.—Eminent Bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. First Negro chaplain in the United States Army. Born February 1, 1833, near Newberry, South Carolina. Appointed chaplain, 1863. Elected Bishop in 1880. Died May 8, 1915.

NEGRO SOLDIERS IN REGULAR ARMY

July 28, 1866, Congress passed a law that Negro regiments should be a part of the regular army. Under this act the Ninth and Tenth Calvary and the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth, Fortieth, and Forty-first Regiments of Infantry were organized.

March 3, 1869, a consolidation act was passed, and the Thirty-eighth and Forty-first were re-organized as the Twenty-fourth Regiment of Infantry; the Thirty-ninth and Fortieth were reorganized as the Twenty-fifth Regiment of Infantry. These regiments were stationed on the frontier and rendered valuable service in the military operations against the Indians, extending from Dakota to Mexico. The Ninth and Tenth Calvary won the reputation of being the best Indian fighters on the frontier.

IN THE SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR.

At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War in 1898, the four Negro regiments were among the first troops ordered to the front.

Negro soldiers took a more conspicuous part in the Spanish-American War than in any previous war waged by the United States. At the first battle in Cuba, Las Guasimas, the Tenth Cavalry distinguished itself by coming to the support of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and the Rough Riders. The Twenty-fifth Infantry took a prominent part in the Battle of El Caney. The Ninth and Tenth Cavalry and Twenty-fourth Infantry rendered heroic service in the famous battle of San Juan Hill.

Indiana raised two companies of colored troops, which were attached to the Eighth Immunes and officially designated as First Regiment Colored Companies A. and B, colored officers.

No one of the Negro volunteer regiments reached the front in time to take part in a battle. The Eighth Illinois formed part of the Army of Occupation and distinguished itself in policing and cleaning up Santiago.

After the close of the Spanish-American War two colored regiments, the Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth United States Infantry were enlisted and served in the Philippine War. Captains and Lieutenants colored. Other officers white.

In 1907 the white Cavalry detachment on duty at the Military Academy at West Point was replaced by a Negro Cavalry detachment. It is called the United States Military Cavalry Detachment. It is used in teaching the cadets cavalry tactics.

The Carrizal Incident.

In 1916 the United States sent a punitive expedition under General Pershing into Mexico in pursuit of the Villa forces which had raided Columbus, New Mexico. Two Negro regiments, the 10th Cavalry and the 24th Infantry were a part of his expedition. On June 21, Troops C and K of the 10th Cavalry were ambushed at Carrizal by some 700 Mexican soldiers. Although outnumbered almost ten to one, these black soldiers dismounted in the face of a withering machine gun fire, deployed, charged the Mexicans and killed their commander.

This handful of men fought on until of the three officers commanding them, two were killed and one was badly wounded. Seventeen of the men were killed and twenty-three were made prisoners. One of the many outstanding heroes of this memorable engagement was Peter Bigstaff who fought to the last beside his commander, Lieutenant Adair. John Temple Graves, of Atlanta, Georgia, the well known publicist in the course of a tribute to the Carrizal fighters, wrote:

"The black trooper might have faltered and fled a dozen times, saving his own life and leaving Adair to fight alone. But it never seemed to occur to him. He was comrade to the last blow. When Adair's broken revolver fell from his hand, the black trooper pressed another into it, and together shouting in defiance, they thinned the swooping circle of overwhelming odds before them.

"The black man fought in the deadly shamble side by side with the white man following always, fighting always as his Lieutenant fought.

"And finally, when Adair literally shot to pieces, fell in his tracks, his last command to his black trooper was to leave him and save his life. Even then the heroic Negro paused in the midst of that Hell of carnage for a final service to his officer. Bearing a charmed life, he had fought his way out. He saw that Adair had fallen with his head in the water. With superb loyalty the black trooper turned and went back to the maelstrom of death, lifted the head of his superior, leaned him against a tree and left him there dead with dignity when it was impossible to serve any more.

"There is not a finer piece of soldierly devotion and heroic comradeship in the history of modern warfare than that of Henry Adair and the black trooper who fought by him at Carrizal."

AMERICAN NEGRO IN THE WORLD WAR.

From June 5, 1917 to September 12, 1918 there were 2,290,527 Negroes registered for service in the United States Army. Those examined for service numbered 458,838 *.

The per cent of rejections of those examined was greater for white registrants than for Negro registrants. Of those examined, 70.41 per cent of the whites and 74.60 per cent of the Negroes were accepted. The number of Negroes finally inducted into the service was 367,710. The number accepted for full military service was, 342,277. Of the total registrants, 26.84 per cent of the whites and 31.74 per cent of the Negroes were accepted for full military service.

Number Negro Soldiers Mobilized.

There were in addition to the 342,277 secured through the selective draft, the four regiments of the regular army, the 9th Cavalry, 10th Cavalry, 24th Infantry, 25th Infantry, and National Guard Units as follows: 8th Illinois, 15th New York, 9th Ohio Batallion, 1st Separate Battalion of the District of Columbia; Co. L., 6th Massachusetts Infantry; First Separate Company of Connecticut National Guard; First Separate Company of Maryland National Guard; and Company G unattached of Tennessee National Guard. Including those in the regular army and the National Guard Units the total number of Negro soldiers mobilized for the World War was about 380,000. About 200,000 of these were sent to France. Some 42,000 of these were combat troops. Some 1,400 Negroes were commissioned as officers in the United States Army during the World War. (For a list of these see 1918-19 Negro Year Book, pages 223-228.)

The Record Of The Negro In World War.

The American Negroes made a magnificent record in the World War. They were the one group in the Nation who were a 100 per cent loyal and were impervious to Germany propaganda. They were the one group which most willingly responded to the draft and furnished the largest proportionate number of draftees; 74.60 per cent of the Negroes examined were accepted and 69.71 per cent of the whites.

Provost Marshal General Crowder, in his report for 1918, in speaking of the Negroes and the draft, quotes from a memorandum sent him by Mr. Emmett J. Scott, Special Assistant to the Secretary of War: "One of the brightest chapters in the whole history of the war is the Negro's eager acceptance of the draft and his splendid willingness to fight. His only resentment was due to the limited extent to which he was allowed to join and participate in combatant or 'fighting' units. The number of colored draftees accepted for military duty, and the comparatively small number of them claiming exemptions, as compared with the total number of white and colored men called and drafted, present an interesting study and reflects much credit upon this racial group."

The First Soldiers American Expeditionary Forces Decorated For Bravery Were Two Negroes.

The Negro soldiers from the United States made a wonderful record on the battle fields of France. They were the first of the American Expeditionary Forces to get into action. The first soldiers of the American Army to be decorated for bravery, in France were two Negroes Henry Johnson and Needham Roberts, members of the 369th Infantry which was formerly the 15th New York National Guard Regiment.

On the night of May 15, 1918, these two men, while on sentry duty were attacked by a raiding party of some twenty or more Germans. "The names of these two men will stand out forever on the roll of honor of their race." Battling in the blackness of night with their rifles, hand grenades and a bolo knife, wholly deprived of the assistance of their comrades, they put to flight an enemy assaulting party of at least twenty-four strong. For this act of bravery, Johnson and Roberts received medals of honor.

Other Citations for Individual Gallantry In Action.

The following are only examples of the many individual feats of bravery by American Negro soldiers for which there were citations:*

"Private Tom Rivers, Company G, 366th Infantry, for extraordinary heroism in action near the Bois Delavaurette, although gassed, volunteered and carried important messages through heavy barrage to the support companies. He refused first aid until his company was relieved."

Second Lieutenant Nathan O. Goodloe of the 366th Machine Gun Company commended for excellent work and meritorious conduct. During the operations in the Forest D Argonne, Lieut. Goodloe was attached to the 1st Battalion. During the course of the action it became necessary to reorganize the battalion and withdraw part of it to a secondary position. He carried out the movement under a continual machine gun fire from the enemy. General Martin said: "Lieut. Goodloe's calm courage set an example that inspired confidence in his men.

"With the approbation of the Commander-in-chief of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, the Marshal of France, Commander-in-chief of the French Armies of the East, cites in the order of the division: Private Mack Watson, Headquarters Company 3rd Battalion, of the 372nd Regular Infantry. Not being useful as a telephonist any more, he requested the battalion commander to allow him to take part in the attack in the first wave, and displayed the greatest intrepidity during the assault of the trenches south of the Bussy Farm, September 29, 1918. This order was signed by Marshal Petain, commander-in-chief of the French Armies of the East, at the general headquarters on January 13, 1919.

"Private Reuben Burrell, machine gun company 371st Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action in the Champagne sector, France, September 30, 1918. Private Burrell, although painfully wounded in the knee, refused to be evacuated, stating that if he went to the rear there would not be enough left for his group to function.

"Private Hilary Moses, Company C, 371st Infantry, for extraordinary heroism in action near Ardeuil, France, September 30, 1918. After his company had been forced to withdraw from an advanced position, under severe machine gun and artillery fire, this soldier went forward and rescued wounded soldiers, working persistently until all of them had been carried to shelter.

Private William Webster 371st Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Ardeuil, France, September 29, 1918. With three other soldiers, Private Webster crawled 200 yards ahead of our line under violent machine gun fire and rescued an officer who was lying mortally wounded in a shell-hole.

"The 369th Infantry fought in the Argonne. It became necessary to send a runner across an open field swept by heavy machine gun fire. Volunteers were called for. Private Edward Saunders of Company I responded. Before he had gone far a shell cut him down. As he fell he cried to his comrades: "Some one come and get this message. I am wounded." Lieutenant Robert L. Campbell of the same company dashed across the shell swept space, picked up the wounded private and, with the Germans fairly hailing bullets around him carried his man back to the American lines. For the valor shown both were cited for the Distinguished Service Cross and Lieutenant Campbell in addition was recommended for Captaincy. From the same company, John Baker, having volunteered, was taking a message through heavy shell fire to another part of his line. A shell struck his hand, tearing away part of it, but unfaltering, he delivered the message. He was asked why he did not seek aid for his wounds before completing the journey. "I thought the message might contain information that would save lives," was the answer. Under the same Lieutenant, Robert L. Campbell, a few colored soldiers, armed only with their rifles, trench knives, and hand grenades, were moving over a road in the Chateau Thierry sector. Suddenly their course was crossed by the firing of a German machine gun. They tried to locate it by the direction of the bullets, but could not. To their right, a little ahead, lay a space covered with thick undergrowth; just back of it was an open field. Lieutenant Campbell who knew by the direction of the bullets that his party had not been seen by the Germans, ordered one of his men with a rope which they happened to have, to crawl to the thick undergrowth and tie the rope to several stems of the brush; then to withdraw as far as possible and pull the rope, making the brush shake as though men were crawling through it. The purpose was to draw direct fire from the machine gun, and, by watching locate its position. The ruse worked. Lieutenant Campbell then ordered three of his men to crawl out and flank the machine gun on one side, while he and two others moved up and flanked it on the other side. The brush was shaken more violently by the secret rope. The Germans, their eyes focused by the brush, poured a hail of bullets into it. Lieutenant Campbell gave the signal. The flanking party dashed up; with their hand grenades they killed four of the Huns and captured the remaining three—also the machine gun."

Four Regiments And A Battalion Decorated By French For Bravery In Action.

The military authorities awarded the Croix de Guerre to four whole Negro Regiments, the 369th, 370th, 371st and 372nd and the first battalion of the 369th Infantry for heroism in action. One of these regiments, the 370th, formerly the 8th Illinois, was, with the exception of the colonel, officered entirely by Negroes. Thirty of the Negro officers in this regiment received medals of honor for distinguished bravery. Altogether, some 60 Negro officers were decorated for bravery. Some 350 non-commissioned officers and privates of the Negro American soldiers were also, for their bravery, given medals of honor.

A correspondent of the New York World gives the following vivid description of how the Negro troops fought and what they underwent: "Heading eastward from the Marne, I found Negro troops in the line of the Champagne front and on the edge of the Argonne forest. Some of the Negroes helped to flay the Germans left flank in the drive of July 15th, when under almost continuous barrage. They then moved into still more violently assailed positions to relieve the French unit. The 'Chocareds,' as the French call the Negroes, took part in a series of local attacks toward the end of July that wrung from the Boche every foot of ground his terrific onslaught had gained him. It has been feared they would flinch under the prolonged exposure to big calibre shells, but they have bravely met that supreme test."

Negro Soldiers Stood Test On European Battlefield.

The American Negro soldiers made a record as fighters in the World War as they did in the Spanish-American and the Civil Wars. Before the armistice closed, 42,000 American Negro soldiers had gone into combat. "Fighting for the first time on the soil of the world's most famous battlefields—Europe—and for the first time brought into direct comparison with the best soldiers of Germany, Great Britain, and France they showed themselves able to hold their own where the tests of courage endurance, and aggressiveness were most severe."

"At Cheateau Thierry, Soissons, on the Vesle, in Champagne and the Argonne and in the final attacks in the Metz region these singing soldiers—and how they sang—were in the thick of it.

"The four regiments of former national guard units—the first to go oversea—had not been in France three months before one of them—the 372nd was picked for the Verdun region, to occupy the famous battle-swept hill 304. On that exposed ground, where thousands of French and German soldiers had fallen as the line swayed back and forth, these American Negroes, fresh from their training with the French, were placed to hold the Hun tide.

"Their first engagement was in a drive for Montoir. Here came the real test, as one military observer has said. And according to this authority, they were eager to get into the fight.

"They cheered and sang when the announcement came that their chance had arrived. But the question was: back of their enthusiasm had they the staying qualities drilled into European troops through centuries of warfare?

"This they answered by doing some of the heaviest and most effective fighting of the day. From June 6th to September 10th, they were stationed in the bloody Argonne forest. On the night of September 25th they were summoned to take part in the Argonne offensive, and were in that terrific drive—one of the decisive engagements of the war—until October 7th.

"In this nine days' battle the Negroes not only proved their fighting qualities in an ordeal such as men have rarely been called upon to face, but these qualities, in deadly striking power and stubborn resistance in crises, stood out with such distinction that the whole regiment was awarded the covered croix de guerre."

Headquarters, 317th Engineers, American Expeditionary Forces, A. P. O. 766, Mobile General Orders No. 7.

France, February 3, 1919.

"Pursuant to orders from General Headquarters, American Expeditionary Forces, this regiment moves to a part of Embarkation for early return to the United States.

"On the eve of departure of the regiment from France it is fitting that the Commanding Officer should address the regiment in orders covering its work overseas. The regiment came overseas on a stern duty, and with a trust imposed in it by the people of the United States of America. You have been true to that trust in the fullest sense and you can return home and face the people of our country with a proud consciousness that your work has been of a high and efficient order. For more than a hundred years the Corps of Engineers has maintained a proud record of achievement, whether in peace or war, from the blazing sun of the tropics to the eternal ice and snow of the Arctic regions, and it is a pleasure to be present as well as to the former commanding officer of the regiment to be able to say that your work has been in accordance with the best traditions of Engineer Service.

"The meritorious work of the regiment as a part of the 33rd Corps of the 7th French Army in the VOSGES, at FRAPELLE, LAFONTANELLE, LESSEUX and other points in the ST. DIE SECTOR; and as a Corps regiment of the First Army Corps, First American Army Corps, First American Army from September 25, 1918, to and after the close of hostilities on November 11, in the ARGONNE FOREST, at NEUVILLY, BOURIELLES CHEPPY, VARENNES, FOUR DE PARIS, ABRI DE CROCHET, LA BESOGNE, LANCON, GRAND PRE, ST. GEORGES, LE MORT HOMME, BRIQUENAY and BUZANCY in the ARDENNES—is deserving of the highest commendation.

A Communique of General Pershing.

Reports in hand show a notable instance of bravery and devotion shown by two soldiers of an American colored regiment operating in a French sector. Before daylight on May 15, Private Henry Johnson and Private Roberts while on sentry duty at some distance from one another, were attacked by a German raiding party, estimated at twenty men who advanced in two groups, attacking at once from flank and rear.

"Both men fought bravely in hand-to-hand encounters, one resorting to the use of a bolo knife after his rifle jammed, and further fighting with bayonet and butt became impossible. There is evidence that at least one and probably a second German was severely cut. A third is known to have been shot.

"Attention is drawn to the fact that the colored sentries were first attacked and continued fighting after receiving wounds and despite the use of grenades by a superior force. They should be given credit for preventing by their bravery the capture of any our men.

GENERAL ORDERS: No. 19.

1. The following order of the 59th Division, Army of France, is published to the regiment, and will be read to all organizations at first formation after its receipt:

59th Division, Staff, Quartier General. December 8, 1918.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 4785.

OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS OF THE 370th R. I. U. S.

You are leaving us. The impossibility at this time that the German Army can recover from its defeat—the necessity which is imposed on the people of the Entente of taking up again a normal life—leads the United States to diminish its affectives in France. You are chosen to be among the first to return to America. In the name of your comrades of the 59th Division, I say unto you: Au Revoir in the name of France, thank you.

"The hard and brilliant battles of CHAVIGNY, LEURY and the BOIS de BEAUMONT having reduced the affectives of the Division, the American Government generously put your regiment at the disposition of the French High Command in order to reinforce us. You arrived from the trenches of the Argonne.

"We at first, in September, at MARE-UIL-SUR-OURCQ, admired your fine appearance under arms, the precision of your review, the suppleness of your evolutions that presented to the eye the appearance of silk unrolling its wavy folds.

"We advanced to the line. Fate placed you on the banks of the AILETTE, in front of the BOIS MORTIER. October 12th you occupied the enemy trenches ACIER and BROUZE. On the 13th we reached the railroad of LAON-LA-FERE—the forest of SAINT GOBAIN, principal center of resistance of the Hindenburg Line, was ours.

"November 5th the SERRE was at last crossed—the pursuit became active. Prout's BATTALION distinguished itself at the SAL ST. PIERRE, where it captured a German battery. PATTON'S BATTALION crossed, the first, the HIRSON railroad at the heights of AUBENTON, where the Germans tried to resist. DUNCAN'S BATTALION took LOGNY, and carried away by their ardor, could not be stopped short of GUE d'-HOSSUS, on November 11th, after the Armistice.

"We have hardly had the time to appreciate you, and already you depart.

"As Lieutenant-Colonel Duncan said November 28th, in offering to your regimental colors as a proof of your love for France, as an expression of your loyalty to the 59th Division and our Army, you have given of your best and you have given it out of the fulness of your hearts.

"The blood of your comrades who fell on the soil of France, mixed with the blood of our soldiers, renders indissoluble the bonds of affection that unite us. We have, besides the pride of having worked together at a magnificent task, and the pride of bearing on our foreheads the ray of a common grandeur.

"A last time—Au revoir.

"All of us of the 59th Division will remember the time when the 370th R. I. U. S., under the orders of the distinguished Colonel Roberts, formed a part of our beautiful Division."

GENERAL VINCENDON.
Commanding the 59th Division.

French Commanders Commend Bravery 371st and 372nd Regiments.

9th Army Corps,
Staff 3rd Bureau No. 255.
P. C. October 7th, 1918.

The 157th and 161st Divisions and the 2nd Morrocan Divisions are leaving the Army Corps. The General commanding the 9th Corps addresses to them his most sincere thanks and the warmest congratulations for the glorious successes achieved by their indomitable tenacity. He salutes the brave American Regiments who have rivaled in intrepidity their French comrades.

"He cannot recount here the facts which have been performed for every one of the days of that victorious journey. They are inscribed on the conquered ground materialized by the trophies taken from the enemy and ingraved in the heart of the chief who bows before the troops and salutes them profoundly.

The General Garnier Duplessis Commanding the 9th C. A.

157th Division Staff.
Q. G. October 8, 1918.

(GENERAL ORDER NO. 234.)

"In transmitting you with legitimate pride the thanks and congratulations of the General Garnier Duplessis, allow me, My dear friends of all rank, American and French, to address you from the bottom of the heart of a chief and soldier the expressions of the gratitudes for the glory which you have lent to our good 157th Division. I had full confidence in you, but you have surprised my hopes.

"During those nine days of hard fighting, you have progressed eight kilometers powerfully organized defenses, taken nearly 600 prisoners, captured 15 guns of different calibres, 20 minenwerfers and nearly 150 machine guns, secured an enormous amount of engineering material and important supplies of artillery ammunition, brought down by your fire, 3 enemy aeroplanes.

"The 'Red Hand sign of the Division has, thanks to you become a bloody hand which took the boche by the throat and made him cry for mercy. You have well avenged our glorious dead.' "

General Goybet.
Commanding 157th Division.

December 15, 1918.

(GENERAL ORDER NO. 245.)

"On the 12th of December the 371st and 372nd Infantries were replaced at the disposal of the American Command.

"It is not without profound emotion that I come in the name of the 157th D. I. and in my own personal name, to say farewell to our valorous comrades of battle.

"During seven months we have lived as brothers in arms, sharing the same works, the same fatigues, the same dangers, side by side we have participated in the great Champagne Battle which was crowned with a glorious success.

"The 157th D. I., will never forget the irresistible dash, the heroic push of the colored American regiments, on the 'Cretedes Observatoires and in the plain of Monthois. The most formidable defenses, the best organized machine gun nests, the most smashing artillery barrage could not stop them. These elite regiments crossed all of it with a superb disdain of death and thanks to their courageous devotion, the Red Hand Division, during nine days of hard struggle always held the lead in the historic advance of the 4th Army.

"Officers, non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the 371st and 372nd Infantry, I respect your glorious dead, and I bow before your banners which on the side of the flag of 33rd R. I. conducted us to the victory.

"Dear friends from America, after you have crossed the ocean anew, forget not the Red Hand Division. Our pure fraternity of arms has been soaked in the blood of braves. These ties will be indissoluble.

"Keep a loyal memory of our General, so proud to have commanded you and remember that his recognition and affection is required for always.

General Goybet,
Commanding the 157th Division.

NEGROES AT WEST POINT.

Three Negroes have graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point, New York. Henry O. Flipper, 1877, the first to graduate, served for a time in the regular army, but because of difficulties was discharged. He then went to Mexico. John H. Alexander, 1887, the second graduate, died March 26, 1894, while serving as military instructor at Wilberforce University. Charles Young, 1889, the third Negro to graduate, was retired in 1917 with the rank of Colonel.

Nine other Negroes attended but did not graduate from West Point as follows: James W. Smith, South Carolina, 1870-1874; Henry A. Napier, Tennessee, 1871-72; Thomas Van R. Gibbs, Florida, 1872-73; John W. Williams, Virginia, 1874-1875; Johnson C. Whittaker, South Carolina, 1876-1882; Charles A. Minnie, New York, 1877-78; William T. Andrews, South Carolina, 1885-86; William A. Hare, Ohio, 1885-1886; Henry W. Holloway, South Carolina, 1886.

NEGROES AT ANNAPOLIS.

No Negroes have graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. The following, however, have attended: John Henry Conyers, South Carolina, 1872-73; Alonzo C. McClellan, South Carolina, 1873; and Henry E. Baker, Mississippi, 1874-75.

CARNEGIE HERO FUND COMMISSION AWARDS.

The following is a list of the awards made from April 25, 1919 to January 18, 1922, inclusive by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission to colored persons for deeds of heroism and also of the awards to white persons who performed deeds of heroism in connection with efforts to save colored persons from injury or death.(1)

Awards.

Milton Carter (colored), aged twenty-two, clerk, died attempting to save Arthur J. Truly (colored), aged nineteen, laborer, from drowning, East Haven, Conn., August 7, 1919. Truly got into difficulty in Long Island Sound near a rock that projected from shore and called for help. Carter ran out on the rock to a point near Truly; and as Truly was sinking, Carter dived beside him. Truly and Carter rose together. Carter's back was to Truly. He told Truly to grasp him, and Truly took hold of him around the waist, and they sank immediately and were drowned. His widow was awarded a bronze medal and until further notice, $25 a month, not to extend, however, beyond five years or the date of her remarriage.

Walter Ross (colored), aged thirty-four, locomotive fireman, attempted to rescue Roy L. Riley (colored), aged nineteen, driver, from a runaway, Greenville, S. C., July 19, 1916. While Riley was driving a horse hitched to a wagon, the lines fell to the street. He reached for them and fell on one of the thills, striking the horse and causing it to run away. Ross ran into the street in front of the horse. He reached for the bridle, and the horse struck him and knocked him down. Riley fell on top of Ross, and a wheel of the wagon ran over the right leg of Ross. The horse stopped two hundred feet beyond Ross. Riley was not injured. Ross' leg was broken, his head was lacerated, and his back was bruised. He was disabled nearly ten months. He was awarded a bronze medal and $1,000 disablement benefits.

Walker O. Lindsey, (white), aged twenty-nine, superintendent, saved Andrew Dorsey, (colored), aged twenty-four, and attempted to save Hilliard Mapp (colored), aged forty-seven, laborers, from a cave-in in a well, Madison, Ga., March 20, 1916. Dorsey, Mapp, and Lindsey were working at the bottom of a well thirty feet deep when part of a wall of the well caved on them. Dorsey's leg was caught by some timbers, and he was partially buried. Mapp was completely buried. Lindsey was buried so that only his head, arms, and part of his back were exposed; and he was seriously hurt, but not maimed. He extricated himself and was raised to the top in a bucket. He re-entered the well in the bucket and tied a rope to Dorsey, and Dorsey was drawn up. Two small portions of the wall caved while Lindsey was in the well but did not strike him. Lindsey felt weak and left the well. He entered it again to find Mapp, but could not locate him and left the well. Another cave-in occurred later. Mapp was dead when he was found. Lindsey was awarded a bronze medal and $500 for a worthy purpose as needed.

Samuel Davis (colored), aged twenty-five, coal miner, died attempting to save N. Estelle Garnand, aged sixteen, from drowning, Aflex, Ky., July 12, 1920. While wading in Tug Fork of Big Sandy River, Miss Garnand stepped into deep water. She struggled and sank under the surface several times. Davis, who was fully clothed and wore rubber boots, dived from the bank toward the spot where Miss Garnand had last disappeared. He did not come to the surface, and was drowned. Miss Garnand was drowned. A bronze medal was awarded to the widow and until further notice $50 a month with $5.00 a month additional on account of her daughter while she is dependent upon her and not over 16, no benefits to extend, however, beyond sixteen years or the date of the widow's remarriage.

George Lyle (colored), aged fifty-four, driver, attempted to rescue Lamar B. Storrs, aged eight, from a runaway, Canton, Fa., April 27, 1920. A horse, to which a light wagon was hitched, ran away; and the driver was thrown out, leaving Lamar clinging to the seat Two men ran into the street to stop the horse; but as it approached them, they did nothing. Lyle ran ninety-five feet to reach the horse, and with both hands seized the bridle. He was jerked off his feet, causing him to lose his hold; one of the wheels of the wagon struck his right leg; and he fell to the ground. The horse ran three hundred feet farther and collided with a team, and Lamar was thrown to the street, but not injured. Lyle's right leg was fractured, and he was disabled for more than a year. He was awarded a bronze medal, and (supplementing Workmen's Compensation) disablement benefits until further notice at the rate of $26 a month from the date of the accident, not to extend, however beyond a total period of two years; and also the sum of $250 to be applied toward the liquidation of his indebtedness or other worthy purpose as needed.

Warren A. Hoy (white), aged thirty-one, machine-man's helper, helped to save Frank Carter (colored), aged thirty-eight, chargeman, and John Payne (colored), aged forty-one machine-man, and died attempting to help save James Jackson (colored), aged forty-three, machine-man from suffocation, Rausch Creek, Pa., January 21, 1921. Carter, Payne and Jackson were overcome by dynamite fumes about two hundred feet from the mouth of a tunnell in which they were working. Hoy, who had also been working with the men, left the tunnell, but re-entered it on a small motor-car, accompanied by the only other man near the scene. They took Carter to the open air on the motor car and then rescued Payne in the same manner. Both were unconscious. Hoy and his companion then ran the motor car into the tunnel to within a short distance of Jackson, and Hoy's companion dragged Jackson about twenty-five feet toward the motor car. Feeling that he was about to be overcome, Hoy's companion dropped Jackson, left the tunnel, and ran more than a mile for help. Hoy was overcome close to the motor car. He was the only one besides Carter that knew how to run it. Carter, who revived, entered the tunnel and dragged Jackson out. Hoy was taken out by other men about an hour after he had entered but could not be revived. Jackson and Payne recovered. A silver medal was awarded to the widow and (supplementing Workmen's Compensation until further notice $50 a month with $5 a month additional on account of her daughter while she is dependent upon her, no benefits to extend however, beyond five years of the date of the widow's remarriage.

Peter G. Rumpf, (white), aged forty-nine, compressor-man, helped to save Frank Carter (colored) and John Payne (colored) and attempted to help save James Jackson (colored) from suffocation, Rausch Creek, Pa., January 21, 1921. Rumpf was Hoy's companion in the rescue work. He was not seriously affected. He was awarded a bronze medal and $1,000 for worthy purpose as needed.

Frank Carter (colored) saved James Jackson (colored) from suffocation, Rausch Creek, Pa., January 21, 1921. Carter was the first to be removed from the tunnel. He recovered and entered for Jackson about twenty minutes later. He took hold of Jackson, and with great difficulty dragged him two hundred feet to the open air. He was awarded a bronze medal and $1,000 for a worthy purpose as needed.

Thomas J. Walker (white), aged twenty-four, farmer, saved James Riley (colored), aged nineteen, farmer, from suffociation, Alpharetta, Ga., August 13, 1918. Riley was overcome by gas while working at the bottom of a well thirty feet deep. Several men were afraid to go down to aid him. Walker, who has previously been engaged on the work but had discontinued because of gas in the well, was attracted to the well and also refused to go down at first; but seeing no one else would go, he had himself lowered on the well rope, which was the only one at hand. He tied the rope around Riley, and then ascended steps cut in the side of the well. He was faint when he reached the top and was assisted out just as he was about to fall back into the well. Riley was drawn up and was revived three hours later. He was awarded a silver medal and $1,000 for a worthy purpose as needed.

Edgar Forman (white), aged thirty-five, engine foreman, saved Bessie L. Betts (colored), aged eight, from being killed by a train, Dallas, Texas, November 30, 1915. Bessie, who was deaf, stood between the rails of a track with her back toward a train which was approaching at a speed of six miles an hour. The engine, which was at the rear of the train, was stopped; but the forward car was uncoupled and continued on. Forman was standing on the car, a flat one; he attempted to jump to the track when the car was six feet from the girl to rescue her; but his foot caught on a coupling-lever; and he fell across a rail of the track. When falling his outstretched hand struck Bessie and knocked her off the track Forman put his hand against the wheel of the car, and the wheel bumped and pushed him along the rail for twenty feet and the car then stopped. Forman's back and side were bruised, but not seriously. He was awarded a bronze medal and $1,000 for a worthy purpose as needed.

Roy Kenneth Davis (white), age fourteen, school boy, died attempting to save James Alexander (colored), aged thirteen, school boy, from drowning Louisville, Ky., September 4, 1919. James waded from the bank of the Ohio River into water over his depth and began floundering. Roy, who could not swim, waded eight feet from the bank and paddled seven feet to James, using water-wings. He grasped James with one hand, and James threw his arms around Roy's neck and they went under the surface. They rose struggling violently, and then went down again and were drowned. A bronze medal was awarded to Davis' father.

John James Sullivan (white), aged thirty-three, driver, died attempting to save Charles R. and John H. King (colored), aged seven and six respectively, from drowning, Indianapolis, Ind., March 2, 1920. Charles and John broke through the ice on Fall Creek one hundred and twenty-five feet from the bank and fell into the water. Sullivan ran eight hundred feet to the bank and started walking on the ice toward them. When he was fifteen feet from the bank, he suddenly broke through the ice and sank. All three were drowned. A bronze medal was awarded to the son, and until further notice $25 a month, not to extend, however, beyond eleven years.

THE CHURCH AMONG NEGROES.

THE FIRST CHURCHES ORGANIZED.

1773. First Negro Baptist church in America organized at Silver Bluff across the Savannah River from Augusta, Georgia by a Mr. Palmer.
1776. Harrison Street Baptist church, Petersburg, Virginia, organized.
1780. First African Baptist church Richmond, Virginia.
1785. Colored Baptist church organized at Williamsburg, Virginia.
1788. First African Baptist church of Savannah, Georgia, organized January 19, by Rev. Abraham Marshall (white) and Rev. Jesse Peters (colored.) Andrew Bryan, a slave, was the first pastor.

1787. The Free African Society organized with Absalom Jones and Richard Allen as overseers. This Society resolved itself into the "African Church," erected a building and by its own decision entered into fellowship with the Protestant Episcopal Church. Absalom Jones and Richard Allen alone voted for the organization to connect itself with the Methodist Church. This was the origin of St. Thomas Episcopal church. The building was opened for divine service July 17, 1794. Richard Allen was selected for license and ordination. He preferred to remain a Methodist. Absalom Jones was then selected and ordained.

1790. African Baptist church, Lexington, Kentucky, organized. In 1820 split into First Baptist church and Pleasant Green Baptist church.

1791. Richard Allen purchased a lot for a church at Sixth and Lombard Streets, Philadelphia. In 1794 he sold this lot to Bethel church, and he erected on this lot the first church building of the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

1793. Springfield Baptist church at Augusta, Georgia, organized by Rev. Abraham Marshall. Rev. Jesse Peters, who had gathered the members together, was the pastor.

1794. Zion Methodist Episcopal church (colored) organized, Philadelphia, from St. George's M. E. church (white.)

1796. Jas. Varick and others established in New York City a Colored Methodist Church which was the beginning of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Denomination. This is the oldest Negro church in New York. The first meetings were held in the cabinet shop of William Miller on Cross Street.

1800. The Abyssinia Baptist church of New York City organized.

1802. The Second Baptist church of Savannah, an off-shoot of the First African Baptist Church, was organized.

1805. The African Meeting House, the first Negro church in Boston and in New England organized. The building for this church which is said to have been erected entirely by Negro labor, was in Smith Court, off Belknap Street. It is now known as the Joy Street Baptist church.

1809. The first African Baptist Church of Philadelphia organized.

1807. First African Presbyterian church of Philadelphia, the first Colored Presbyterian Church in America, founded by Rev. Archibald Alexander, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church of Philadelphia, and moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly. Its building, erected in 1811, was located off Seventh and Bainbridge Streets. Now located at Seventeenth and Fitzwater Streets. John Gloucester (see John Gloucester) was its first pastor.

1812. Colored Peoples' church organized at Trenton, New Jersey. About 1816, this church was taken into the African Methodist Episcopal Denomination.

1818. St. Philip's Protestant Episcopal church of New York City, an off-shoot of Trinity Protestant Episcopal church, organized. It was incorporated in 1820. St. Philip's has the distinction of being the richest Negro church in the world. Its real estate holdings, much of which is in residence property amounts to about $1,000,000.

1824. St. James First African church, first colored Episcopal church in a slave State, at Baltimore, Md., by the Rev. Levington, who had been ordained in St. Thomas church, Philadelphia. This church was established with the consent and approval of Bishop Kent of the Episcopal Church. In 1827 the church building was consecrated.

1838. July. First Bethel Baptist church, Jacksonville, Florida, established. It is now the Bethel Baptist Institutional church. There were six charter members: four white, the Rev. J. Jaudan and wife, Deacon Jas. McDonald and wife and two colored persons, slaves of Mr. Jaudan. The first meeting place was the Government Block House which stood near the county courthouse. Mr. Jaudan purchased a lot on Church Street between Hogan and Julia Streets and gave it to the church. A meeting house was erected here in 1861. At the close of the Civil War the white members of the church went into court and endeavored to dispossess the colored members of the church property and name. The colored members of the congregation, however, were in the majority and the court decided that they were the Bethel Baptist church and rightful owners of the property. A short while after this, the Bethel Baptist church sold the property on Church Street to their white brethren and purchased a lot on the Northwest corner of Maine and Union Streets and erected a building thereon in 1868. In 1894, the Bethel Baptist church was incorporated by the State of Florida as an institutional church with authority to carry on social betterment, industrial training work, a Bible institute, and a publishing and tract repository department, in addition to the regular work of a Missionary Baptist church.

1867. April 14. Plymouth Congregational church, first Colored Congregational church among the colored people of the South, organized at Charleston, South Carolina. This church had its origin with the colored members of the Circular Congregational church of Charleston, which was organized in the year 1680. January 20, 1867, 108 of the members of the Circular church, requested their letters with the purpose of forming a new church of their own.

1878. First Lutheran Colored church, of the Synodical Conference, organized at Little Rock, Arkansas.

DATES OF THE ORGANIZATION OF THE COLORED DENOMINATIONS.

1805. Colored members of Asbury Methodist Episcopal church of Wilmington Delaware, withdrew and erected a building for themselves.

1813. The Union Church of Africans incorporated September 7, at Wilmington, Delaware, by the colored members who had withdrawn from Asbury church.

1816. The African Methodist Episcopal Church organized at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, with Richard Allen as its first bishop.

1821. At New York the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church organized June 21. James Varick was made District Chairman, and the next year became the first bishop of the church.

1836. The Providence Baptist Association of Ohio organized. This is said to be the first colored Baptist Association organized in the United States.
In 1838 the Wood River Baptist Association of Illinois was organized.
1853 the Western Colored Baptist Convention organized.
1864 Northwestern and Southern Baptist Convention organized.
1867 the Consolidated American Baptist Convention organized and continued till 1879 when the Western churches withdrew.
1880 the National Baptist Convention was organized at Montgomery, Alabama.

1850. African Union Church organized by a division of the Union Church of Africans.

1850. The Union American Methodist Episcopal Church (colored) organized by a division of the Union Church of Africans.

1860. About this time the First Colored Methodist Protestant Church organized by Negro members who withdrew from the Methodist Protestant Church.

1865. Colored members from the white Primitive Baptist Churches of the South organized at Columbia, Tennessee, the Colored Primitive Baptists in America.

1866. The African Union First Colored Methodist Protestant Church of America or elsewhere, organized by a union of the African Union Church with the First Colored Methodist Protestant Church.

NOTED NEGRO PREACHERS.

1715. Francisco Xanier de Luna Victoria became bishop of the diocese of Panama which the oldest See on the American continent. He was the first Negro in America to become a bishop and is said is said to be the first person born in the Western Hemisphere to be elected to the bishopric. His father, a charcoal burner, was a freed Negro slave, whose purpose in life was to rear, and educate his son for the priesthood. Luna Victoria took possession of the diocese on the 15th of August, 1751. He is said to have furnished at his own expense, the cathedral and enriched it with jewels and precious vestments. In 1759 he was transferred to the See of Trujillo, Peru.

1750. George Leile, born about this time, was one of the most noted of the early Negro preachers. Some time before the Revolutionary War, Leile's master moved to Burke County, Georgia. Here Leile was converted and began to preach. Not long before he began to preach, his master, who was a deacon of the Baptist Church, gave him his freedom. Leile preached to the slaves at Savannah during the Revolutionary War. In 1783 he went to Jamaica. Just before leaving he baptized the slave Andrew Bryan, who in after years became a great preacher and established the First African Baptist Church in Savannah. Leile had much success and established the Baptist church among the Negroes of Jamaica.

1788. Andrew Bryan founded the First African Baptist Church at Savannah, Georgia. Bryant was publicly whipped and twice imprisoned for preaching. He was, however, faithful to his vow. At length liberty was given him by the civil authorities to continue his religious meetings under certain regulations. His master gave him the use of his barn at Brampton, three miles from Savannah, where he preached for two years with little interruption. In 1792 the church began the erection of a place of worship. The city gave the lot for the purpose. This lot has remained in the possession of the church up to the present time.

1753. Lemuel Haynes, revolutionary soldier and first Colored Congregational minister. Born in West Hartford, Connecticut. In 1775 Haynes joined the colonial army and served through the war. He had an exceptionally good education. In 1785 became pastor of a white congregation at Torrington, Connecticut; 1818 he went to Manchester, New Hampshire, and there made himself famous. He is most widely known for his sermon against "Universalism," which he preached against Hosea Ballou. This sermon created a great impression. It was published and widely circulated in the United States and Europe. He died at Granville, Connecticut, 1832.

1810. Harry Hosier. First American Negro preacher in the Methodist Church. He was a companion of Bishop Thomas Coke whom he accompanied on most of his travels in the United States. Hosier was one of the most notable characters of his day. He was pronounced by some to be the greatest orator in America at that time. In his travels he shared the pulpits of the white ministers whom he accompanied, and seems to have excelled them all in popularity. Bishop Asbury said that the best way to get a large congregation was to announce that Hosier was going to preach. He died in Philadelphia in 1810.

1791. Richard Allen, born a slave in Philadelphia, February 14, 1760, he purchased his freedom, and became an itinerant Methodist preacher. During all this time he worked as a common laborer or at whatever came to hand. During the Revolutionary War he was employed as a teamster, hauling salt. Allen, with many other Negroes, was a member of St. George's Methodist Episcopal Church in Philadelphia. A movement began to force the Negroes into the galleries. When on a Sunday morning, an attempt was made to move Allen and Absalom Jones to the gallery, the colored portion of the congregation rebelled, and on April 17, 1787, under the leadership of Allen and Jones, formed the Free African Society. This Society "formed without regard to religious tenets," and "in order to support one another in sickness and for the benefit of their widows and fatherless children," prepared the way for the African Methodist Episcopal denomination, and the St. Thomas Episcopal Church. In September, 1787, Allen with a few followers, started the Independent African Church. When this church voted itself to affiliate itself with the Episcopal Church, Allen remained a Methodist and in 1791 purchased a lot for a church. In 1794 Bethel church was erected. 1816, Allen was ordained the first bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. Died March 26, 1831.

1787. Absalom Jones ordained a deacon in the Protestant Episcopal Church, First Negro in the United States to be ordained, in any denomination the the ministry. Like Richard Allen, Jones was a leader of the colored people of Philadelphia. He had been a slave and purchased his freedom. He was a member of St. George's Methodist Episcopal Church, and withdrew with Richard Allen and jointly with him founded the Free African Society and the Independent African Church. He was the first Negro to be ordained to the ministry of the Episcopal Church.

1801. John Chavis commissioned by the Presbyterian General Assembly as a missionary to the Negroes. He was the first Negro in the Presbyterian Church to be prepared for Christian leadership. And the first Negro Home Missionary in that church. He was also a prominent teacher of the children of wealthy white families in North Carolina. Chavis is said to have been born in Granville County, North Carolina. "The sons of his old neighbors in that county say that he was born in Haiti, and in his young manhood lived in Jamaica." In 1832, he said to himself, "if I am black I am a free-born American and Revolutionary soldier." The first authentic information concerning him is found in the acts and proceedings of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church for 1801. A resolution therein says that Mr. John Chavis, a black man of prudence and piety, who had been educated and licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Lexington in Virginia, be employed among people of his color until the meeting of the next General Assembly." Chavis appears to have been employed principally in Virginia and North Carolina as a missionary for from two to nine months each year until 1807. In 1809, he was received as a licentiate by the Orange Presbytery in North Carolina. For the next twenty years he appears to have preached pretty regularly in Granville, Wake and Orange Counties. The Nat Turner Insurrection, in August, 1831, caused the North Carolina Legislature in 1832 to pass an act silencing all colored preachers. It was not, however, as a preacher, but as a teacher of white boys and apparently white girls also, that Chavis is best remem ed in North Carolina. The greater part of the time after he was silenced as a preacher and probably for a large part of the time from his return to North Carolina until his death in 1838, he conducted a private school in Wake County and also probably in Chatham, Orange and Granville Counties. Some of his pupils later became distinguished. Among these were Charles Manly, governor of North Carolina; Abram Rencher, Minister to Portugal and a Governor of New Mexico; James H.Horner, founder of the Horner School; and Priestly H. Mangum, brother of Senator Mangum and himself a lawyer of distinction.

1810. John Gloucester. First Negro pastor of a Presbyterian church in America; was made pastor of a colored Presbyterian church in Philadelphia. He was born a slave in Tennessee in 1776, and died in Philadelphia, 1822. Rev. Gideon Blackburn, of Tennessee, noting Gloucester's Christian zeal, purchased him for a body servant, and is said to have at once placed the slave under a course of instruction in his own home. Gloucester exercised his gifts in preaching among his own people and developed a wonderful power,

In 1806 Rev. Blackburn came to Philadelphia on a visit and brought his slave with him. The Rev. Archibald Alexander, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church of Philadelphia, was endeavoring to establish a mission work among the colored people and sought Gloucester's services. His master immediately set him free to engage in this work. When he was brought before the Philadelphia Presbytery for examination, it was found that he lacked the required course of study. He was sent back to the Union Presbytery of Tennessee for further training. In 1810 he returned to Philadelphia, and took charge of the African Presbyterian church which had been established in 1807. (See reference to African Presbyterian Church.) He continued as the pastor of this church until his death.

1819. John Stewart, founder of Mission work in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was born in Powhatan County, Virginia in 1784. At 35 he was leading a dissolute life in Marietta, Ohio. Here he was converted and felt a call to carry the gospel to the Indians. He began in 1819 to preach to the Wyandot Indians at Upper Sandusky, Ohio. This was the beginning of Mission work by the Methodist Church. On October 16, 1916, a monument to his memory was unveiled at Upper Sandusky. The inscription reads: "John Stewart, Apostle of the Wyandot Indians, Father Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church." In 1919 the Methodist Church North and South observed the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Methodist Missions, by raising in a Mission Centenary Celebration millions of dollars for Mission work.

1790. Henry Evans, about this time founded a Methodist church in Fayetteville, North Carolina. He was a free born Negro from Virginia. While on his way to Charleston, South Carolina, to practice the trade of shoe-making Evans chanced to stop at Fayetteville. He was licensed a local Methodist preacher. He was so impressed with the condition of the colored people that he decided to stop and labor among them. This he did, working at his trade during the week, and preaching on Sunday. The town council ordered him to stop preaching. The meetings were held in secret. At length the white people became interested in the meetings and began to attend them, and a regular Methodist church was established. Although a white minister was in the course of time sent to take charge of the congregation, Evans was not displaced. A room was built for him in the church, and there he remained until his death in 1810.

1792. Jack, of Virginia, a famous ante-bellum Negro preacher, popularly known as "Uncle Jack." Was recognized by the whites as a powerful expounder of the Christian doctrine. He was a full-blooded African and was licensed to preach in the Baptist Church. "Uncle Jack" preached from plantation to plantation. The white people raised a subscription, purchased his freedom, gave him a home and a small tract of land for his support. He had great influence over blacks and whites. Was instrumental in the conversion of many white persons. He preached for over forty years.

1805. Joseph Willis, in Bayou Chicot District, Louisiana, organized the first Baptist church west of the Mississippi. Willis was born in South Carolina in 1762, probably free, and obtained a fair English education. He appeared in Southwest Mississippi in 1798. In 1804 he came into Louisiana; 1812 the Mississippi Association sent two ministers to ordain him. He organized the Louisiana Baptist Association and was elected its Moderator in 1837. He died September 15, 1854.

1844. Daniel A. Payne. Born February 24, 1811; died, 1892. Established Union Seminary near Columbus, Ohio. It was organized on the Manual training plan. Union Seminary contributed largely to the founding of Wilberforce University with which it was consolidated in 1863. Bishop Payne was mainly responsible for Wilberforce University becoming the property of the African Methodist Episcopal denomination.

1812. John Jasper, famous Negro preacher, for sixty years in and around Richmond. He became a national character by his efforts to prove by the Bible that the sun moves. He died in 1899. Jasper was greatly admired by all for his piety and sincerity. When he died the Richmond Dispatch gave much space to a discussion of his virtues. Rev. William E. Hatcher, a prominent white minister, who was the pastor of a church in Richmond, has recently written a life of John Jasper.

1818. Alexander Crummell, eminent colored Episcopal minister, born in New York City, 1818, died, 1898. Alexander Crummell's father was a native of Gold Coast, Africa. Mr. Crummell graduated at Cambridge University, England, and then went as a missionary to Africa. For a time he was a professor in the Liberian College. After a time he returned to the United States, and for twenty-two years was rector of St. Luke's church, Washington, D. C. He is the author of several books dealing with the race problem, and assisted in founding the Negro American Academy.

1828. Caesar Blackwell. A slave of Lowndes County, Alabama. Said to have been a full-blooded African. He was a gifted preacher. Bought by the Baptist Association of that State, for $1,000. He was not set free, but James McLemore was appointed his guardian. He was ordained and licensed to preach. He is reported to have visited the churches in company with the white preachers and to have occupied the pulpits with them. He aided and assisted the white preachers in their work.

"Dock Phillips," The Alabama Baptist Association endeavored to buy him of his master, John Phillips of Cotton Valley, Macon County, Alabama. "Dock," however, was so devoted to his master that he refused to be sold, but continued preaching the remainder of his life. He enjoyed the universal confidence and esteem of the whites.

1866. John W. Roberts, first Negro Missionary, Bishop in the Methodist Episcopal church. Born in Petersburg, Virginia, September 8, 1812. Entered the ministry in Liberia in 1838. He was elected a bishop by the Liberian Conference in 1866 and was consecrated in New York. He was a presiding elder at the time of his election. He was the second man to be elected a Missionary bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died in Liberia January 30, 1875, and was buried at Monrovia.

1837. Amanda Smith. Distinguished as an evangelist of the Methodist Episcopal Church. She was born a slave in Maryland in 1837, died, February 24, 1915. Her father by working extra at night and other times, was able to buy himself and family and move to Pennsylvania. "Amanda taught herself to read by cutting out large letters from newspapers, laying them on the window sill and getting her mother to make them into words." In an autobiography, "Amanda Smith's Own Story," an extended sketch of her evangelical labors are given. It was at the great camp meetings in the seventies in Ohio and Illionis, that she became famous. Her evangelical labors extended to Africa, India, England and Scotland.

DENOMINATIONAL STATISTICS.

According to data on Negro Churches furnished by the Census Bureau and reports direct from the denominations there are in the United States 45,000 Churches, 4,800,000 Communicants, 46,000 Sunday Schools and 2,250,000 Sunday School Scholars. The value of church property in the hands of Negroes according to these reports is $87,208,377.

The Negro churches are contributing every year over $250,000 for home mission work. They are supporting over 200 home missionaries and giving aid to more than 350 needy churches.

Negro churches are contributing annually over $150,000 to foreign mission work.

The Negro Baptists through the National Baptist Convention organized a Foreign Mission Board in 1880. Missionary work is carried on in Central, South and West Africa. They have in the foreign mission field 80 stations, 13 missionaries and 96 native helpers, 86 organized churches, 19,812 members, and 52 schools with 15,311 pupils.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church established foreign mission work in 1844. This denomination now has two bishops stationed in Africa. The work of the denomination outside of the United States is carried on in Canada; in the West Indies; in South America; in Dutch and British Guiana; in Africa; Liberia, Sierra Leone, West Africa, the Transvaal, Orange Free States, Natal and Cape Town, South Africa. The denomination has in the foreign field 156 stations, 4 missionaries, 152 native helpers, 121 churches, with some 29,000 members.

The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church organized its foreign mission work in 1892, and carries on work in South America; in Liberia; and in the Gold Coast Colony, West Africa. It has in the foreign mission field 52 stations, 4 missionaries, 60 native helpers and 52 churches with some 7000 members.

NEGRO PRIESTS IN THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

Father Augustus Tolton was the first colored priest appointed in the United States. He was ordained in the Propaganda at Rome, in 1888. He was pastor of St. Monica's church, Chicago, Illinois, until his death in 1902.

There are at present four colored priests in the United States.

Rev. Charles Randolph Uncles was ordained by His Eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, in the Baltimore Cathedral, 1891. Since his ordination he has been a professor in the Epiphany Apostolic College, Walbrook, Baltimore, Md.

Rev. John H. Dorsey, Baltimore, Maryland, was ordained by Cardinal Gibbons in the Baltimore Cathedral in 1902. He was for a time teacher and assistant principal in the St. Joseph College for Negro catechists at Montgomery, Alabama. He is now pastor of St. Monica, Baltimore.

Rev. Joseph J. Plantvigne was ordained in 1907 by Rt. Rev. Bishop

Curtis in the Chapel of St. Joseph's Seminary, Baltimore, Maryland. In 1909 he was appointed assistant to the Rev. William Dunn of St. Francis Xavier's Church, Baltimore, Maryland. He died January 27, 1913.

Rev. Joseph Burgess was ordained at Paris, France, in 1907. He is at present a professor in the Apostolic College of his Congregation at Cornwells, Pennsylvania.

Rev. Stephen Louis Theobold was ordained at St. Paul's Seminary, St. Paul, Minnesota, in June, 1910.

NEGRO PRIEST IN THE GREEK CATHOLIC CHURCH

Robert Morgan, Rev. Father Rapheal, of the Order of the Cross of Golgotha, is a priest of the Russo-Greek Church.

Father Rapheal was born in Jamaica and was brought up in the Anglican Church. He was educated at Fourah Bay College, Sierra Leone. He was for a time a missionary in Liberia. He then studied at St. Aiden's College, Birkenhead, and King's College, London. After being ordained he came to the United States and took charge of an Episcopal mission at Wilmington, Delaware. After a time he came to believe in the dogmas of the Greek Church and severed his connection with the Episcopal Church. About six years ago he went to Constantinople and was baptized and ordained a sub-deacon and priest and was made a missionary to the colored people of the United States. His headquarters are in Philadelphia.

NEGRO RELIGIOUS SISTERHOODS AND BROTHERHOODS

The Oblates of Providence.—Founded in Baltimore, July 2, 1829 by Father Joubert, a Sulpician priest.

Father Joubert called together four young colored women, Elizabeth Lange, Rosa Boegus, Magdalen Balas, and Teresa Duchemin. The work outlined for the sisters was to conduct schools for colored girls, provide for orphans and seek the erring. They founded St. Francis Academy, Baltimore. The Oblates of Providence have grown in numbers. Missions have been established in Washington, D. C.; St. Louis, Mo.; Leavenworth, Kans.; Havana, Cuba; and Old Providence and Catania, two islands off the coast of Central America. About forty sisters remain at the mother house in Baltimore.

Congregation of the Sisters of the Holy Family—Founded at New Orleans, November 21, 1842, by Harriet Delisle, Juliette Gaudin, Josephine Charles, and a Miss Alicot, "free women of color," under the supervision of Father Rousillon, Vicar General.

Miss Delisle and Miss Charles were native born, Miss Gaudin was from Cuba, and Miss Alicot from France. They were wealthy. A part of their wealth had been inherited and a part they had earned. The original purpose of the order was "to teach the catechism to young and old women, to prepare them for their first communion." The work, however, has greatly broadened. In 1848 a home for aged and infirm women was established. In 1863 an addition was made for men. Next, the asylum of St. John Berchman, the patron of the Order was opened for girls. An academy for girls and an asylum for boys were also established. Five day schools were also conducted for boys and girls. Houses have been established in Opelousas, Donaldsonville, and Baton Rouge. Asylums and schools are conducted at more than thirty points in the South. The Mother House of the Congregation of the Holy Family, an extensive brick building, occupies the site of the Old Orleans Theatre, famous before the War as the scene of the quadroon balls.

Knights of Peter Claver.—This association was organized at Mobile, Ala., Nov. 7, 1909. The organizers were seven in number; three whites and four colored. The whites were: Rev. Conrad F. Rebeshier, Mobile, Rev. Samuel J. Kelly, Biloxi, Miss., and Joseph P. Van Baast, Mobile. The colored were: Gilbert Faustina, Mobile; Frank Collins, Mobile; Frank Tremier, Mobile; and Rev. John H. Dorsey, Baltimore.

The association has a National Council and subordinate or local councils. The National Council, which meets annually, at a designated place on the Third Tuesday in August is composed of the incorporators of the Association, the officers of the National Council, the Grand Knight of each subordinate Council and past Supreme Knights of the order; subordinate councils are according to numbers, allowed to send from one to three delegates to the National Council's Annual Meeting.

The National officers of the order are:

Supreme Knight, Gilbert Faustina, 167 Rylands Lane, Mobile, Alabama.
Deputy Supreme Knight, Oscar Figaro, Lafayette, La.
National Secretary, Joseph J. Graves, Bay Saint Louis, Miss.
National Treasurer, John D. McCartey, 1808 Iberville St., New Orleans.
National Chaplain, Rev. John H. Dorsey, Box 1111, Baltimore, Md.
National Physician, Dr. A. J. Ambrey, New Orleans.

Members of National Board of Directors are:

T. Wallace Landsey, Baltimore, Maryland.
Albert Lallande, Mobile, Alabama.
Albert Johnson, Biloxi, Miss.
L. A. Israel, Plaquemine, La.
J. R. Cochran, Galveston, Tex.

Two classes of members, insured and associate, belong to the order. The insured receive sick and death benefits, which are derived from monthly dues. The Order now has 800 members and nineteen subordinate councils.

Saint Benedict, The Moor.—Negro Saint of the Catholic Church. Born at San Philadelphia or San Fradella a village of the Diocese of Messina in Sicily in 1526; died April 4, 1589.

The parents of Saint Benedict were slaves from Ethiopia. On account of their fruitfulness their master freed Benedict, the first-born child. From his earliest years Benedict was very religious and while still very young he joined a newly formed association of hermits. When Pope Pius IV dissolved this association, Benedict, called from his origin Aethiops or Niger, entered the Reformed Recollects of the Franciscan Order. Owing to his virtues he was made superior of the monastery of Santa Maria de Jesus at Palermo three years after his entrance, although he was only a lay brother. He reformed the monastery and ruled it with great success until his death. He was pronounced Blessed in 1743 and was canonized in 1807. His feast is celebrated April the third.

MARTYRS OF UGANDA RAISED TO SAINTHOOD.

On May 13 and 15, 1920, under the observance of a most solemn ritual, Pope Benedict XV on those days proclaimed to the assembled congregation and to the world that the 22 Martyrs of Uganda had been raised to the ranks of the Blessed. These young men were pages to King Mtanga. Because of their firm refusal to deny Christ and to do homage to the fetishes of their pagan brethren, 13 of their number were burned to death and 9 suffered martyrdom in various ways. The event transpired in 1886.

The solemn ceremonies which marked the beatification of these African youths in recognition of their Christian fortitude were prefaced by a most careful investigation into all the circumstances connected with their martyrdom. The Uganda martyrs were honored simultaneously with Joan of Arc, The Maid of Orleans, whose veneration the world over as the valiant defender of France in centuries past is as much a matter of history as were her courageous actions and ignominious death under circumstances providing her Sainthood. It is also a noteworthy fact that a number of French nuns were beatified on the same occasion, having died as martyrs during the Great French Revolution.

CATHOLIC NEGRO WORK

Though the Catholic priests and brotherhoods labored among the Negro slaves from their first arrival in this country until the Emancipation, yet the work of the Catholic Church may be said to have only begun in earnest when the Church of St. Francis Xavier, in Baltimore, Md., in 1871, was placed in charge of the Fathers of the American Branch of the Society of St. Joseph. However, there were isolated attempts before this and scattered parish organizations throughout the country, but when Monsignor, afterwards Cardinal, Vaughn, the founder of the Missionary Society whose members are commonly known as Josephites, visited this country and was afterwards allowed to send four priests of his community to devote their entire attention to Negro religious work the interest of the Catholics of the United States began to be directed to the work as never before. The prelates of the Council of Baltimore, in 1884, awakened new enthusiasm by decreeing that a collection should be taken up, and instruction on race relationships be given, in all the Catholic churches of the United States on the first Sunday of Lent.

In 1907 there was established a Board of Archbishops who should have general charge of this branch of Catholic missionary activity. Incorporated under the laws of Tennessee it is known as "The Catholic Board for Mission Work among the Colored People." The Director General is Rt. Rev. Mgr. John E. Burke, of New York City, who is assisted by five other priests—Rev. D. J. Bustin, LL. D., Rev. James J. Mulholland, Rev. J. Benedict Leonard, all of Scranton, Pa.; Rev. Thos. F. McBride, of Albany, N. Y., Rev. Edward H. Kelly, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and by Mr. Elmo M. Anderson (colored) of Pittsburgh, Pa., as Business Manager.

Since the establishment of this Board, sixty-nine new mission centres have been started in the South. Over eighteen thousand have been added to the list of children attending the colored parochial schools, making the total emrollment over twenty-two thousand. The Board pays the salaries of one hundred and seventy-two teachers who are engaged exclusively in colored missionary work, making a total appropriation to Negro education of fifty thousand dollars annually. Many of these schools have a complete standard high-school course, the most noted being Xavier University of New Orleans, La., with 493 students, under the care of Mother Katherine Drexel and the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament. Most of them have added, or are preparing to add, a first and second year high school course to their already established grammar school.

In September, 1920, at the suggestion of Pope Benedict XV., the Fathers of the Divine Word at Greenville, Miss., opened the first ecclesiastical seminary in the United States to educate and train colored boys for the priesthood, thus laying the foundation for a native Catholic Colored Priesthood in the United States.

In June, 1921, there was established at New Orleans, La., the first Summer Normal School for colored Sisters, the faculty being composed of the Sisters of Charity of Seton Hill College, Greensburg, Pennsylvania. Extension work is carried on for colored Sisters through Seton Hill College.

A monthly magazine "Our Colored Missions," is published by the Board.

At present there are 175 priests devoting themselves exclusively to the missions among the colored people and fifty-five who have schools for colored attached to white churches, making a total of 230.

NATIONAL CATHOLIC ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF THE COLORED PEOPLE.

Its purpose is to coordinate the efforts of the various groups of men and women of the Catholic church laboring for the religious, the intellectual and industrial development of the colored people. Its object is to stimulate interest among the field workers, to broaden the sympathies and enlist the co-operation of Catholics everywhere for this work, to standardize educational methods to have a uniform system of parochial teaching; and to emphasize the character and enlarge the scope of our industrial work.

THE SOCIETY OF THE DIVINE WORD.

The Society of the Divine Word whose American Mother-House is at Techny, Illinois has established centres for the education of the Negro in the cities of Jackson, Meridian, Vicksburg and Greenville, Miss., and in Little Rock, Ark. In all of these so called missions, religious services are conducted, and instruction is given in elementary and high school branches. There are engaged in the work five Priests and thirty Sisters. Names of institutions: Jackson, Miss., Holy Ghost Institute, Rev. Fr. Kronemeyer, Rector; Meridian, Miss., St. Joseph's Institute, Rev. Cos Schneider, Rector; Vicksburg, Miss., Rev. J. Hoenderop, Rector; Greenville, Miss., Sacred Heart Institute, Rev. M. Christman, Rector; Bay Saint Louis, Miss., St. Francis' Institute, Rev. P. A. Heick, Rector; Little Rock, Ark., St. Bartholomew's Institute, Rev. J. J. Steinhauer, Rector. Total number of pupils in all institutes, 1,600.

At Greenville, Mississippi, the Society of the Divine Word has opened a seminary for the education of Colored Catholic Priests. Last year the number of students was 14, but about 12 more applications will bring this year's enrollment to at least 25. Rev. P. M. Christman is President of the Seminary and the Fathers Frances Baltes, Jos. Jacobs and Charles Wolf are Professors.

CONGREGATION OF THE SISTERS OF THE BLESSED SACRAMENT FOR INDIANS AND COLORED PEOPLE

"The Congregation of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Colored people was organized in the year 1889 for the evangelization of the Colored and Indian races. Its conception originated in the noble mind of Right Reverend James O'Connor, Bishop of Omaha, at one time pastor of St. Dominic's Church, Holmesburg. To him the dire need of the Indian and the Negro made strong appeal, and in complete harmony with his designs for their intellectual, moral and physical regeneration, he found a generous co-operator in Miss Katherine M. Drexel, of Philadelphia, who, in the wealth which the heavenly Father had placed at her disposal, saw only a treasure confided to her care, to be used for the uplifting of her fellow-man.

In May 1890, while Miss Drexel was a member of the Novitiate of the Convent of Mercy, Pittsburgh, whither she had gone to prepare for religious professions, Bishop O'Connor died, and the work was placed under the kindly care of Most Reverend Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia. In February 1891, Miss Drexel received the name of Mother Mary Katherine and was appointed by the Most Reverend Archbishop, superioress of the young community. In July of the same year, the cornerstone of the Motherhouse at Cornwells Heights, Pennsylvania was laid.

The work of this Institute embraces the charge of boarding schools, day schools, orphanages, nursing, visitation of the sick, and the instruction of adults in the principles of Christian Doctrine, Branch houses have been established in different parts of the country. The approximate enrollment of pupils in their missions among the Colored people of New Orleans is over 2,000, in New York City about 600, in Philadelphia about 400, while in Nashville, Tenn.; Rock Castle, Virginia, Cincinnati, Ohio, Columbus, Ohio; Chicago, Illinois; Beaumont, Texas; Montgomery, Ala.; New Iberia, Louisiana; St. Louis, Missouri; Biloxi, Miss.; Atlanta, Ga.;

and Macon, Ga., there is an average enrollment of from 200 to 250 pupils. In Boston, a mission has been established for the purpose of doing settlement work, and, the visitation list numbers about 2,000. In addition to the missions established by the Congregation itself, many other works among the Colored people owe their origin to the generosity of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament, for example, Meridian, Jackson and Vicksburg, Mississippi; Tuscaloosa, Mobile and Montgomery, Alabama; San Antonio, Texas, and numerous other places throughout the Union.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION WORK AMONG NEGROES.

The first Colored Young Men's Christian Association was organized in Washington, D. C., 1853. Anthony Bowen, colored, was the first president. He worked in the Patent Office. The second to be organized was in Charleston, South Carolina in April, 1866, and the third in New York City, February, 1867.

The first colored student association was organized at Howard University in 1869. E. V. C. Eato, president of the New York City Branch, who attended the Montreal Convention in 1867 was the first colored delegate to attend an international Y. M. C. A. Convention. In 1876 at the Toronto Convention, General George D. Johnston, an ex-Confederate soldier, was appointed the first secretary of the colored associations.

Henry Edwards Brown, founder of Talladega College, was the second traveling secretary of the International Committee in its work among colored men. He served the committee from 1879 to 1890 having resigned for this purpose the presidency of Talladega College, which he founded. William A. Hunton was the first colored man to enter the secretaryship of the Young Men's Christian Association work. In January, 1888, he was appointed the General Secretary of the Colored Association in Norfolk, Virginia. In 1890 he succeeded Mr. Brown as an International Secretary. The first students' Conference for the Colored Men's Department of the Young Men's Christian Association was held at King's Mountain, N. C., May 24-June 2, 1912.

Max Yergan, in care of Y. M. C. A., Cape Town, South Africa.

There are two colored men who are members of the International Executive Committee of the Y. M. C. A. They are, Robert R. Moton, Principal of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., and Robert E. Jones, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 631 Baronne Street, New Orleans, La.

There are associations organized in 110 Negro educational institutions. These include practically all of the more important boarding schools. Out of an enrollment of 10,000 young men in these institutions, 5,100 are members of the Young Men's Christian Association. There are sixty Negro city associations scattered over thirty States. The first building for a student association was dedicated at Hampton Institute, February 2, 1913.

The Y. M. C. A. work has been established in a number of places in connection with large corporate industries in which numbers of Negroes are employed The company usually puts up the building and pays the secretary. The running expenses are paid out of annual and monthly dues. Such work has been established among the Negro miners at Buxton, Ia., Benham, Ky., and Birmingham, Ala., and among the 5,000 Negro employees of the Newport News (Va.) Shipbuilding Company.

During the World War there were 350 Colored secretaries serving troops in 45 camps, 7 training schools and 3 forts in America; 58 colored secretaries served overseas; and 6 of these served in East Africa. There were also 3 Educational Specialists and 18 women canteen workers.

In recent years there has been great development in the city section of the work. The gifts of large sums by Mr. George Foster Peabody, Mr. John D. Rockefeller and the interest and support of ex-President Roosevelt and ex-President Taft, were important features in this development. The greatest factor, however, was the gift of Mr. Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago.

Rosenwald Aid To Negro Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Julius Rosenwald in 1910 offered through the Chicago Y. M. C. A. to give $25,000 toward the cost of a Negro Y. M. C. A. building for men and boys in any city of the United States, which by popular subscription would raise $75,000 additional. This assured a building to cost complete a minimum of $100,000. He recognized the great need in each community with a large Negro population of a place where recreational and educational facilities could be had along with restaurant and dormitory service. He knew the Negroes unaided could not furnish the funds. He felt it was the duty and privilege of white people to help them. He believed money for the buildings would be provided. He had confidence that a better racial understanding would result from white and colored people working side by side in the money raising campaigns and in the subsequent construction and operating periods. Mr. Rosenwald's expectations were more than realized. Thirteen cities complied with his conditions: Atlanta, Baltimore, Brooklyn, Chicago, Cincinnati, Columbus, Indianapolis, Kansas City, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, St. Louis and Washington. With the exception of Pittsburgh, the buildings have been erected.

The 1910 offer resulted in an expenditure of two million one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for buildings serving a Negro population of nearly one million. The percentages of cost contributed were: by whites 49 per cent, by Negroes 15 per cent, by Mr Rosenwald 16 per cent and other sources, like the sale of property previously owned, 20 per cent.

Mr. W. J. Parker, business manager of the Chicago Y. M. C. A., has prepared a statistical and financial table of information about the twelve Negro "Y" buildings now in operation. It is printed herewith.

A survey was made in 1920 of the condition and service of the twelve buildings. The encouraging results shown, the war time migration of Southern Negroes into industrial centers and the increase in race friction induced Mr. Rosenwald to make a second offer. It was reported to him that possibly eleven additional cities might undertake campaigns for Negro "Y's." Therefore, July 6, 1920, he made his second offer, again through the Chicago Y. M. C. A., to contribute $25,000 to any city raising not less than $125,000. Qualification must be made within two years. Owing to excessive building cost and adverse business conditions no city had qualified up to the end of 1921. But the Chicago Y. M. C. A., reported it is likely that Detroit, Jersey City and Dayton would qualify within the time limit. A number of other cities hoped to qualify, but their plans were indefinite.

In 1918 Mr. Rosenwald contributed $25,000 toward the $246,000 colored Y. W. C. A., building in New York. In 1920 he offered $25,000 toward a colored Y. W. C. A. building in Philadelphia estimated to cost $150,000.

A number of Negroes have subscribed considerable amounts, Henry W. Chase, a laborer in the Government Printing Office at Washington, was the first Negro to contribute the sum of $500 towards the Y. M. C. A. work. The following persons contributed $1,000: James M. Tilgham, an employee of the Chicago Telephone Company, Thomas Lassoter, who conducts a rolling chair and postal card business on the Board Walk at Atlantic City; Henry W. Troy, a mail carrier, Los Angeles; E. P. Roberts, physician, New York; Squire Garnett, butler, New York, to the Young Women's Christian Association; Wm. Driskell, insurance Atlanta; Mrs. C. J. Walker, business woman, Indianapolis; Dr. R. H. Boyd, publisher, Nashville; Rev. H. Allen Boyd, publisher, Nashville; Rev. Preston Taylor and Rev. William Beckham, Nashville; A. F. Herndon, business man, Atlanta, Ga.; F. L. Williams, Principal High School; W. C. Gordon, undertaker, and W. L. Perry, physician, St. Louis. The largest single gifts were $1,200 by Mrs. Daisy Merchant, business woman, Cincinnati, $2,500 by David T. Howard, undertaker, Atlanta, and $5,000 by Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Malone, St. Louis.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION WORK AMONG NEGROES.

The history of Association effort among colored women under its present policy dates back fifteen years, but the history of Association beginnings among them extends over a quarter of a century. Twenty-five years ago there were affiliated with the American Committee of Young Women's Christian Association seven Colored student Associations. Associations at Claffin, Straight, Tougaloo Universities, Spelman Seminary, and A. and M. College of Alabama became affiliated in the early nineties, with what was then the National Association of the Young Women's Christian Associations. There are evidences of city Associations for Colored women at a much earlier period. We hear of efforts at Louisville, Memphis, Columbus, Ga., and other points. Dr. Caroline Anderson, the well-known daughter of William Still of underground railway fame, recounts the activities of a flourishing colored Association in Philadelphia in the early seventies.

When the National Board was formed in 1907, Mrs. Addie W. Hunton was appointed to spend the winter of 1907-08 investigating the possibilities for Association work among Colored women. She founded 14 student Associations and 4 City Associations—New York City, Brooklyn Baltimore and Washington. In 1908 Miss Elizabeth Ross was appointed to be special worker for the National Board among Colored students. Miss Ross was succeeded in 1910 by Miss Cecelia Holloway, and Miss Holloway in 1912 by Miss Josephine Pinyon. In 1910 Mrs. Elizabeth Ross Haynes and Mrs. Hunton began a systematic and intensive development of City Association work among Colored women, and the attempt was made to place trained secretaries in local associations. In 1918, Miss Eva D. Bowles was appointed by the National Board to have special supervision of City work.

Work Under The War Work Council.

For the protection of the colored girl in and about camps and cantonments and for the promotion of health and recreation activities among them, there were established 49 centers with 86 local workers, 17 hostess houses with staffs of capable colored women who ministered to the friends and relatives of colored soldiers.

Three colored women physicians were employed to give intimate talks to girls and women on social and sex problems. They covered an enormous territory both in cities and schools.

A $200,000 building was erected in Washington, D. C. In Little Rock, Arkansas a $48,000 recreation center was built. Sums of money were given to many other cities to make their buildings adequate to meet the great expansion of work.

Field work.

Colored work is now to be found in all of the 11 fields. There are three colored secretaries who are field secretaries. In two of the Southern fields the field Committees have organized Committees on colored work composed of an equal number of white and colored women. In one of the Northern fields there are two colored women sitting on special Committees of the field Committee.

City Work.

Before the war there was 1 National worker, 16 local centers with 9 paid workers. There are now 14 National secretaries with 101 local workers.

In the city work great emphasis is placed upon the girl reserve program. There are 6,879 girl reserves registered at headquarters.

Much effort is made to reach the girl who works in factory and at house work. Most cordially do all girls and women respond to the health and religious education programs and for the girl without friends or home, great care is taken in proper housing either in the Association building of through rooms registry.

The relationship is growing between our branches and the central association. The Committee on Colored Work is helping toward better understanding. Colored women are sitting on the Boards of Directors in the following cities: New York City, Philadelphia, Detroit, Jersey City, Newark, Cincinnati and Chicago

Student Work.

The Student work includes organizations in 100 schools covering a territory of 22 States; 58 of the Student Associations are affiliated; 42 unaffiliated. In the fall of 1920 there were 9,555 members of Student Associations; 15,618 girls have been reached through these 100 schools.

The first Student conference was held at Atlanta, Georgia, May 1914. Since then there have been 8 Student conferences. From 1916 through 1919 one each year; 1920-1921, two a year. Since the country has been divided for the convenience of the schools, one for the Southwest and one for the Southeast, a great many girls have been reached. 175 in 1920 and 174 in 1921, making a large increase over the number of girls and schools covered when there was only one Student Conference held a year.

National Training School.

The challenge which service in the hostess houses and the recreation centers offered drew from all walks of life the very best of leadership among colored women. Some of these were loaned to us from other professions. Many of these women were able to remain with us after the war and form now a big part of our secretarial staff all over the country. These women were all trained and graduates of our best schools, both North and South. 32 have taken the regular training courses and 74 have attended 4 extension training courses.

In the summer training course of 1921, 3 colored students were housed in the National Training School.

The 1921 regular Training School session finds for the first time in the Association history, a colored secretary scheduled for the regular year's training and living in the National Training School Building.

The National Board is preparing our young women for the very real profession of an Association secretary. It is a profession that demands thorough preparation, sincere consecration, deep faith in our girlhood and young womanhood and gives in return the privilege of directing and developing the future leadership of our race.

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION WORK AMONG COLORED PEOPLE.

National Field Worker, Mrs. Violet Hill Whyte, 663 George St., Baltimore, Md.

Work among colored people became a separate department in 1881, with Mrs. Jane M. Kenney, of Michigan, as superintendent. Mrs. Frances E. Harper, of Pennsylvania, became superintendent in 1883, and continued to fill the position until 1890. In 1891 Mrs. J. E. Ray, of North Carolina, was a committee on "Home and Foreign Missionary Work For Colored People." In 1895, Mrs. Lucy Thurman, of Michigan, became superintendent of the colored work. She continued in this position until 1908, when she was succeeded by Mrs. Eliza E. Peterson.

The W. C. T. U. work among colored people is carried on in Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, District of Columbia, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, New York, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South

Carclina, Tennessee, Texas, and West Virginia. The colored women are organized into local unions, and in the District of Columbia, Louisiana, Arkansas, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and West Virginia, they have separate State organizations with their own State officers. Many colored women belong to mixed unions. Altogether, the colored membership in the W. C. T. U. is about 6,000.

WORK OF THE AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY AMONG NEGROES.

This society has carried on such work since emancipation. During the past year the society maintained Sunday School workers among colored people in Alabama, Texas and Virginia. These workers held Sunday School Conventions, Bible Institutes and delivered addresses to Sunday Schools and Churches. They visited the past year over 300 Sunday Schools and Churches, organizing and leading Teacher Training Classes and B. Y. P. U.'s.

The names of these workers and their fields are as follows:

D. A. Scott, D. D., Austin, Texas, State Sunday School Missionary for Texas; L. W. Calloway, D. D., Selma, Ala., State Sunday School Missionary for Alabama; Rev. T. C. Walker, Gloucester, Va., State Sunday School Missionary for Virginia.

THE SALVATION ARMY AND THE NEGRO.

The Salvation Army is making an attempt to reach the Negro mainly through Negroes who are being trained in the Salvation Army Workers' Schools in New York City, Chicago and San Francisco. Only a few Negroes thus far have gone through these schools. As they finish, they are sent into the South. At present, work is being conducted exclusively among Negroes in Washington, D. C., Richmond, Va., Charleston, S. C., New York City, Norfolk, Va., Philadelphia, Pa., and Roanoke, Va.

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY WORK AMONG NEGROES.

The work of the American Bible Society among Negroes was established in 1901 and is carried on chiefly in the Southern states. An average of over 30,000 copies of the Bible are now thus distributed annually and during the 21 years that the work has been carried over 650,000 volumes of scripture by this means have been placed in the hands of Negroes. The director of this work whose title is, "Agency Secretary," is J. P. Wragg, D. D., Bible House, Astor Place, New York City.

The field is divided into 5 sub-agencies or districts as follows: The Atlanta, (Ga.) Sub-agency, Reverend H. W. B. Wilson, in charge; the Cleveland, (Ohio) Sub-agency, Reverend S. A. Lucas, in charge; the Houston (Tex.) Sub-agency, Reverend M. L. Vaughters in charge; the Charlotte (N. C.) Sub-agency, D. H. Sanson, jr., in charge; and the Memphis, (Tenn.) Sub-agency, Reverend M. J. Sherard, in charge.

WORK AMONG THE NEGROES BY THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

The progress made in recent years toward a finer quality of character for the whole nation through religious education as it has touched the life of the child through the Sunday School has led the INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION to recognize its opportunity to extend its work among Negroes. Its work in this respect has been the developing of a trained leadership.

Believing that the Negro should continue the wonderful progress of the last half century and realizing the importance of religious training as a part of education for any race a beginning was made in 1911 to enlist the students in the 283 institutions of higher learning—schools of six or more teachers, in a special preparation for efficient Sunday School teaching and management. In the seven years classes have been organized in 190 institutions. The total enrollment from the first is FOURTEEN THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED AND SIXTY-EIGHT. The enrollment in the school year 1918-1919 was 3020. Seventy-four schools have incorporated SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER TRAINING into the regular required curriculum and give credit for it.

Of rural school teachers attending Summer Normals, 902 received special instruction in Sunday School methods. Special schools of Methods were held at Knoxville, Tennessee and Atlanta, Georgia. Three of the white Sunday School State Associations have tried out with satisfaction the employment of a colored worker. Five other states are ready to employ the same methods of co-operation as soon as funds are secured for the work. Practically all of the several Negro denominations recognize the value of Sunday School teacher training work, stress it in their publications and have adopted Sunday School text books. For five years the late Mr. W. N. Hartshorn of Boston, furnished the entire cost of the experiment, up to $15,000. Because of the wonderful growth of the work, the increase in office requirements and the great increase in traveling expenses a minimum budget for the next quadrennium is $6000 per year. A part of this has been provided. The balance must and ought to come from the colored people. There is at present no superintendent of work among Negroes.

THE WORK OF THE AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION AMONG NEGROES.

This society has had some general work among Negroes of Virginia for several years. More recently it has enlarged its scope by introducing missionary work among the Negroes of the Black Belt. In its desire to meet conditions, and in order to obtain greater effectiveness in administration, a new district has been organized which includes only the territory being covered by the colored missionaries who are working in the Southern states. The new district includes the work among the Negro people in the states of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Florida, Louisiana and Southern Texas. A General Representative has been appointed who for the present is looking after the work under the immediate supervision of the secretary of Missions of the Society. At present nine missionaries are under commission and others will be appointed in the near future. For the last fiscal year they report 92 new Sunday schools organized with 301 teachers and 3,917 scholars enrolled; 12,858 families received pastoral visits; 1,056 sermons and religious addresses were delivered.

The American Sunday School Union is deeply interested in the religious welfare of the Negro of the South and is seeking to co-operate with every agency looking toward their moral and religious betterment.

The headquarters of the American Sunday School Union are 1816 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa. The officers are: Martin L. Finckel, President; William H. Hirst, Recording Secretary; John E. Stevenson, Treasurer; George P. Williams, D. D., Secretary of Missions and in charge of the work among Negroes; James McConaughy, Litt. D., Managing Editor, Editor of Publications.

WORK AMONG NEGROES OF THE PRESBYTERIAN BOARD OF PUBLICATION AND SABBATH SCHOOL WORK.

The Presbyterian Church in the United States of America began its mission Sunday School work among Negroes in the South in 1890. Since that time more than 3,300 schools have been organized. Out of them 254 churches have grown.

The aim is two-fold: Missionary and Educational. It is the duty of the Missionary to visit the homes in which the children are not attending church or Sunday School and distribute religious literature, while at the same time he ministers to the religious life of that home. If it is possible, he organizes a Sunday School, provides it with the necessary literature, and subsequently fosters the growth and development of the school.

At the same time, this missionary is ministering to the educational life and development, not only of the mission Sabbath School under his care, but of all the Negro Presbyterian Sabbath Schools within the territory assigned to him.

The Board at present has twenty-seven Negro missionaries working in the South. They have 343 Sunday Schools under their care, with a membership of 16,000.

The Secretary of the Board is Rev. H. M. Robinson, 410 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia. The General Superintendent of Missions is John M. Somerndike, Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia. There are two Negro Districts Superintendents, W. H. Jackson, Box 753, Newbern, N. C., and A. B. McCoy, D. D., 200 Auburn Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

The names anda ddresses of the other Negro Sabbath School Missionaries are: Rev. J. C. James, Anniston, Ala.; Rev. G. E. Henderson, 822 Union St., Selma, Ala.; Mr. C. N. Shropshire, 2418 Center St., Little Rock, Ark.; Mr. E. C. Hames, 1122 W. 21st St., Little Rock, Ark.; Mr. N. A. Johnson, in care of J. F. Ellison, Palatka, Fla.; Rev. A. B. McCoy, D. EDUCATION

EDUCATION BEFORE THE CIVIL WAR.

1620. About this time the first Public School in Virginia was established for Indians and Negroes.

1701. A society was organized in England to carry the gospel and its teachings to the Indians and Negroes in America.

1704. Elias Neau established a private school for Indians and Negro slaves in New York City.

1745. The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts established a school for Negroes in Charleston.

1750. The Rev. Thomas Bacon, an ex-slaveholder, established in Talbot County, Maryland, a school for poor white and Negro children.

1750. An Evening school for Negroes was established in Philadelphia by the Quaker Abolitionist, Anthony Benezet.

1763. A manual labor school for Indians and Negroes was established in Hyde County, North Carolina, by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

1786. The New York African free school established. Afterward became the first public school.

1798. Negroes of Boston established a private school. White friends gave it assistance. In 1805, the school was moved to the African Meeting House. In 1800 sixty-six colored children presented a petition, to the school Commissioners of Boston, for a school for their benefit. It was not granted; the public schools were open to them. In 1820 the city established a Negro primary school.

1798. Primus Hall, of Boston, opened in his home the first separate school for colored children in Massachusetts. It was taught there until 1806.

1800. February 6.—Robert Pleasants, of Henrico County, Virginia, left by will, a school-house and 350 acres of land in that county to be used "forever or so long as the Monthly Meeting of Friends in that county may think it necessary for the benefit of the children and descendants of those who have been emancipated by me, or other black children whom they think proper to admit."

1807. George Bell, Nicholas Franklin and Moses Liverpool, three colored men erected in Washington, D. C., the first school-house in that city for colored children. No one of these men could read or write. They had lived as slaves in Virginia; but had learned that education was an important thing. They secured a white teacher for their school.

1820. Maria Becraft, born 1805, a noted teacher of the District of Columbia, opened a school for colored girls at Georgetown. In 1827, at Georgetown, the first seminary for colored girls in the District was established and Miss Becraft was made principal.

1829. St. Frances Academy for Colored Girls was established at Baltimore by the Oblate Sisters of Providence, a colored woman's society in the Catholic Church.

1832. Prudence Crandall, a young Quaker school teacher was mobbed at Canterbury, Conn., for venturing to open a school for colored children. The State of Connecticut passed a special law making it a crime to open a school for Negroes in that State.

1835. July 3.—The building of the Noyes Academy of Canaan, New Hampshire, which had opened its doors to colored students was removed from the town by a committee of three hundred citizens and a hundred yoke of oxen.

1837. What is now the Cheyney Training School for Teachers at Cheyney, Pa., near Philadelphia, was started with funds ($10,000) left by the will of Richard Humphries, an ex-slaveholder.

1844. Rev. Hiram S. Gilmore founded the Cincinnati Colored High School.

1849. Avery College was established at Allegheny, Pa.

1849. The Legislature of Ohio, largely through the efforts of Owen T. B. Nickens, a public-spirited Negro, established public schools for colored children in that state.

1853. First Normal School for Colored Teachers established in New York City. John Peterson, a colored man who had been teaching for a long time in the public schools was made principal.

1854. January 1.—Ashmun Institute was founded by the Presbyterians at Hinsonville, Chester County, Pa.; name changed to Lincoln University in 1866.

1856. August 30.—Wilberforce University was started by the Methodist Episcopal Church as a school for Negroes. On the 10th of March, 1863, it was sold to the African Methodist Episcopal Church, and since has been the leading educational institution of that denomination.

1856. On April 5, Booker Taliaferro Washington was born slave on a large plantation near Hale's Ford Post Office in Franklin County, Virginia. In August 1865 he moved with his mother to Malden, West Virginia. He first attended a public school in 1866. In 1872 he entered Hampton Institute and graduated from there in 1875. He then taught the public school in Malden. He later entered Wayland Seminary, Washington, D. D. From here he was called to Hampton to take charge of, and teach the Indian boys, who had been recently sent there from the West, by the United States Government. He remained at Hampton in this position until June, 1881, when he was called to Alabama and on July 4, established the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute of which he remained principal until his death on November 14, 1915. His greatest achievements were: (1) The building of an educational Institution, the fame of which became world wide. Its original methods of instruction have profoundly influenced present day pedagogical methods especially along the lines of vocational training. (2) He was the leader in teaching the lately emancipated freed men the dignity of labor. (3) He interpreted the Negro to the South and the South to the Negro. He is ranked as one of the greatest educators that this country has produced.

EDUCATIONAL POLICY DURING THE CIVIL WAR AND THE RECONSTRUCTION PERIOD.

The First School.

On September 17, 1861, the American Missionary Association established at Fortress Monroe, Virginia, the first day school among the Freedmen. Mary S. Peake, a colored woman, was the teacher. This school laid the foundation of the Hampton Institute and was the beginning of the general education of the Negro in the South.

In 1862, schools were established at Portsmouth, Norfolk, and Newport News, Virginia; Newbern and Roanoke Island, North Carolina and Port Royal, South Carolina. On November 11, 1862, Col. John Eaton, under the orders of General Grant, assumed the general supervision of Freedmen in Arkansas. Schools were immediately established. After the Emancipation Proclamation of January 1, 1863, Negro schools were established in all parts of the South occupied by the Federal armies. Schools in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Arkansas, and Louisiana multiplied.

Freedmen's Bureau.

March 3, 1865, the Freedmen's Bureau was created, and the education of the Freedmen became one of its special objects, until 1870, when the Bureau was discontinued.

In five years the Bureau established 4,239 schools; employed 9,307 teachers, and instructed 247,333 pupils and expended for education $3,521,936; the benevolent associations cooperating with the Bureau expended $1,572,287. In addition, the freedmen during the five years of the Bureau's life, raised and expended for their education $785,700. Higher education for the Negro was begun under the auspices of the Bureau. It assisted in establishing the following institutions:

Atlanta Baptist College, Atlanta, Ga.
Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga.
Biddle University, Charlotte, N. C.
Clafin University, Orangeburg, S. C.
Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn
Howard University, Washington, D. C.
Rust University, Holly Springs, Miss.
Scotia Seminary, Concord, N. C.
Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C.
Straight University, New Orleans, La.
Talladega College, Talladega, Ala.
Tougaloo University, Tougaloo, Miss.
Virginia Union University, Richmond Va.

In many instances there was opposition among the white people of the South to the education of the freedmen. In no one of the States, however, did this opposition become widely organized. On the other hand, many of the former masters assisted in establishing schools for the freed men and became their teachers. A number of such instances are given in the reports of the Freedmen's Bureau for 1867.

At Ocala, Florida, this report mentions that E. J. Harris, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of the town donated the lot on which was erected a church and school for the freedmen. L. A. Ragsdale, a wealthy and influential citizen of Meridian, Mississippi, gave sites for a Methodist and Baptist church and also for a school house for the freedmen. Six miles out from Meridian, a white lady on her own account had a school of ninety freedmen. At Canton Mississippi, the Rev. T. J. Drane, a Baptist minister of fine reputation and broad influence, organized a school for the freedmen.

G. L. Eberhart, the State Superintendent of Education under the Freedmen's Bureau of Georgia, reported in 1867 that he received so many applications from white people of the State to teach Negro schools that he had prepared a printed letter with which to answer them. "The applicants," he said, "included lawyers, physicians, editors, ministers, and all classes of white people." C. W. Buckley, State Superintendent of Education for Alabama under the Freedmen's Bureau, reported this same year that "No difficulty is now experienced in getting competent Southern persons who are willing to teach colored schools. Among those already employed are graduates of the State University and men who have been county superintendents of education."

That a large part of the population of the South favored Negro education is evidenced by the fact that the public school systems for all the children established by the reconstruction governments of the several States, were in every instance continued when these governments passed into the hands of the former masters. Common schools for Negroes became a part of the educational policy of the South.

DATES OF THE ESTABLISHMENT OF PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEMS IN SOUTHERN STATES.

1863. West Virginia establishes a system of public schools which includes Negroes.

1864. March—The first public school for Negroes in the District of Columbia opens.

1864. March 22—Gen. Banks issues an order for the establishing in Louisiana of a system of public schools for the freedmen. This was the first complete system of public schools in the South supported by taxation.

1864. October 12-13—Provision made in the constitution of Maryland for common schools.

1865. Missouri includes Negroes in her public school system.

1866. Florida Legislature passed an act providing for the appointment of a superintendent of common schools for freedmen. A tax of one dollar upon every male person of color, between the ages of 21 and 53 was imposed to provide a common school fund for freedmen. Georgia passed an act to provide for a general system of education for whites. Did not go into effect.

1867. Kentucky enacts a law "providing that the capitation and other taxes collected from the Negroes and mulattoes should be set apart and constitute a separate fund for the support of their paupers and the education of their children.

1867. Alabama and Tennessee establish public school systems.

1868. Arkansas, Florida and South Carolina establish public school systems.

1869. North Carolina and Virginia establish public school systems.

1870. Georgia, Mississippi, and Texas establish public school systems.

1874. Kentucky establishes a public school system for Negroes.

1875. March 25—Delaware establishes a system of public schools to include Negroes.

The first report of enrollment in the public schools of the South was for the year 1876-1877, when 1,827,139 white children and 571,506 colored children were enrolled in the sixteen former slave States and the District of Columbia.

THE PRESENT EDUCATIONAL POLICY.

Policy with Reference to Common Schools.

The general tendency of the present policy with reference to common schools for Negroes in the South is (1) to improve facilities; (2) to exercise a more helpful and efficient supervision; (3) to have the teaching vitally connected with the activities in which the people are engaged, that is, to make it more vocational, and (4) to have the school, in addition to its regular teaching work to actively assist in the general improvement of the community.

(1) For a statement of the Benevolent Agencies as the American Missionary Association, etc., which cooperated with the Freedmen's Bureau, see pp. 261-265 of the 1918-19 Negro Year Book.

The chief supervising agencies for Negro common schools are: The State and county boards of education; the Jeanes Fund, see statement concerning below; and the General Education Board, see statement concerning below. This board is assisting in providing State supervisors of Negro rural schools, and also a general field agent. Such supervisors have thus far been provided for Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi and Texas. In Missouri and West Virginia the State provides a supervisor of Negro schools. The Jeanes Fund provides the county supervisors of Negro schools. The Hampton Institute, through cooperation with the State board of education and its affiliation with the Jeanes Fund exercises some indirect supervision over the Negro common schools in Virginia. The Tuskegee Institute, through its administration of funds for rural improvement, provided by Mr. Julius Rosenwald, through affiliation with the Jeanes Fund and by cooperation with the State board of education, exercises a certain amount of indirect supervision over Negro rural schools in Alabama.

Policy with Reference to Secondary And Higher Schools.

The general tendency of the present policy with reference to secondary and higher schools for Negroes is, (1) to limit the number of schools doing college and university work. The purpose appears to be not to decrease but to increase the amount of first-class college and university work done.

(2) The policy is also to increase the financial resources. The American Missionary Association is engaged in a campaign to raise an Emancipation Jubilee Fund of $1,000,000 for the endowment of its higher educational institutions. The Freedmen's Aid Society is raising a $3,000,000 Jubilee endowment fund for the schools under its control.

(3) Another tendency is for stricter and more helpful supervision. There are four general agencies which are supervising Negro higher and secondary schools. These are the Federal Government, State governments, boards and societies of religious denominations carrying on educational work among Negroes, and the several Educational Funds which are giving financial assistance to Negro education.

The Federal Government and State Governments of the South are exercising supervision over the sixteen State Agricultural and Mechanical Colleges for Negroes.

There are also about the same number of normal schools receiving some State aid and over which the State exercises some control. Each of the boards and societies carrying on considerable educational work among Negroes keeps one or more representatives in the field to supervise the work. The Educational Funds in addition to exercising a supervising influence over the schools which they directly aid also exercise an indirect supervision over all Negro schools, for each institution is a potential recipient of aid from some one of these funds. The influence of the Educational Funds has been greatly increased by the comprehensive investigation of Negro higher education which the Phelps-Stokes Fund in connection with the United States Bureau of Education has recently made. The Association of Colleges for Negro Youth, is an attempt to exercise supervision with reference to requirements for college entrance, college degrees, etc.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

In 1920 there were in the United States, according to the Census reports, 3,796, 957 Negro children 5-20 years of age inclusive. Of these 2,030,269 or 53.5 per cent were enrolled in school. According to the same reports there were in sixteen former slave states and Oklahoma and the District of Columbia, 3,471,277 Negro children 5-20 years of age inclusive. Of these 1,761,794 or 50.7 per cent were enrolled in school. The number of Negro public school teachers in these states is 38,401.

ILLITERACY.

In 1920 there were 4,931,905 persons 10 years of age and over in the United States who were illiterate. Of this number 3,089,744 or 62.6 per cent were white and 1,842,161 or 37.3 per cent, were Negroes. By age periods there were of the Negro illiterates, 166, 416 or 9.1 per cent, 10 to 15 years of age; 162,758 or 8.8 per cent 16 to 20 years of age and 1,512,987 or 82.1 per cent 21 years of age and over.

Of the Negro urban population 402,170 or 13.4 per cent were illiterates. Of the Negro rural population 1,439,991 or 28.4 per cent were illiterate. By age periods the illiterates in Negro urban population 10 to 15 years of age numbered 9,476 or 2.3 per cent; 16 to 20 years of age, 20,399 or 5.1 per cent and 21 years of age and over, 372,295 or 92.5 per cent.

By age periods the illiterates in the Negro rural population 10 to 15 years of age numbered 156,940 or 11.0 per cent; 16 to 20 years of age, 142,359 or 9.8 per cent and 21 years of age and over, 1,140,692 or 79.2 per cent.

Illiteracy In The Army.

The term illiteracy as used with reference to soldiers entering the army service during the recent war was not the same as is used when we ordinarily refer to a person being illiterate, that is unable to read or write.

In the examinations carried on in the army by the section of psychology, the recruits were divided into two groups, Alpha and Beta. The former were designated as being literate and the latter as being illiterate. The usual basis of classification as being literate was: "ability to read and understand newspapers and write letters home.' Additional requirements, that the recruits had finished from the third grade to the seventh grade, were made in a number of the camps. The requirements for Negroes were: At Camp Custer, five years at school; at Camp Taylor, finished sixth grade; at Camp Sherman, eight years at school. The requirements for whites at Camp Sherman, were: finished sixth grade.

It would appear that the tendency was to increase the rate of illiteracy for Negroes in two ways. First, the requirements for placing them in Alpha were higher than that for the whites; second, the practice for a time in some camps was to send all Negro recruits to Beta without an examination.

A communication from the office of the Surgeon General said: "Such information as is available refers to the segregation of recruits approximately on the basis of fifth grade literacy. On this basis it has been found that twenty-nine per cent of white recruits were sent to Beta and seventy per cent of Negro recruits were sent to Beta. The figures for the Negroes are probable a little too high as indicating fifth grade literacy since for certain periods in some camps it was a practice to send all Negro recruits to Beta."

SECONDARY HIGHER AND PRIVATE EDUCATION.

According to reports made by heads of schools to the Editor of the Negro Year Book, there are exclusive of public high schools some 500 schools devoted to the secondary and higher training of Negroes. There are: teachers, 5,132; total students 107,807; elementary students, 74,383; secondary students, 28,000; collegiate students, 3,324 and professional students, 2,100. Of the total number of students, 2.0 per cent are in collegiate courses.

NEGRO COLLEGE GRADUATES.

The following table, taken from No. 15 of the Atlanta University publications, shows the number of college graduates by decades from 1820-1829 to 1900-1909:

Decade	Number of Negro College Graduates
1820-1829	3
1830-1839
1840-1849	7
1850-1859	12
1860-1869	44
1870-1879	313
1880-1889	738
1890-1899	1,126
1900-1909	1,613
Total	3,856

In 1921 according to the Crisis Magazine, 461 Negroes received the Bachelor's Degree in the arts and sciences. The total number of Negro college graduates is now about 7,850. Among the first Negroes to graduate from colleges in the United States were John Brown Russworm, who graduated from Bowdoin College in 1826; Theodore S. Wright from Princeton Theological Seminary, and Edward Jones from Amherst College. About 870 Negroes have graduated from Northern colleges. Oberlin, which admitted Negroes for a number of years before the Civil War, has graduated a larger number of Negroes than any other Northern university or college. In Northern colleges and universities Negroes on the whole have made good records and have carried off many honors. Alain LeRoy Locke, of Philadelphia, Pa., graduated from Harvard University, A. B., magna cum laude, 1907. This same year he won the Rhodes Scholarship from Pennsylvania to Oxford University, England, where he was a student for three years. For two semesters, 1910-11, he was a student at Berlin University.

NEGROES WHO HAVE RECEIVED DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY DEGREE

The degree of Doctor of Philosophy, which is the highest earned degree conferred by educational institutions, has been conferred by American universities upon 25 Negroes as follows: Edward A. Bouchet, Yale University, 1876; J. W. E. Bowen, Boston University, 1877; William L. Bulkley, Syracuse University 1893; W. E. B. Dubois, Harvard University, 1895; Pezavia O'Connell, University of Pennsylvania, 1898; Lewis B. Moore, University of Pennsylvania, 1896; T. Expenditures.

During 1920-21, the expenditures for private and higher schools for the Negro in the United States were by states and municipalities $1,210,508; by the United States Government, $269,937; from other sources than those mentioned above $5,569,704; total, $7,080,149. There was expended for colored public schools by the sixteen former slave States, the District of Columbia and Oklahoma, $21,693,504.

The total expenditures for Negro education were, $28,773,653. During the year 1920-1921 the sixteen former slave States, the District of Columbia and Oklahoma, expended $192,232,045 for white public schools. There was expended this same year in the entire United States for education, $1,288,000,000, divided as follows: $1,000,000,000 by common school systems, city and state; $150,000,000 by universities, colleges and technological schools; $27,800,000 by normal schools; $43,550,000 by private high schools and academies; $7,950,000 by manual training and industrial schools, and $4,750,000 by Indian schools.

It is roughly estimated that the religious and philanthropic organizations have contributed since 1865 about $70,500,000 for the education of the Negro in the South. During this same period the Negroes themselves, by direct contributions through their churches and other means have contributed over $36,000,000 for their education. It is estimated that since 1870 the Southern States have expended from their public funds about $180,000,000 for Negro common schools. During this same period about $2,200,000,000 were expended by the Southern States for all their common schools.

School Property.

The total value of the property, including scientific apparatus, grounds and buildings owned by institutions for secondary and higher training of Negroes amounts to about $30,000,000.

The total value of the property owned by all the institutions for secondary, higher and industrial training in the United States amounts to $1,455,000,000 as follows: For universities, colleges and technological schools, $550,000,000; normal schools, $65,590,000; private high schools and academies, $186,440,000; public high schools, $574,110,000; manual training and industrial schools $47,500,000; Indian industrial schools, $8,700,000.

Endowments.

The endowments or productive funds of schools for Negroes amount to approximately $11,150,000. Of this amount, $3,850,000 belongs to colleges and universities, and $7,200,000 to normal and industrial schools. Only about twenty colleges for Negroes have endowments. During the year 1920-21, all Negro schools increased their endowments about $1,000,000.

During that same period universities, colleges and technological schools for whites added to their endowments, $17,500,000. The total endowments or productive funds for all educational institutions in the United States in 1921 were $511,650,000 distributed as follows: Universities, colleges and technological schools, $385,250,000; normal schools, $6,125,000; public high schools, $3,000,000; private high schools and academies, $62,642,000; manual training and industrial schools, $58,110,000.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF NEGROES FOR EDUCATION.

It is estimated that through the churches and other means Negroes are each year raising about $2,500,000 for the support of their schools. The more important Negro religious denominations each supports a number of schools. Altogether they support about 175. Their school property is valued at about $3,000,000.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church is raising each year about $500,000 for the support of its twenty colleges and normal school. The Negro Baptists are giving support to about 110 colleges and academies. A great deal of money is being specially raised each year by the Negroes of the South for the improvement of their rural schools. It is a common thing for a community to raise $500 to $1,000 to build a schoolhouse. In connection with the Rosenwald rural school-house building movement, Negroes have contributed over $1,129,000.

Saint Francis Academy.—When, in 1829, the Saint Francis Academy was founded in Baltimore by Negro Sisters of the Catholic Church from the West Indies, they gave to the institution all they had in the way of furniture and real estate. It is said that Nancy Allison left this institution $15,000 and Louise Bode, a Haitian, $30,000.

Convene, The Widow Bernard.—She was a slave woman in New Orleans who purchased her own freedom and then set to work to do all she could to give light and learning to the illiterate and indigent children. In 1835 she founded and erected the "Institution des Orphelins Indigenes."

Lafon, Thomy.—Negro philanthropist, of New Orleans, La. He was born free in that city, December 28, 1810; was first a school teacher, then he ran a small dry goods store. Here he accumulated a little money which he loaned at advantageous rates of interest and began to deal in real estate. At this he became wealthy. He died December 22, 1893, leaving an estate appraised at $413,000, the bulk of which was divided among various charitable and educational institutions of the city of New Orleans.

Smith, Stephen.—Born 1795, died 1873; was a Negro lumber and oyster merchant of Columbia and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He founded in 1864, in cooperation with other Negroes, the "Home for Aged and Infirm Colored Persons at Philadelphia."

Smith at one time was reputed to be the wealthiest Negro in the United States. He dealt in both oysters and lumber and had his own schooners. When he founded the Old Folks Home he had retired from business and was a minister of the A. M. E. Church. He gave for the establishment of the home, grounds, buildings and so forth, $150,000. He also donated the ground for the Mount Olive Cemetery for colored people, which adjoins the home.

Among other colored persons who contributed to the Old Folks Home were: Maurice Hall, butler, $4,000; Henry and Sarah Gordon, caterers, $66,000. Gordon also gave $16,000 to Wilberforce University; Edward Green, junk dealer, $73,000. This home also received money from white persons, especially Quakers and is now the wealthiest home for aged and infirm colored persons in the United States.

Shaw, Mary E.—Colored woman of New York City. Left legacy of $38,000 to Tuskegee Institute.

McKee, Col. John.—Wealthy philanthropist, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. At his death in 1902, he left about $1,000,000 worth of property for education. He provided for the establishment of the Col. John McKee's College.

Fisher. Anna Maria.—A colored woman of Brooklyn, who died in 1911, left $26,500 of a $65,000 estate to educational institutions.

EDUCATIONAL FUNDS.

The Kosciuszko Fund—May 5, 1798, Thaddeus Kosciuszko, the Polish General who assisted the American Colonies in their fight for independence, on the eve of his departure from America made a will in which he set aside a fund amounting to about $16,000 to be devoted to the education of Negroes.

Thomas Jefferson was made administrator and was empowered to employ the whole of the fund "in purchasing Negroes from his own or any others, and giving them liberty in my name, in giving them an education in trade or otherwise, and having them instructed for their new condition in the duties of morality, which may make them good neighbors, good fathers or mothers, husbands or wives in their duties as citizens, teaching them to be defenders of their liberty and country, and of the good order of society, and in whatsoever may make them happy and useful." Kosciuszko died in 1817, Thomas Jefferson refused to take out administration papers and Benjamin Lincoln Lear, a Trustee of the African Education Society was appointed administrator. The heirs of Kosciuszko contested the will and filed a bill against Mr. Lear in the United States Supreme Court on the ground of the invalidity of the will executed by Kosiuszko in 1798. Mr. Lear died in 1832 and William Wirt, Attorney General of the United States, short time thereafter. This caused delay in having the case decided. Available information does not indicate just what was the final disposition of the Kosciuszko fund.

The Cushing Fund.—In 1895 Miss Emmaline Cushing, of Boston, left $33,000 to aid Negro education. For sixteen years the income from the fund was given to certain educational institutions. Recently the fund was distributed.

The Avery Fund.—In 1875, Rev. Charles Avery, who, in 1849, established at Allegheny, Pa., The Avery Trade School for Colored Youths, by means of a fund provided for twelve scholarships for young colored men in the University of Pittsburgh.

In accordance with the agreement between the executors of the Avery Estate and the trustees of the university, this fund is to provide instruction for males of the colored people in the United States of America or the British Provinces of Canada. The number is not to exceed twelve at any one time or term, nor is an individual to hold a scholarship for a period longer than four years. The Avery scholarships are granted to under-graduate students in the college of arts and the schools of engineering, mines, economics and education.

The Vilas Bequest.—Under the terms of the will of the late Senator William F. Vilas, of Wisconsin, who died August 27, 1908, provision is ultimately to be made at the University of Wisconsin for ten scholarships and ten fellowships for persons of Negro descent.

After the death of Mr. Vilas' wife and daughter, his estate, which is considerable, is to be used for the promotion of learning at the University of Wisconsin. Among the things to be done as the income from the estate suitably increases are: First, the erection of the Vilas Memorial Theatre; second, ten undergraduate scholarships and ten fellowships are to be established; third, aid is to be provided for the encouragement of musical talent or to promote the appreciation of music; fourth, the establishing, one after another, of ten research professorships; fifth, the ten professorships aforesaid having been established and supplied, the trustees shall next provide for fifty more undergraduate scholarships, with a salary of from three to four hundred dollars each, as they shall deem best, and then for fifty more fellowships with a salary of from five hundred to six hundred dollars each, to which graduates of the University of Wisconsin shall be appointed; such scholarships and fellowships to be of like character with those first hereinbefore provided for; or they may, in their discretion, provide for both fellowships and scholarships, but at least as many of the latter as of fellowships.

For at least one-fifth of these scholarships and fellowships the regents shall prefer in appointment among worthy and qualified candidates those of Negro blood if such present themselves. Otherwise then as aforesaid they shall be governed by the regents in like manner as those first above provided for.

The Buckingham Smith Fund.—The Buckingham Smith Benevolent Association is a charitable corporation under the laws of Florida, incorporated to dispense the proceeds of a fund established by Buckingham Smith, former resident of St. Augustine, and at one time Secretary to the legation from the United States to Spain.

The fund had its foundation in the will of Buckingham Smith who died in 1871. By his will he left his estate to his executor, in trust "for the benefit of the black people of St. Augustine." The executor, Dr. Oliver Bronson of St. Augustine, formerly of New York, a philanthropist, took measures to transfer the property to the corporation formed.

The amount of the property divided by Buckingham Smith probably did not exceed $20,000. Dr. Bronson gave a lot on which a building was constructed, intended to be used as home for aged people of color. After some years of trial it was found that the old people were unwilling to enter the home and the building was then used for a training school for girls of the Negro race. This was later abandoned, and the proceeds of the fund used for the support and care of the indigent and the aged people of color.

The trustees have liberally construed their powers and use the funds controlled by them in a broad way for the benefit of people of color, young as well as old. Aid is given the industrial school established near St. Augustine; a hall for social meetings rented; a district nurse employed, beside other welfare work paid for out of the fund.

The aid given stands out a striking example of the good which may be done with a small fund administered wisely.

By wise management the trustees increased the principal of the sum so that the present income is approximately $4,000 a year, which is expended for the care and support of the people belonging to the Negro race.

The trustees of the fund are: Dr. Andrew Anderson, President; St. Augustine, Florida; John T. Dismukes, Vice-President, St. Augustine, Florida; J. D. Puller, St. Augustine, Florida; J. C. Heartt, Secretary, St. Augustine, Florida; C. M. Fuller, St. Augustine, Florida; Grosvenor A. Parker, St. Augustine, Florida; and William Whitwell Dewhurst, Treasurer, St. Augustine, Florida.

The African Third.—This is an income derived from the bequest of John Parrish made in 1808. The African Third of the John Parrish fund consists of the net income from a property on Third Street in Philadelphia, bequeathed by him in 1808, in trust for three purposes: one-third for the education of poor white children, one-third for the aid of Indians, and one-third for the aid of colored people. Each of these thirds must be used in Pennsylvania.

"The Pennsylvania Society for Promoting the Abolition of Slavery the Relief of free Negroes Unlawfully Held in Bondage and for improving the Condition of the African Race," is the trustee of the African Third, the annual income of which usually amounts to about $200. This Society is also trustee for the real estate and endowment fund for the Laing School at Mt. Pleasant, South Carolina. In addition, the Society has funds amounting to about $17,000, much of the income from which is applied to the aiding of Negro education in the South. The officers of the Society are: president, Joel Borton; vice-president, Hugh S. Walker; secretary, Arabella Carter, 1305 Arch Street; treasurer, Walter Hall; Board of Managers: the above and Sarah W. Knight, William C. Biddle, Mary R. Lively, William B. Griscom, Rebecca W. Holmes, and Counselor G. Herbert Jenkins.

The George Washington Educational Fund.—This fund was established from money left by an ex-slave, George Washington. In the early part of the nineteeth century, Washington, then a small boy was purchased in Virginia by a Dr. Silas Hamilton of Natchez County Miss. Some five years later, Dr. Hamilton brought his slaves, twenty-one in number, North and freed them. Washington refused to leave his master and went with him to Otterville in Jersey County, Illinois.

As long as Dr. Hamilton lived Washington served him faithfully. When the Doctor died in 1834 he left his former slave $3,000. Washington was thrifty and industrious and when he died in 1864 he left an estate valued at $15,000. His will provided that $1500 of this amount be expended in erecting a monument to Dr. Hamilton and that the income from the residue of the estate should be devoted to the education of Negro children. The trustee of the Fund appropriated the money to his own uses. About 1872 Theodore S. Chapman brought suit against the trustee of the Fund to have it applied to its proper uses. After several years of litigation Mr. Chapman won the suit and recovered a little less than $9,000 of the original estate. After erecting the monument to Dr. Hamilton, $7,300 remained. Mr. Chapman had virtual charge of the Fund for thirty years and at his death it amounted to $22,000 and had assisted in the education of over one hundred Negro students. Mr. Chapman in his will left $3,000 to be added to the George Washington Educational Fund. The benefits of the Fund were first extended to the Negroes residing in Jersey County, later to the Congressional district in which this county is located and finally to the whole state of Illinois. The present amount of the Fund is reported to be approximately $23,000. The annual income is a little over $1,100. Four students are at present being educated by the Fund in Northern Colleges. The trustees of the Fund are: Dr. A. M. Cheney, Jerseyville, Illinois; A M. Slaten, Jerseyville, Illinois; G. H. Dougherty, Otterville, Illinois; J. W. Becker, Jerseyville, Illinois; F. H. Markman, Jerseyville, Illinois; H. L. Chapman, Jerseyville, Illinois. The secretary treasurer of the Fund, (he is not a trustee) is Judge Charles S. White of Jerseyville, Illinois.

The Miner Fund.—This fund bears the name of, and owes its existence to Myrtilla Miner, of Brookfield, N. Y., who on December 3, 1851, established a normal school for colored girls so that they might become teachers of their own race. In order that the work might continue after her death, Congress on March 3, 1862, granted a charter by which she, her associates and successors were incorporated under the name of "The Institution for the Education of Colored Youth," to be located in the District of Columbia and to educate and improve the moral and intellectual condition of such colored youth of the nation as might be placed under its care and influence.

Miss Miner died December 7, 1864. The first lot of ground for the school, purchased in 1853 at a cost of $4,000, was in the square on which the British Legation is now situated. In 1872, this ground was sold for $40,000 and a new site was purchased at Seventh and Church Streets. Here the Miner Normal School was conducted independently until 1879, when an arrangement was made with the trustees of the public schools of the District of Columbia whereby it was agreed that the Miner Normal School should be the public normal school for the colored people of the District. The building was leased to the District of Columbia at an annual rental of $3,600. In 1915, the District erected a $225,000 Normal School building for Negroes which was named in honor of Miss Miner. The Fund now has property valued at $40,000. The annual income from which is about $2,100. This income is used for the aid of the Manassas Industrial School of Virginia and of other Negro Schools and needy students.

The Trustees of the Miner Fund are: William L. Brown, President; Rev. John Van Shaick, Jr., D. D., Vice-President; John S. Scofield, E. L. Parks, Samuel R. Bond, Miss Mary K. Porter, Secretary; and Henry C. Gauss, Treasurer.

The Stewart Missionary Foundation For Africa.—This Foundation established in 1894 was the gift of Rev. and Mrs. W. F. Stewart of Daytona Beach, Florida. Its purpose was to assist in creating missionary interest in the Negro churches and schools. The plan being to seek out suitable young people for missionary service and prepare them for the field, also to prepare the ministry for missionary leadership in the home church. To carry out the plan the foundation was placed in Gammon

Theological Seminary, the best equipped and most largely endowed of the institutions for the education of Negro ministers. The Stewart Foundation provides for the Department of Christian Missions in the Seminary, this department with other studies selected from the various seminary courses and from Clark University, located on the same campus, constitutes the school of Missions which is under the general charge of the Stewart Foundation.

In addition to the regular school work as described above, the Stewart Foundation maintains a lecture ship in all the schools under the Board of Education for Negroes in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and many other schools. A system of prizes is also provided these schools for the best essays, orations and hymns on missionary subjects. Beginning with 1911 a school and missionary journal called the Foundation has been published. It has 16 pages and is published monthly.

About fifty missionaries have gone to Africa as a direct result of this work, several during the past year. The influence of the school work on the ministry and the churches in this land is very noticeable in the increased offerings for missionary work. The Stewart Missionary Foundation has something more than $100,000 in invested funds.

Mr. E. L. Stewart of Chicago, Illinois and Rev. G. Grant Stewart, of Los Angeles, California are the trustees. D. D. Martin, Gammon Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Ga., is Secretary and Director.

The Daniel Hand Fund.—In 1888 Daniel Hand, of Guilford, Connecticut, gave the American Missionary Association $1,000,000 to aid in the education of the Negro. Mr. Hand also provided that his residuary estate amounting to $500,000 should be devoted to the same purpose and the income disbursed through the same association.

This fund has been a great assistance in the splendid work which the American Missionary Association has done for Negro education in the South. It now amounts to $1,530,000. The income from the Fund for 1920 was $74,366.

The Peabody Educational Fund.—On February 7, 1867 and July 1, 1868, George Peabody, of Danvers, Massachusetts, established a fund of $3,500,000 to be devoted to education in the South; $1,380,000 of this amount was in Florida and Mississippi bonds and has never been available. The remainder was placed in the control of sixteen trustees. The first aim of the fund was to encourage the establishment of public school systems for the free education of all children. After this was accomplished, the income from the fund was devoted to the training of teachers through normal schools and teachers' institutes.

In 1875, a normal school for whites was established at Nashville, Tennessee. This school became a leader in the development of the normal school idea throughout the South. By means of scholarships, worthy students from all the Southern States were enabled to attend this central training school. By 1903 all the Southern States had committed themselves to the policy of maintaining schools for the training of teachers. By the deed of trust the trustees were given the power to distribute the fund at the expiration of thirty years which ended in 1897. In January, 1905, the trustees decided to dissolve the trust. This was done in 1915. The residue of the fund was expended in the endowment of the Peabody College at Nashville for the higher education of white teachers. Under the arrangements for the first endowment of Peabody College the Peabody Fund donated the sum of $1,000,000. Toward the further endowment of this institution the Peabody Fund contributed $500,000. The Trustees have also contributed funds in aid of schools of education in the State universities and in aid of rural education for the Negro race. The fund for this latter purpose has been given in trust to the John F. Slater Fund to be administered in the interest of rural public schools for the Negro race.

THE JULIUS ROSENWALD FUND.

The Julius Rosenwald Fund was incorporated under the laws of Illinois on November 1, 1917 by Julius Rosenwald, Augusta N. Rosenwald, Lessing J. Rosenwald and Armand S. Deutsch, "for charitable, scientific, educational and religious purposes." Up to January 1, 1922 the Fund has contributed for such causes $889,379. The secretary of the Fund is Francis W. Shepardson, Executive Offices, Sears, Roebuck and Company, Chicago, Illinois. The Julius Rosenwald Fund among its benefactions gives aid to Y. M. C. A., work for Negroes and to the building of rural schools for Negroes.

Rosenwald Aid To Negro Young Men's Christian Association.

In January 1911, Mr. Julius Rosenwald of Chicago made a proposition through the Young Men's Christian Association of that city whereby he offered to donate the sum of $25,000 to every city in the United States which would raise by public subscription $75,000 for the purpose of erecting an Association building for colored men and boys, to cost, with land, building and furnishing not less than $100,000.

As a result of this offer a total of $2,150,361 has been raised. Of this amount Mr. Rosenwald contributed $325,000. The sources and amounts given to meet Mr. Rosenwald's conditions have been: from local whites, $1,107,857; from local Negroes, $300,072; from other sources, $427,432. With the amounts raised, buildings have been erected, or are being erected in the following cities: Atlanta, Baltimore, Brooklyn, Chicago, Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Kansas City, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Washington. New York having also subscribed the amount for a similar building for colored women and girls, Mr. Rosenwald applied his offer to this purpose.

Rosenwald Rural Schoolhouse Building.

Mr. Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, on August 12, 1912, as one of several notable gifts in commemoration of his fiftieth birthday anniversary, contributed $25,000 to Tuskegee Institute, to be distributed among such offshoots of Tuskegee as Principal Booker T. Washington should designate. Of this amount Dr. Washington asked permission to use $2,100 for an experiment in building in Alabama six rural schools for Negroes. The conditions of the experiment required that the Negroes, by their own contributions of cash, land or labor, by gifts from white friends, or by grants from public funds, should raise in each community an amount equal to or larger than the $300 assigned as Rosenwald aid.

The interest aroused by the campaigns for constructing these schoolhouses was so great, and so many other communities sought similar offers of aid, that up to February 1, 1922, under the same cooperative plan, Mr. Rosenwald stimulated the construction and contributed part of the cost of 1,215 school buildings in the South, utilizing the services of 2,795 teachers. These were built at a total cost of $3,985,000. Of this amount the Negroes contributed $1,129,000, the whites, $278,000, the public funds, $1,829,000 and Mr. Rosenwald $749,000. In addition projects for the construction before June 30, 1922 of 315 additional buildings have been approved, these to be erected at a total cost of $1,105,678, of which the Negroes will contribute $271,610 and Mr. Rosenwald, $263,800. Classified by types the buildings already constructed include 356 one-teacher schools, 461 two-teacher, 189 three-teacher, 105 four teacher, 39 five-teacher, 48 six-teacher, or larger and 17 teachers' homes. The work of schoolhouse construction is under the general charge of Mr. S. L. Smith, General Field Agent, The Julius Rosenwald Fund, Commercial Club Building, Nashville, Tennessee.

The John F. Slater Fund.—In March, 1882, John F. Slater, of Norwich, Connecticut, created a trust fund of $1,000,000 for the purpose of "Uplifting the lately emancipated population of the Southern States and their posterity." For this munificent gift Congress gave him a vote of thanks and a medal. The fund is used to prepare teachers and for education in the industries. Through fidelity and successful management the appropriations have been kept up and the Fund increased, especially by the donation from the Peabody Fund, to about $2,000,000.

Public and private schools are helped. The requisites for help are proper standards of efficiency and the maintaining of normal and industrial departments. For the fiscal year 1919-1920, the trustees of the fund spent $111,200 in assisting 198 schools, including 107 County Training Schools, and 44 town and city public schools.

The trustees are: John A. Stewart, New York City; Wickliffe Rose, New York City; Richard H. Williams, New York City; James H. Dillard, Charlottesville, Virginia; Charles Scribner, New York City; Fairfax Harrison, Belvoir, Virginia; John M. Glenn, New York City; Francis P. Venable, Chapel Hill, North Carolina; James H. Kirkland, Nashville, Tennessee; Charles S. Brown, New York City; Albert Shaw, New York City; Walter Russell Bowie, Richard, Va. The officers are: James H. Dillard, President; Richard H. Williams, Vice-President; Miss G. C. Mann, Box 418, Charlottesville, Virginia, Secretary; Metropolitan Trust Company, New York, Treasurer; B. C. Caldwell, Natchitoches, La., and W. T. B. Williams, Tuskegee, Ala., are field agents.

COUNTY TRAINING SCHOOLS AIDED BY THE SLATER FUND 1920-21.

To these the Slater Board gives $500 a year for salaries of teachers on the following conditions:

1. The school property shall belong to the state, county, or district, and the school shall be a part of the public school system.

2. There shall be an appropriation for salaries of not less than $750 from public funds raised by state, county, or district taxation.

3. The length of term shall be at least 8 months.

4. The teaching shall extend through the eighth year with the intention of adding at least two years as soon as it shall be possible to make such extension.

The beginning of these schools was in 1911-12, when the Slater Fund made appropriations in four counties under the above conditions.

The following facts for the session 1920-1921 are interesting:

Amount contributed by the Slater Fund for salaries, $62,400; amount contributed by the General Education Board for building ,$75,271; amount spent by counties (from public tax funds) for all purposes, $648,415; number of pupils above the seventh grade, 2,247.

The following is a list of the schools for the session 1919-20 with names of county, post office, and principal.

The Anna T. Jeanes Foundation.—On April 18, 1907, Miss Anna T. Jeanes, of Philadelphia Pennsylvania, created an endowment fund in perpetuity, the income of which was to be applied toward the maintenance and assistance of elementary schools for Negroes in the Southern States. H. B. Frissell, principal of Hampton Institute and Booker T. Washington, principal of Tuskegee Institute, were named as trustees of the fund. A number of other gentlemen were invited to aid in the administration of the fund and a board of trustees was organized.

The present board is, David C. Barrow, Athens, Georgia; Theodore D. Bratton, Jackson, Mississippi; Clarence Everett Bacon, Montclair, New Jersey; James Hardy Dillard, Charlottesville, Virginia; John T. Emlen, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; William P. Few, Durham, North Carolina; James E. Gregg, Hampton, Virginia; Samuel C. Mitchell, Richmond, Virginia; Robert R. Moton, Tuskegee, Alabama; J. C. Napier, Nashville, Tennessee; George Foster Peabody, New York City; Emmett J. Scott, Washington, D. C.; R. L. Smith, Waco, Texas; William H. Taft, Washington, D. C.; and Talcott Williams, New York City.

The officers are: President, James H. Dillard, Charlottesville, Virginia; Vice-President, Talcott Williams, New York City; Treasurer, George Foster Peabody, 25 Broad Street, New York City; Secretary, John T. Emlen, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Chairman Executive Committee, Robert R. Moton, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama; Office Secretary, Miss G. C. Mann, Box 418, Charlottesville, Virginia. B. C. Caldwell, Natchitoches, Louisiana; and W. T. B. Williams, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama are field agents.

The work of the Negro Rural School Fund, Jeanes Foundation was carried on in 1920-1921 in 269 countries distributed in the following states: Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

During the year the Foundation expended $94,287 toward paying the salaries of 272 supervising teachers, who visited 8,976 schools. In 1913 the counties contributed from public fund toward the payment of salaries of supervising teachers, $3,402; in 1914, $6,255; in 1915, $12,183; in 1916, $17,894; in 1917, $23,722; in 1918, $25,090; in 1919, $32,670; in 1920, $44,508, and in 1921 $119,746.

Phelps-Stokes Fund.—By the will of Miss Caroline Phelps Stokes, of New York City, who died in Redlands, California, April 26, 1909, a board of trustees was constituted for a fund of about $900,000 to be known as the Phelps-Stokes Fund. The trustees were incorporated by the New York Legislature in 1911. The act of incorporation states that the income of the fund is to be used for the "erection and improvement of tenement house dwellings in the city of New York, for the poor families of that city, either directly or by the acquisition of the capital stock or obligations of any other corporation organized for that purpose; and for the education of Negroes both in Africa and the United States, North American Indians and needy and deserving white students through industrial schools, the founding of scholarships and the erection or endowment of school buildings or chapels. It shall be within the purpose of said corporation to use any means to such ends which shall from time to time seem expedient to its members or trustees including research, publication, the establishment and maintenance of charitable or benevolent activities, agencies or institutions already established."

The most important purposes for which the income of the fund has been applied are as follows:

1. The establishment at the University of Virginia and the University of Georgia of fellowships. $12,500 is given each of these Universities for the permanent endowment of a research fellowship on the following conditions:

"The university shall appoint annually a fellow in Sociology for the study of the Negro. He shall pursue advanced studies under the direction of the department of Sociology, Economics, Education or History, as may be determined in each case by the president. The fellowship shall yield $500, and shall, after four years, be restricted to graduate students.

"Each fellow shall prepare a paper or thesis embodying the result of his investigations which shall be published by the university with assistance from the income of the fund."

Three bulletins have been issued by the University of Georgia and four by the University of Virginia.

2. The establishment of a fund at the Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tennessee, in accordance with the following vote:

"Voted that $10,000 be given to the Peabody College for Teachers to establish a fund for the visitation of Negro schools and colleges, the income to be used to enable the teachers, administrative officers and students of the Peabody College to come into direct and helpful contact with the actual work of representative institutions of Negro education."

3. The fund, in cooperation with the United States Bureau of Education, made a comprehensive investigation of Negro Education. The results of this investigation were published as Bulletins 38 and 39, 1916, The study was made under the direction of Thomas Jesse Jones, Ph. D., formerly Director of Research at Hampton Institute, and later in charge of Negro statistics in connection with the United States Census of 1910.

Dr. Jones was assisted in the investigation by representatives of the colored race and by Southern white men. The report shows that the provision made for Negro education is inadequate in every phase, and urges an increase of the facilities for college, secondary and vocational education. Many small schools doing a splendid work were given well-deserved publicity, while a few unworthy schools were exposed. The report has been reprinted in the form of State Abstracts and separate chapters. At present the Fund maintains a cooperative relationship with the Bureau of Education. The time of three workers is devoted to constructive work. Advice is given to Negro schools as to curricula, accounts and buildings. An effort is also made to keep Negro schools in touch with all progressive educational movements. Information is given on all phases of Negro education, and schools are assisted in the search for qualified principals and teachers.

4. Assistance to the Southern University Race Commission by an annual appropriation for traveling expenses.

5. Assistance to the Southern Publicity Committee. The purpose of the Committee's work is to furnish the press with articles dealing with the constructive side of race relations.

6. Forty-eight schools have been aided by the Fund. In addition, appropriations have been made to the Jeanes Fund work; illiteracy campaigns; prizes to improve conditions in school dormitories; Y. M. C. A. work; Y. W. C. A. work; study of Negro life and history; promotion of health; Southern University Race Commission; gardening in public schools; Sunday School work; and the improvement of conditions at army camps where Negro soldiers were stationed.

7. In cooperation with the Conference of Missionary Associations of Great Britain and Ireland and the Committee of Reference and Counsel of the United States and Canada and Colonial Governments, the Fund has made a study of educational conditions in the West Coast, South, and Equatorial Africa. Their object has been to inquire as to the extent to which the social, hygienic, economic, and mental needs of the natives are being met by the present educational undertakings, and to suggest ways in which a closer adaptation of educational undertakings can be brought about.

The trustees of the Fund are: Bishop William T. Manning, New York City; Chancellor Elmer E. Brown, New York University New York City; Olivia E. Phelps Stokes, New York City; Mrs. Robert Hunter, Berkeley, California; Helen Phelps Stokes, New York City; Francis Louis Slade, New York City; John Sherman Hoyt, New York City; I. N. Phelps-Stokes, New York City; Edward W. Sheldon, New York City; Henry Sloan Coffin, New York City; Anson Phelps Stokes, West Stockbridge, Mass.

The headquarters of the Fund are at 297 Fourth Ave., New York City. The agents of the Fund are: Thomas Jesse Jones, Educational Director, Ida A. Tourtellot, Associate Educational Director; L. A. Roy, Field Agent, Thomas J. Woofter, Jr., Field Agent.

The General Education Board.

In 1902 Mr. John D. Rockefeller contributed $1,000,000 as a fund to be devoted to the promotion of education in the United States. In 1903, under an Act approved by Congress, the General Education Board, as an organization, was chartered.

By the terms of its charter the Board is empowered to assist in the improvement of primary schools, industrial schools, technical schools, normal schools, training schools for teachers, institutions of higher learning, and schools of any other grade. In 1905, Mr. John D. Rockefeller gave $10,000,000, to the Board as a permanent endowment. In 1907, he gave a further sum of $32,000,000, one-third of which was to be added to the permanent endowment of the Board, and two-thirds to be applied to such specific objects as Mr. Rockefeller or his son might designate. In 1909 Mr. Rockefeller added $10,000,000 more to the General Fund of the Board, in 1920, $50,000,000 primarily for use in assisting colleges and universities to raise funds for increasing teachers' salaries, and $45,000,000 primarily for cooperation in the improvement of medical schools; bringing the total donations to the Board up to $148,000,000.

The Board has the following main lines of work:

1. The development of public high schools in the Southern States. As early as 1905 the Board undertook to provide State Departments of Education in a few of the Southern States with trained field workers who could develop educational interest, urge local educational activities, and give the requisite professional assistance to communities eager to improve their schools. At the present time the Board is cooperating with fifteen states by paying the salaries, traveling and incidental expenses of agents dealing with secondary education, known by the title of Professors of Secondary Education. Amount appropriated to June 30, 1921, $532,561.

2. The advancement of higher Education throughout the United States. At the outset the Board determined to employ a considerable portion of its income in assisting such institutions of learning as it may deem best adapted to promote a comprehensive system of higher education in the United States. For this purpose it has made contributions to the endowment funds of colleges and universities in the several states, pledging the sum of $50,660,630 toward a total of $175,693,004 which the institutions have undertaken to raise.

NEGRO EDUCATION.

State Agents for Negro Rural Schools.

The Board is doing an extensive work for the education of the Negro people in the Southern States. In the States of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia, the Board is cooperating with the State Departments of Education in the development of better schools, economic, and social conditions in rural sections.

The undertaking is in charge of State Agents for Negro Rural Schools, whose salaries and traveling expenses are paid by the General Education Board. These agents are in close touch and cooperate sympathetically with County Superintendents of Education, the colored people themselves, and various other agencies whose work is of a similar nature. A definite program of improvement has been outlined for every state in which this work is being conducted. To June 30, 1921 $433,890 has been appropriated for this activity.

Jeanes Fund.

The General Education Board is assisting the Negro Rural School Fund, Anna T. Jeanes Foundation, to enlarge its work of assisting counties in employing competent supervising industrial teachers. Dr. James H. Dillard, President of the Jeanes Foundation, is directing this phase of the work. To June 30, 1921, the General Education Board contributed to the Jeanes Fund, $256,000.

County Training Schools.

For five years the General Education Board has cooperated with the John F. Slater Fund and public school officials in the Southern States in the development of County Training Schools for Negroes.

These schools are doing or propose to do as soon as possible two or three years of high school work, offering in the graduating class a simple course in Teacher Training. The purpose is to provide a good Negro school, centrally located and supported by public funds where may be trained a number of young men and women to teach in the small rural schools. The amount appropriated to June 30, 1921 to assist in providing equipment and in building teachers' homes and for salaries of teachers was $386,452. The number of County Training Schools thus aided by the General Education Board has increased since 1915 from 12 to 142.

For the session 1920-1921, complete reports from the County Training Schools show a total of 848 teachers and an enrollment in the high school grades of 2,247. In connection with these schools, the living conditions of teachers employed have been improved. Homes have been built or are under construction at 21 county training schools, the General Education Board having been applied toward the cost of these buildings. The chief aim of these homes is to make living conditions more attractive to good teachers. Such homes serve also as examples to the people of the surrounding communities.

Contributions To Negro Schools.

For several years past the General Education Board has made limited contributions to selected schools for the Negro people for their current expenses and for teachers' salaries—in a few instances however contributions have been made toward the cost of new buildings. For the year ended June 30 1921 contributions to the following institutions were made:

Summer Schools.

The General Education Board through the State Departments of Education in 1920-1921 aided 95 summer schools for Negro teachers. These schools were manned by 639 instructors and 12,072 teachers were enrolled. The terms ranged from five to nine weeks.

The purpose was to strengthen the teachers in service in their academic and industrial work and to enlist their cooperation in various forms of community work such as food conservation, Red Cross, Moonlight Schools for Illiterates, etc. To June 30, 1921, $83,987 was appropriated, of which $28,200 is for the current year.

Hampton and Tuskegee Summer Scholarships.

The building of rural school-houses stimulated by the aid of Mr. Julius Rosenwald has emphasized the need of better trained teachers for these schools. In 1918, local efforts were made to extend the term of these schools, increase the salaries and otherwise make them more attractive to the best teachers. The General Education Board offered to defray the traveling expenses of teachers in the Rosenwald Schools and County Training Schools to Hampton Institute and Tuskegee Institute, where they were given special courses designed to strengthen them as rural teachers and leaders.

In 1921 the General Education Board defrayed the traveling expenses of a group of 400 Negro teachers from 13 states in attending the summer schools held at Hampton Institute and Tuskegee Institute during the summer of 1921. These teachers were carefully chosen by the State Agents for Negro Rural Schools.

Of the number that availed themselves of this special instruction, 95 were from County Training Schools, 117 from Rosenwald Schools, 24 were Supervising Industrial Teachers and 102 were principals and teachers of other schools under church or state control. The amount appropriated by the General Education Board for 1921 for this work was $10,000.

MEDICAL EDUCATION.

The Board has made contributions to several of the larger medical schools in the United States with a view to enabling them to command the entire time of the principal members of the teaching staff in the department of medicine, surgery, and pediatrics, or as it is commonly expressed, placing these teachers on a full-time university basis. The sum of $6,208-774 has been contributed by the General Education Board for this purpose. Realizing the necessity of well trained Negro physicians the board has made the following appropriations:

Meharry Medical School, Nashville, Tennessee, $150,000 toward $500,000; Howard University Medical School, Washington, D. C., $250,000 toward $500,000.

Rural Education.

The Board is providing the necessary funds with which to pay the salaries and expenses of State Agents of Rural Schools in eleven Southern States. Their main duty is to endeavor to develop more efficient rural systems. To June 30, 1921, $478,549 was appropriated by the General Education Board for this work.

Research.

A few years ago the Board entered the field of educational investigation and research and experiment. Several projects in this direction are now under way

Total Contributions.

Since its establishment up to June 30, 1921, the Board has contributed for education, $87,152,279. Of this amount, $5,693,205 was contributed for the education of the Negro people.

The trustees of the Board are seventeen in number. The following are the officers of the Board: Dr. Wallace Buttrick, President; Dr. Abraham Flexner and Mr. Trevor Arnett, Secretaries; Dr. E. C. Sage, Assistant Secretary; Mr. L. G. Myers, Treasurer; Mr. L. M. Dashiell, Assistant Treasurer. The offices of the Board are at 61 Broadway, New York City.

CARNEGIE CORPORATION OF NEW YORK.

This Corporation was chartered under the Laws of the State of New York, June 9, 1911, "For the purpose of receiving and maintaining a fund or funds and applying the income thereof to promote the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States, by aiding technical schools, institutions of higher learning, libraries, scientific research, hero funds, useful publications and by such other agencies and means as shall from time to time be found appropriate therefor." On April 23, 1917, the Corporation was empowered by an amendment of its charter, to hold and administer funds for use in Canada or the British Colonies, for the same purpose as those to which it is authorized to apply its funds in the United States.

Five other organizations had previously been endowed by Mr. Carnegie: the Carnegie Institute, at Pittsburgh, embracing the Fine Arts Department, Museum, Music Hall, Institute of Technology and Library School; the Carnegie Institute of Washington devoted to scientific research and discovery, the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission and the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. These five institutions were endowed and devoted to stated purposes. In distinction the Carnegie Corporation of New York was designed to serve wider purposes. It is to remain unencumbered and capable of being turned to whatever cause or agency the Trustees of the present or succeeding generations may judge most significant.

After the distribution of nearly $200,000,000 to many causes, Mr. Carnegie conveyed to this Corporation $125,000,000 par value in bonds of the highest order of security. Since its organization in 1911 the Corporation has voted $49,817,450.54 for purposes within its scope under the following heads:

To Affiliated Organizations: Carnegie Institute of Washington, Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association and the Church Peace Union, a total of 25,075,979.67.

To Unaffiliated Organizations: American National Red Cross, Knights of Columbus War Work Fund, Young Men's Christian Association War Work Fund, Young Women's Christian Association War Work Fund, War Service Committee, American Library Association, Study of Methods of Americanization, National Research Council, National Security League, National Civic Federation, War Camp Community Recreation Service, American Museum of Safety, American Agricultural Organization Society, Educational Institutions (not including medical,) Medical Education, Imigration and Settlements, Library Buildings, Church Organs, a total of $23,552,149.67.

For Miscellaneous purposes: Church Pension Fund, New York Association for the blind, the New York Zoological Society, the Simplified Spelling Board and other miscellaneous, a total of $1,189,321.20.

The special benefactions to Negroes either directly by Mr. Carnegie or through the Carnegie Corporation have been as follows:

For Libraries: Public $184,831.00, School $625,991.00; To Tuskegee Institute $670,000.00; To Hampton Institute $879,545.00 voted and willed For Church Organs: (Whites and Negroes) $3,604,718.75. No separate figures for organs to Negroes.) For Special Research Work: $40,000.

THE SMITH-LEVER APPROPRIATIONS FOR AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION EDUCATION.

In 1913 Congress passed the Smith-Lever Agricultural Extension Bill which provided money for carrying on agricultural extension work in every State of the Nation. Some of the important features of this act are:

This Extension work shall consist of the giving of instruction and practical demonstrations in agriculture and home economics to persons not attending or resident in the colleges receiving the benefits of the Act.

The amount that each State receives is in the proportion which the rura population of the State bears to the total rural population.

Before any Federal appropriations are made to a State an equal sum must be provided from within the State in any of the following ways: namely, by the State or by a county, or a college, or a local authority, or by individual contributions.

In 1914 each State was given $10,000 unconditionally for this work. In 1915 the proportionate allotment for each State began to be available. The maximum allotment for each State was reached in 1922. The work for Negroes is carried on along the lines of farm demonstration work, corn and canning clubs for Negro boys and girls and field or movable schools.

Each dollar of Federal money expended must be matched by a dollar from other sources. That is the total money expended in the Smith-Lever work, must be twice the amount of Federal money expended. For lists of workers among Negroes under the Smith-Lever Act, see section on Agriculture.

THE ALLOTMENT TO EACH SOUTHERN STATE AND THE AMOUNT WHICH ON THE BASIS OF THEIR PER CENT OF THE RURAL POPULATION SHOULD BE EXPENDED FOR NEGROES.

THE SMITH-HUGHES APPROPRIATION FOR VOCATIONAL EDUCATION.

On February 23, 1917 the United States Congress passed the Smith-Hughes Vocational Education Act. Under the terms of this act, the Federal Government appropriates funds to the states for the purpose of co-operating in vocational education, as follows: (1) for instruction in agriculture, $500,000 in 1918 and an increase each year until in 1926 and thereafter a maximum of $3,000,000 is annually appropriated; (2) for instruction in the trades, home economics and industrial subjects, $500,000 in 1918 and an increase each year until in1926, and thereafter a maximum of $3,000,000 is annually appropriated; (3) for training teachers, supervisors, and directors of agricultural subjects and teachers of trades, industrial and home economics subjects, $500,000 in 1918 and an increase each year until in 1921 and thereafter, a maximum of $1,000,000 is annually appropriated. Thus in 1926 and thereafter the Federal Government will give approximately $7,000,000 annually to assist in vocational training. The basis of allotments for each state is as follows: For agriculture, a sum in the proportion which the state's rural population bears to the total rural population of the nation; for trades, home economics, and industries, a sum in the proportion which the state's urban population bears to the total urban population of the nation; for teacher training, a sum in the proportion which the state's total population bears to the total population of the nation. The moneys expended under the provisions of this Act, in cooperation with the States, for the salaries of teachers, supervisors, or directors of Agricultural subjects, or for the salaries of teachers of trade, home economics, and industrial subjects, shall be conditioned that for each dollar of Federal money expended for such salaries the State or local community, or both shall expend an equal amount for such salaries; and that appropriations for the training of teachers of vocational subjects as herein provided, shall be conditioned that such money be expended for maintenance of such training and that for each dollar of Federal money so expended for maintenance, the State or local community, or both, shall expend an equal amount for the maintenance of such training.

The grant is for payment in part of salaries of teachers, supervisors, and directors of Agricultural subjects, for payments in part of salaries of teachers of trade, home economics, or industrial subjects, for payment toward the maintenance of the training of teachers in all these subjects.

The grant is made in accordance with the terms of a definite plan proposed by the State and approved by the Federal board. No money belongs to any State as of right. A state is entitled to receive Federal aid only when it has conformed to the act and has had its plan approved. No money belongs to any local community or to any institution as of right. Communities and institutions are entitled to money only as they show themselves able and ready to meet the requirements of the State board for vocational education. H. O. Sargant, Federal Board for vocational Educational, Washington, D. C., is special Federal Agent for agricultural work among Negroes. Detailed information may be obtained by addressing, "Federal Board for Vocational Education," Washington, D. C.

The amount, which under the Smith-Hughes act will go to each of the Southern states and the amount which, on the basis of per cent in population should be expended for Negroes, is shown in the tables which follow:

AMOUNT OF THE FEDERAL ALLOTMENTS, UNDER THE SMITH-HUGHES ACT, WHICH, ON THE BASIS OF THEIR PER CENT OF THE TOTAL POPULATION, THE RURAL POPULATION AND THE URBAN POPULATION, SHOULD BE EXPENDED FOR NEGROES IN 1922 AND 1923 IN EACH OF THE SOUTHERN STATES: FOR AGRICULTURE FOR TRADES AND FOR TEACHER TRAINING.

MUSIC.

The Future of Negro Music.

It is generally agreed that Negro music has a great future and as Mr. Will Marian Cook states, "Developed Negro Music has just begun in America. The colored American is finding himself. He has thrown aside puerile imitations of the white man. He has learned that a thorough study of the masters gives knowledge of what is good and how to create. From the Russian he has learned to get his inspiration from within; that his inexhaustible wealth of folklore legends and songs furnish him with material for compositions that will establish a great school of music and enrich musical literature."

The works of Burleigh, Dett and others indicate that this development will be built upon Negro Folk Music, and as Mr. Dett states, "We have this wonderful store of folk music—the melodies of an enslaved people, who poured out their longings, their griefs and their aspirations in the one great, universal language. But this store will be of no value unless we utilize it, unless we treat it in such manner that it can be presented in choral form, in lyric and operatic works, in concertos and suites and salon music—unless our musical architects take the rough timber of Negro themes and fashion from it music which will prove that we, too, have national feelings and characteristics, as have the European peoples whose forms we have zealously followed for so long.

The Origin of "Ragtime" Music.

According to Mr Will Marian Cook, "About 1898 marked the starting and quick growth of the so-called "ragtime". As for back as 1875 Negroes in questionable resorts along the Mississippi had commenced to evolve this musical figure, but at the World's Fair in Chicago "ragtime" got a running start and swept the Americans, next Europe, and today the craze has not diminished.

There was good reason for the instantaneous hit made by "ragtime." The public was tired of sing-song, samey, monotonous, mother, sister, father sentimental songs. "Ragtime" offered unique rythms, curious groupings of words and melodies which gave the zest of unexpectedness. Many Negroes—Irving Jones, Will Accooe, Bob Cole, the Johnson brothers, Gussie L. Davis, Sid Perrin, Ernest Hogan, Williams and Walker and others wrote some of the most celebrated songs of the day. In other instances white actors and song writers would hear in St. Louis such melodies as 'New Bully,' 'Hot Time,' etc., and change words (often unprintable) and publish them as their own creations."

The Origin Of Jazz Music.

The great popularity which "jazz" music has attained in this country and in Europe has caused a great deal of discussion to arise concerning its origin. It appears to be more or less agreed that so far as the United States is concerned it began in New Orleans, and that its origin can be traced to the West Indies and probably to Africa.

James Reese Europe, the King of "Jazz" music performers, in an article stated that, "I believe the term 'Jazz' originated with a band of four pieces which was known as 'Razz Band.' This band was of truly extraordinary composition. It consisted of a baritone horn, a trombone, a cornet, and an instrument made out of the chinaberry tree. This instrument is something like the clarinet, and is made by the Southern Negroes themselves. Strange to say, it can be used only while the sap is in the wood, and after a few weeks use has to be thrown away. It produces a beautiful sound and is worthy of inclusion in any band or orchestra. The four musicians of Razz's Band had no idea at all of what they were playing; they improvised as they went along, but such was their innate sense of rythm that

The Origin of "Ragtime" Music.

According to Mr Will Marian Cook, "About 1898 marked the starting and quick growth of the so-called "ragtime". As for back as 1875 Negroes in questionable resorts along the Mississippi had commenced to evolve this musical figure, but at the World's Fair in Chicago "ragtime" got a running start and swept the Americans, next Europe, and today the craze has not diminished.

There was good reason for the instantaneous hit made by "ragtime." The public was tired of sing-song, samey, monotonous, mother, sister, father sentimental songs. "Ragtime" offered unique rythms, curious groupings of words and melodies which gave the zest of unexpectedness. Many Negroes—Irving Jones, Will Accooe, Bob Cole, the Johnson brothers, Gussie L. Davis, Sid Perrin, Ernest Hogan, Williams and Walker and others wrote some of the most celebrated songs of the day. In other instances white actors and song writers would hear in St. Louis such melodies as 'New Bully,' 'Hot Time,' etc., and change words (often unprintable) and publish them as their own creations."

The Origin Of Jazz Music.

The great popularity which "jazz" music has attained in this country and in Europe has caused a great deal of discussion to arise concerning its origin. It appears to be more or less agreed that so far as the United States is concerned it began in New Orleans, and that its origin can be traced to the West Indies and probably to Africa.

James Reese Europe, the King of "Jazz" music performers, in an article stated that, "I believe the term 'Jazz' originated with a band of four pieces which was known as 'Razz Band.' This band was of truly extraordinary composition. It consisted of a baritone horn, a trombone, a cornet, and an instrument made out of the chinaberry tree. This instrument is something like the clarinet, and is made by the Southern Negroes themselves. Strange to say, it can be used only while the sap is in the wood, and after a few weeks use has to be thrown away. It produces a beautiful sound and is worthy of inclusion in any band or orchestra. The four musicians of Razz's Band had no idea at all of what they were playing; they improvised as they went along, but such was their innate sense of rythm that they produced something that was very taking. From the small cafes of New Orleans they graduated to the St. Charles Hotel, and after a time to the Winter Garden in New York, where they appeared, however, only a few days, the individual musicians being grabbed up by various orchestras in the city. Somehow in the passage of time Razz's Band got changed into 'Jazz's Band,' and from this corruption arose the term 'Jazz.'"

SOME COMPOSERS OF MUSIC.

During the days of slavery many Negroes in New Orleans were well educated. Among them were a number of persons who gained distinction as composers of music. Some of these were:

Dede, Edmund.—Author of "Le Sement de l'Arabe," "Le Palmier Overture."

Snaer, Samuel.—Author of "Le Chant du Depart," "Le Vampire."

Bares, Basil.—Author of "La Capricieuse Valse," "Delphine Valse Brailliante."

Lambert, Lucien.—Author of "Le Depart du Conscrit," "Les Ombers Aimers."

Lambert, Sidney.—Author of "Si J'estais Roi," "Muimures du Soir."

Hemmenway, James.—He lived in Philadelphia and was a contributor in 1829 to a musical journal, Atkinson's Casket. Among his compositions were: "That Rest So Sweet Like Bliss Above." "The Philadelphia Grand Entree March," and "Hunter and Hope Waltzes."

Conner, A. J.—From 1846 to 1857 he composed a number of musical selections which were published by Philadelphia and Boston music houses. Among his compositions were: "My Cherished Hopes My Fondest Dreams," American Polka Quardrilles," and "New York Polka Waltz."

Holland, Justin.—In the seventies he was a well known composer of guitar music in Cleveland, Ohio. Among his compositions are: "Holland's Comprehensive Methods for the Guitar," J. L. Peters and Company, New York, 1874; "Holland's Modern Method for the Guitar," S. Brainard and Sons, Cleveland, Ohio, 1876.

Milady, Samuel.—"Sam Lucas," noted actor and composer. Born August 7, 1848, died Jan. 10, 1916. First Negro writer of popular ballads, wrote "Grandfather's Clock Was Too Tall For The Shelf," etc.

Melburn, George.—A wandering Negro street minstrel, was the composer of "Listen to the Mocking Bird." It was set to music by a white man, Septemus Winner, who got the credit and the financial profits.

Bland, James.—He wrote "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia."

Davis, Gussie L.—A few years ago he was a prominent writer of popular music at Cincinnati. Among his well known works are: "The Lighthouse By the Sea," "The Baggage Coach Ahead," etc.

Coleridge-Taylor, Samuel.—Born London, August 15, 1875; died London, September 1, 1912. He was one of the most distinguished colored composers and one of the best known modern composers.

He was a son of a doctor of medicine, a native of Sierra Leone, Africa, and an English mother. At the age of six (in 1881) he began the study of the violin. At sixteen he entered the Royal College of Music and became a pupil of Villera Stanford. His many opus numbers included a symphony, a sonnet and various other works of chamber music, a cantata with Hiawatha for its epic hero, an oratorio, the musical settings of Stephen Phillips' "Herod," "Ulysses" and "Nero." Coleridge-Taylor's compositions are marked by variety and vigorous originality, by tenderness of feeling and by poetic imagination. They have something of the plaintive, wistful quality of plantation song. His best and most considerable scores are those written for the chorus, and it is by the Hiawatha trilogy that he is best known and will be longest remembered. It was through this production that he gained distinction and popularity on both sides of the Atlantic. Critical opinion agrees in regarding it as his masterpiece. His last choral work, "A Tale of Old Japan," was an unprecedented success.

It is esteemed almost as much as the Hiawatha trilogy. For biography see W. C. Berwick Sayers, "Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, His Life and Letters" New York, 1916. His son, Hiawatha Coleridge-Taylor is gradually taking his place as a composer and conductor. The son is the conductor of the noted, "String Players' Club," which the father founded.

Cook, Will Marian.—New York, Director of the noted Clef Club Orchestra and leader of the New York Syncopated Orchestra. Among his compositions are "The Rain Song," "The Casino Girl," "Bandanna Land," "Cruel Popupa," etc.

The Herald and Examiner of Chicago said of a performance by the New York Syncopated Orchestra that, "It was sublimated syncopation, the musical counter-part of our national motto "Step lively, please," by which in these so-called peaceful United States we live and move and have our being. It was a typical demonstration of the best in 'popular' music, at the hands of the masters of the craft.

Johnson, J. Rosamond.—New York, was born at Jacksonville Florida, 1873. He studied at the New England Conservatory of Music and has developed a new and distinct style of Negro music. He has written light operas for Klaw and Erlanger and songs for May Irwin, Lillian Russell and Anna Held.

Among his popular compositions are: "Under the Bamboo Tree," "The Cong Love Song," "My Castle on the Nile," "Lazy Moon." He composed the music for Klaw and Erlangers Extravaganza that ushered in the 20th century. In 1913 was the musical director of Hammerstein Opera House in London. He resigned and came to New York and opened up a studio and soon after took charge of the Music School Settlement. He is now known as "The Apostle of Negro Music Taken Seriously." Among his serious compositions are "Folk songs of the United States of America," and a number of pieces in larger forms notably; "Nobody Knows the Trouble I Have Seen," Since You Went Away," for chorus and a Fantasia for chorus and orchestra called, "Southland."

Thompson, DeKoven.—Chicago; "Dear Lord Remember Me," "If I Forget," "The Call of The Red, White and Blue," "A Heart Disclosed," "Love Comes But Once," etc.

Aldridge, Amanda Ira.—of London, daughter of Ira Aldridge, the famous actor, is a composer of note. She is known professionally as "Montague Ring." A number of her compositions have African themes.

A recent press report of a Drawing Room at Buckingham Palace, where the program included the "Four African Dances" said: "What African that heard the rendering her own pianoforte solo, 'The Call to the Feast,' can forget the drum of the Capalistic brotherhood of the Nigerian 'Osugbo' within the sacred square of the Para, the rythmic solemnity of the aristocratic dance of the chiefs, or the terminal scene of the great ceremony, when Adimu, Adamu, Ogunran and the 'Dancing Girls' whirl in gentel poetry of motion in the lengthening shadows of evening and the 'Call Home' dies away under the flickering glow of the first evening stars, which flash upon the tired resting limbs of a sleeping town. In 'Luleta's Dance' Montague Ring made the woodland ring with laughter, and the very trees to wave in sheer merriment. Her audience saw and heard the light tripping, seductive movement of Togoland 'Keri-Keri,' the Minuet grace of the Fanti 'Adenkum' and the almost tragic, but majestic measures of the Apolonian 'Kuntum.' The appreciation which they have obtained, leads us to hope that in Miss Ira Aldridge, African music has found a worthy successor to the late Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, so unhappily and so early taken from us."

Dett, R. Nathaniel.—Director of music, Hampton Institute. He has become widely known as a composer and choral conductor.

He is a graduate of the Oberlin Conservatory of Music and received from there the degree of Bachelor of Music for work in original composition. Among his most important compositions are: "Magnolia Suite," "In the Bottoms," "Hampton, my Home by the Sea," "Listen to the Lambs," "Marche Negre," "Arietta," "My Magic Song," "Open Yo' Eyes," "O Holy Lord," and "Music in the Mine."

Loving, Captain Walter.—Organizer and conductor of the famous Phillipine Constabulary Band, Manila which is generally considered to be one of the world's best bands. This band first became noted at the St. Louis World Fair Exposition in 1904. It made a tremendous hit at the Panama Specific Exposition at San Francisco in 1915. As a band conductor Captain Loving admits no superiors and it may be said few peers. He has now retired with rank of Major.

Europe, James Reese.—Died May 10th, 1919. Most noted Negro band leader in the world. His funeral was the first time a Negro was given a public funeral in New York City. He achieved Nation wide fame as the leader of the National Negro Orchestra of New York City and international fame as the leader of the 369th United States Infantry (15th New York) Regiment Band.

This Band was the most noted army band in Europe during the World War. It introduced and popularized jazz music in France and England. It was said of this band that, "Jim Europe's band followed the boys wherever they went, 'up the line,' back into the liberated French villages and down into the rest camp at Aix les Bains. They were constantly in demand and their music played no small part in keeping up the morale of our great army. After the war tide turned, Europe was ordered to take his band up to Paris. This city was slowly but surely shaking off the effects of her four long years of worry and anxiety, and Europe's jazzers at once became the rage, and received great ovations wherever they appeared. Jim Europe led this band at the great War Congress of Women in Paris and gave public concerts in friendly rivalry with the famous Garde Republicaine and the crack regimental bands of both the British and the Italian armies."

Some Singers of Prominence.

Greenfield, Elizabeth Taylor.—"The Black Swan," first came into prominence in 1851. She was born in Mississippi, was taken to Philadelphia, where she received her education and first came into prominence. She attracted much attention both in England and America, and was frequently compared with Jenny Lind, who was at that time at the height of her fame.

Selika, Madame Marie.—The next person of color to gain international fame as a singer was Madame Marie Selika, of Chicago. She became prominent in 1880.

In 1882, she visited Europe and achieved great success. The Paris Figaro said of her appearance in Paris: Mme. Selika sang in great style. She has a very strong voice of depth and compass, rising with perfect ease from C to C, and she trills like a feathered songster, whose notes suddenly fall upon your ear in the solitude of the woodland on a perfect day in June. Her range is marvellous and her execution and style of rendition show perfect cultivation Her 'Echo Song,' cannot be surpassed. It was beyond any criticism. It was an artistic triumph.

The Berlin Tagblatt, said of her appearance in Berlin: "The concert by Mme. Selika was given yesterday before a well filled house, and this distinguished artist gave us a genuine pleasure. Mme. Selika, with her singing, roused the audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm, and after her first Aria, she was twice recalled, and could quiet the vociferous applause only by rendering a selection with orchestral accompaniment. Of this wonderful singer, we can only say that she is endowed with a voice of surpassing sweetness and extraordinary compass. With her pure tones, her wonderful trills and roulades, her correct rendering of the most difficult intervals, she not only gains the admiration of amateurs, but also that of professional musicians and critics. It is almost impossible to describe the effect of her voice; one must hear it to appreciate its thrilling beauty." Madame Selika is at present teaching voice culture in New York City.

Batson, Flora.—Mrs. Bergen. The next singer of prominence was Flora Batson who became noted in 1887. She was born at Providence, R. I., 1870; she sang in Europe, Africa, Australia and New Zealand. During a great temperance revival in New York, she sang for ninety successive nights, with great effect, one song, "Six Feet of Earth Makes Us All One Size." She died at Philadelphia, Pa., December 2, 1906.

Jones, Madame Sisseretta.—"Black Patti," began to become prominent about 1890. She has sung with great success in all the principal cities of Europe. In recent years she had her own company, known as "The Black Patti Troubadours," at the head of which she appeared in every important city of the United States in the West Indies and Central America. At the head of this company for nineteen years. Only female star of either race touring with the same company for a similar period. Home 7 Wheaton St., Providence, R. I.

Hackley, Mrs. E. Azalia.—Of Chicago has for a number of years been a prominent singer. She has studied in Europe, is the author of "Guide to Voice Culture," and has done much to cultivate the musical instinct of the colored people. For the past several years she has been devoting her attention to conducting song festivals in many parts of the country, particularly in the South. Through these song festivals she is reviving popular interest in Negro spirituals.

Brown, Madame Anita Patti, of Chicago, is one of the most prominent singers of the race. She has a voice of rare quality. She has sung in the leading cities of the United States and in the West Indies.

For the past twenty years he has been a soloist in the St. George's Protestant Episcopal church, which is one of the leading churches of New York City and among its members were numbered such persons as the late Mr. Seth Low and the late Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, who was especially fond of his singing. Mr. Burleigh is also employed by the aristocratic Fifth Avenue Jewish Synagogue. His reputation was achieved as a concert and oratorio singer. He is also a composer of note. His compositions include two festival anthems, a set of six short piano pieces based on Negro folk songs, a Cycle of Saracen Songs, "The Glory of the Day Was in Her Face," "Her Eyes Twin Pools," "Your Eyes So Deep," "Your Lips are Wine," and "Il Giovine Guerriero." The small group of songs by which he is best known include "Deep River," "The Grey Wolf" to words by Symons: a superb setting of Walt Whitman's "Ethiopa Saluting The Colors," "The Soldier" and "Jean." The 1917 Spingarn Medal award was given to Mr. Burleigh.

Aldridge, Luranah A.—daughter of Ira Aldridge, the famous actor, is a contralto singer of note. She has appeared in all of the most important opera houses in England and on the Continent. "The great Charles Gounod, in a letter addressed to Sir Augustus Harris, said she possesses the most beautiful contralto voice he has ever heard."

Hodges, Hamilton.—He is a distinguished baritone singer from Boston, Massachusetts, who makes his home in Auckland, New Zealand, where he maintains a studio and is one of the leading singers in that island.

The New Zealand Free Lance recently said of him: "Mr. Hodges is helping to raise the standard of musical taste in this community, for he includes nothing tawdry in his program. He has a cultured, artistic judgment and as he is always on the alert for new music of a high standard, we are indebted to him for a knowledge of many fine songs."

Clough, Madam Estella P.—Worcester, Massachusetts, Dramatic Soprano Singer of Opera roles, has for many years been considered one of New Englands leading singers. She has appeared in concert and opera in many cities and states.

Hayes, Roland W.—By many competent critics is regarded as the first singer of the colored race and one of the most remarkable young tenors in America. He has a voice of great natural sweetness, purity and range. He has studied under Arthur J. Hubbard of Boston. Mr. Hayes is now in Europe where he is scoring a "veritable triumph." A critic in the London Times wrote "Mr. Hayes wields an almost—perfect instrument, a tenor voice of elastic range, steady and consistent at both extremes, capable at will of rare smoothness or resonant power.

Walker, Rachael.—Prima donna soprano of Cleveland, Ohio. Studied in Paris and London. In London, with Sir Henry J. Woode, conductor of the famous Queen Hall Orchestra. Miss Walker is one of the leading American singers. She is said to have made an instantaneous success on her first appearance in London. Was complimented by royalty.

Some other singers of prominence are: Maud J. Roberts, Chicago soprano; William H. Richardson, Boston, baritone; Uriah H. Richardson, Boston, basso; Clarence Tisdale, Chicago, tenor; John W. Work, Nashville, tenor. Mrs. Calloway Byron, Chicago, Dramatic soprano; Cleota J. Collins, Cleveland, soprano; L. B. Duppe, Springfield, Mass., baritone; Mrs. Florence Cole, Talbert, Detroit, lyric soprano; J. A. Myers, Nashville, tenor; Mrs. Jennie C. Lee, Director of Music Tuskegee Institute.

Instrumentalists.

Saint George, Chevalier of France; Born, 1745; died, 1799. He was born on the island of Guadeloupe, the son of a black woman and of a Frenchman, a Comptroller-General, M. De Boulogne. He was brought to France while very young and placed under the care of the most famous and skillful teachers.

He appears to have been, a "man of parts." He skated admirably, shone as a marksman, was an expert horseman and a finished dancer. His real talents however, concerned themselves with fencing and music. It was the combin tion of these two gifts which so completely challenged the admiration of France. "It is on his skill, however, as a musician, a violinist that Saint-George's fame most rests. He appealed to the imagination of the French people and many a saying, many a legend centered about this individual of mysterious origin who gained fame from the foil and the violin."

"In the winter of 1772-1773 he played at the Concert des Amateurs two concertos of his own for violin with orchestra. The Mercure, an important paper of the time, spoke of these concertos highly, and later they acquired considerable vogue; yet they were only a beginning to be followed in June, 1773, by six string quartets. This is especially significant since Laurencie declares that Gossec and Saint George were the first French musician to write string quartets. In 1777 his versatility took on a new turn and he essayed the theatre, presenting Ernestine a comedy at the Comedie Italienne. The libretto was not worth mentioning but the music was excellent, bearing a distinct flavor of Gluck. Later he produced The Hunt, (La Chasse) which succeeded fairly well. In 1792, he raised a body of light troops under the name of 'Saint-George's Legion,' recruited among men of color! This is easily the most amazing of his many amazing feats. One wonders where he found them".

Bridgetower, George Augustus Polgreen, violinist, musical prodigy, a friend of Beethoven. Born in Viala or Biala, Poland about 1780. Bridgewater was a son of an African father and a Polish or German mother. His father brought him to London in 1790. He made his first public appearance at the Drury Lane Theater, where he played a violin solo between parts of "The Messiah." He attracted the attention of the Prince of Wales who became his patron. In a series of concerts given in 1803, he received assistance from Beethoven. In 1803 Beethoven wrote the following commendatory letter concerning Bridgetower.

"Monsieur Baron Alexandre de Wetzlar. At home, on May 18th, although we have never spoken, I do not hesitate for all that to speak of the bearer, Mr. Bridgetower, as a master of his instrument, a very skilful virtuoso worthy of recommendation. Besides concertos, he plays in Quartets in a most praiseworthy manner and I wish very much that you would make him better known. He has already made the acquaintance of Lobkowtitz, Fries, and many other distinguished admirers. I believe that it would not be unwise to bring him some evening to Theresa Schonfeld's whom I know has many friends, or else at your home. I am sure you will be thankful to me for the acquaintance of this man, Leben Sie wohl, my dear Baron. Respectfully yours, Beethoven."

Bridgewater later fell into obscurity and died in London in 1860.

Joseph Douglass, of Washington, and Clarence Cameron White, of Boston, have achieved distinction as violinists. Carl Diton, of Philadelphia, Hazel Harrison, of Indianapolis, Mrs. Helen Hagan Williams, Morristown, N. J., are noted pianists.

Bethune, Thomas Greene.—"Blind Tom," noted musical prodigy. Born blind and a slave, near Columbus, Georgia, May 25, 1849. Died June 13, 1908.

From infancy he manifested an extraordinary fondness for musical sounds. Is said to have exhibited his musical talent before he was two years old. He played the piano when four years old, and was soon able to play everything he heard, not only the most difficult pieces, but he also imitated the birds, wind, rain, thunder, etc. Appeared in his first concert when eight years old. Traveled for years and gave concerts in every part of America and Europe. Could immediately play any selection by only hearing it once. One of the few great musical prodigies.

Boone, John William.—"Blind Boone," (Columbia, Mo.) Musical prodigy. Born May 17, 1864 at Miami, Missouri. When an infant lost eye-sight through disease.

In early childhood gave indication of musical ability. While not the equal of Blind Tom, Boome's talent manifests itself along much the same lines. His repertoire are imitations of a Train, A Musical Box, A Drummer Boy, A Tornado and selections from Beethoven and other great masters. Since 1880 Blind Boone has regularly toured the country in concert, principally in the Western States and Canada.

Hare, Mrs. Maud Cuney, Boston, Massachusetts, composer and author. For the past few years she has been engaged in lecture work. A notice in the Portland Oregonian said, "Perhaps the most pleasing, and without a doubt the most unique part of the whole program, was the music talks by Mrs. Hare in describing and explaining the Creole Folk Songs, before demonstrating each of them." She is the author of, "Six Creole Folk Songs," with original Creole and translated English text. She has also written, "The Message of the Trees," and "The Life of Norris Wright Cuney."

Douglass, Joseph Henry.—Grandson of Fredrick Douglass. He was born in Washington, D. C., July 3, 1871. He is a noted violinist.

Mr. Douglas graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music, studied a year in London and, also spent some time in the New York Conservatory of Music. For the past twenty years he has enjoyed distinction as a violin soloist. He has played before Presidents Taft and McKinley. Each year he makes a recital tour of the country. He is an instructor in instrumental music at Howard University, Washington, D. C.

White, Clarence Cameron.—The American Artists Review said recently "The Negro race has produced two violinists who have attracted national attention as artists, Clarence Cameron White, and Joseph H. Douglass. They occupy first rank among American musicians and the race is justly proud of them."

Mr. White received his early training under the best American violin teachers and when in Europe studied with the great Russian violinist, Mr. M. Zacharewitch. Mr. White is author of "A New System of One Octave Scale Studies for the Violin." He is also a composer. His Cradle Song for the violin and piano has been highly commended. His address is 802 Tremont Street, Boston.

NEGRO FOLK SONGS.

These songs more commonly called plantation melodies, originated with the Negroes of the South during the days of slavery. They have been somewhat extensively collected and written about.

Although there is connection in scale composition and in spontaneity with original African music, the imagery and sentiments expressed by the songs are the results of the conditions under which the slaves lived in America. These songs have for the Negro the same value that the folk songs of any people have for that people. In the days of slavery they furnished an outlet for aching hearts and anguished souls. Today they help to foster race pride and to remind the race of the "rock from which it was hewn." Some of these folk songs represented the lighter side of the slave's life, as for example,

"Heave away! heave away!
I'd rudder co't a yaller gal
Dan wuk foh Henry Clay.
Heave away! yaller gal, I want to go."

or the following:

"Ole Massa take dat new brown coat,
And hang it on de wall;
Dat darkey take dat same ole coat,
And wear it to the ball.
Oh, don't you hear my tru lub sing?"

It was in their religious songs, however, that they poured out their souls. Three things are especially emphasized in these songs. First, this life is full of sorrow and trouble.

"Nobody knows de truble I sees,
Nobody knows but Jesus."

Second, religion is the best thing in the world. It enables you, though a slave, to have joy of the soul, to endure the trials of this life, and finally to gain a home in Heaven.

Third, the future life is happy and eternal:

"We'll walk dem golden streets,
We'll walk dem golden streets,
We'll walk dem golden streets,
Whar pleasures nebber dies.

"Oh! I'se a-gwine to lib always,
Oh! I'se a-gwine to lib always,
Oh! I'se a-gwine to lib always,
When I git in de kingdom."

PAINTERS.

Bannister, E. M., of Providence, Rhode Island, was one of the first Negroes in America to achieve distinction as a painter. He was the founder of the Providence Art Club, which is to-day the leading art organization in Providence. "Its membership, mostly, if not wholly white, includes many of the leading citizens of the city and state." One of Mr. Bannister's pictures "Under the Oaks" was awarded a medal at the Centennial Exposition of 1876. The picture became the property of the Duffe Estate of New York City.

Tanner, Henry O., born June 21, 1859, at Pittsburgh, the son of Bishop Benjamin T. Tanner of the A. M. E. Church, is one of the most distinguished of present day American artists. He resides in Paris.

The French Government has purchased a number of his paintings for its collection of the modern arts in the Luxemburg Gallery. During the past two or three years comprehensive exhibitions of his paintings have been made in the leading art galleries of the United States. His favorite themes are scriptural. Some of his paintings that have attracted much attention are "The Holy Family," Mary and Elizabeth," Christ Walking on the Sea." "Christ Learning to Ride," "Hills Near Jerusalem," "The Hiding of Moses," "A Lady of Jerusalem," and "Christ at the Home of Lazarus."

Harper, William A., of Chicago, who died 1910, was just coming into prominence. His productions had received much favorable comment at the Chicago Art Institute exhibitions. He had spent two years in study in Paris. Among his subjects were "The Last Gleam," "The Hillside," and "The Gray Day."

Scott, William Edward.—He is a young artist of promise. He was born in Indianapolis, March 11, 1884. After graduating from the high school in that city, he entered the Chicago Art Institute where he studied for five years and won scholarship and prizes to the amount of about nine hundred dollars.

He took the Magnus Brand Prize for two successive years. He studied in Paris at the Julian Academy and under Henry O. Tanner. Three of his paintings were accepted by the Salon des Beaux Arts at Toquet. The Argentine Republic purchased one of his pictures, La Pauvre Voisine. He has completed Murad paintings for public buildings in Evaston, Illinois; Chicago and Indianapolis. He is interesting himself in Negro subjects and is doing in painting what Dunbar has done in verse. He is now spending considerable time in the South painting Negro types.

Among other painters who are beginning to attract attention are: W. M. Farrow, Chicago; Ernest Atkinson of Baltimore, Cloyd L. Boykins, Boston; Mrs. Lula Adams, Los Angeles; Charles L. Dawson, Chicago; Richard Lonsdale Brown, New York City; Laura Wheeler, Philadelphia; Effie Lee, Wilberforce; Arthur Winston, Chicago and John Hardwick, Indianapolis.

SCULPTORS.

Two women of the race have achieved some distinction as sculptors. The first of these is Edmonia Lewis, who was born in New York in 1845. She first attracted notice by exhibiting in 1865 in Boston a bust of Robert Gould Shaw. That same year she went to Rome where she has since continued to reside. Her most noted works are. "The Death of Cleopatra," "The Marriage of Hiawatha," and "The Freed Woman. "The Death of Cleopatra" was exhibited at the Philadelphia Centennial Exhibition in 1876.

Warrick, Meta Vaux., (Mrs. Fuller, the wife of Dr. Solomon C. Fuller, of South Framingham, Mass.), is the most noted sculptor of the Negro race in America at the present time. She first attracted attention by her work in clay in the Pennsylvania School of Industrial Art.

In 1899 she went to Paris to study, where she attracted the attention of Rodin, the great French sculptor. In 1903 she exhibited, in the Paris salon, a group entitled "The Wretched." This is considered her masterpiece. Some of her other works are, "The Dancing Girl," "The Wrestlers," and "Carrying the Dead Body." One of her groups which was made for the Jamestown Ter Centennial represents the advancement of the Negro since his introduction into this country as a slave in 1619. Her more recent works are: "Immigrant In America," "The Silent Appeal," and "Peace Halting The Ruthlessness of War."

Jackson, Mrs. May Howard.—Washington, D. C. In recent years her work has attracted attention. Some of her busts exhibited in the Vorhoff Art Gallery provoked favorable comment from the art critic of the Washington Star. A head of a model in clay which was placed on exhibition in the Corcoran Art Gallery received favorable comment from the art critics. Pieces of her sculpture exhibited at the National Academy of Design and at the showing of the Society of Independent Artists in New York City, were favorably received.

POETS.

Latino, Jaun.—The poet, Latino mentioned in Cervante's "Don Quixote," was a Negro. He is said to have been born in Northern Africa and to have been captured by Spanish traders, brought to Seville and sold in the family of the famous Gonzalo de Cordova.

He is said to have had great ability for learning. He was permitted to study along with his young master. He was given his freedom and became professor of Grammar, Latin and Greek at the University of Granada. One Spanish writer speaks of Latino as the most famous Negro of his day. He is buried in the church of St. Ann, Granada, and on his tomb is engraved the following epitaph:

"Jaun was an excellent Latin poet. He sang the birth of Prince Ferdinand II, the deeds of Pius V's pontificate and the time of Don Jaun of Austria at Lepanto." The book a quarto volume, is printed in Latin and was published at Granada in 1573. Another book in Latin by Latino is on the Spanish Royal Cemetery, a better known title is the Escurial. This book was published at Granada in 1576.

Antar.—Antarah ben Shedad el Absi (Antar the lion) is one of the most famous figures in Arabic and Mohammedan literature. His fame as a literary character is said to be greater than that of any modern author of Negro blood not excluding Pushkin in Russia, or the elder Dumas in France. Antar appears to have been born about 550 A. D. and to have died about 615, A. D. His father appears to have been an Arab of noble blood, and his mother, an Abysinnian slave.

Antar was both a warrior and a poet. As a warrior he became the protector of the tribe and the pattern of Arabic chivalry. He was selected by his clan as a contestant in those poetical contests that were peculiar to the Arabs in the pre-Islamic days. In those poetical contests, Antar was so successful that he came to be acknowledged as the greatest poet of his time, and one of his odes, the "Mu Allakat" was selected as one of the seven suspended poems which were judged by the assemblage all the Arabs to be worthy to be written in letters of gold and to be hung on high in the sacred Kaabah at Mecca as accepted models of Arabian style. After his death the fame of his deeds as a warrior spread across the Arabian peninsula and throughout the Mohammedan world. In time these deeds were recorded in a literary form. "The Romance of Antar," ranks among the great national classics like the Shah-nameh of Persia and the "Nibelungen-Lied," of Germany. Antar is claimed to have been the father of knighthood "The Romance of Antar" in its present form probably preceded the romance of chivalry so common in the twelfth century in Italy and France. The unanimous opinion of the East has always placed the romance of Antar at the summit of literature. "The Thousand and One Knights," says one of their writers, "is for the amusement of women and children. Antar is a book for men from it they learn lessons of heroism, of magnanimity, of generosity and of statescraft."

Pushkin, Alexander Sergeyevitch.—Born 1799, died 1837. The greatest poet of Russia. He came of a noble Moscow family and inherited African blood from a maternal ancestress. For sketches of Pushkin, see Histories of Russian Literature and Standard Encyclopedias. He wrote both poetry and prose. Among his poems are: "Recollection of Tsarskoye Selo," "Ruslan and Lyudmila," and the "Prisoner of the Caucasus." There are numerous editions of his works. For these consult the New International Encyclopedia.

Dumas, Alexander.—called Dumas Pere, born 1802, died 1870. "The greatest French romantic novelist and the most universally read story-teller of the world. As a writer he is remarkable for great creative rather than for artistic genius.

Dumas's father was a gallant general, Alexander Davy de la Pailleterie Dumas, who served Napoleon with distinction, but died in neglect in 1806. This general's father was a rich colonist of Haiti, Marquis Alexandre Davy de la Pailleterie; his mother was a Negro woman of Haiti, from whom the general took the name Dumas. The novelist, Alexandre, inherited much from his maternal grandmother, in both appearance and nature; much too, from his marquis grandfather. The contrast and combination can be constantly noted in his novels.

Dumas, Alexander, called Dumas Fils born 1824, died 1885. One of the most distinguished of modern French dramatists. He was "the son of the great Demantic novelist of like name, but of a genius strangely contrasted. In him the father's rich but riotous fancy yielded to close observation and realistic earnestness that made of him an unbending and almost a Puritan moralist."

Horton, George M.—Noted Negro poet of N. Carolina. He was born a slave in Chatham county of that state in 1797. His master permitted him to hire out his time at Chapel Hill, seat of the University of North Carolina. It is said that he learned to read by matching words he knew in the hymnal with those in a spelling book. Persons of distinction became interested in him.

It is said that Dr. Caldwell the President of the University was one of his patrons. Horton's earliest compositions had to be written down for him by other people. He was for years janitor at the University and received small commissions from various students for writing verses for them. Some of Horton's friends undertook to help him publish a volume of his poems so that from its sale he might purchase nis freedom. A booklet of his poems "The Hope of Freedom," was published in 1829. The small returns from the sale of this book, however, were not sufficient to pay the exorbitant price which this master demanded for him. In his later years Horton lived for some time in Philadelphia and died according to accounts either in 1880 or 1883.

Wheatly, Phillis.—Born in Africa, died December 5, 1784. One of the first women, white or black, to attain literary distinction in this country.

She was brought when a child to America in 1761, and sold to John Wheatley, of Boston. He had her educated. While yet a child she began to write verses. In 1773, with the endorsement of several distinguished men, her verses were published in London, under the title "Poems on Various Subjects, Religious and Moral, by Phillis Wheatley, Negro Servant to Mr. John Wheatley, of Boston, in New England." She addressed a poem to General Washington, which seemed to have pleased him, for in a letter to Joseph Reed, dated February 10, 1776, he made reference to this poem.

Hammon, Jupiter—He appears to have been the first Negro poet in the English American colonies. As a poet he antedates Phillis Wheatley by about ten years. He was a slave near Hartford, Conn. He went finally to live on Long Island. He was also a preacher. Several of his sermons are still in existence. For sketch of his life and extracts from his poetry and prose writings, see "Jupiter Hammon," by Oscar Wegelin, Heartman's Historical Series, No. 13, 1916.

Dunbar, Paul Laurence.—Noted poet and writer. Born June 27, 1872, at Dayton, Ohio; died February 9, 1906.

Graduated from the Dayton High School 1891. While in school he showed evidence of poetic ability. In 1893, his first volume of poetry, "Oak and Ivy," was published. 1895-1896, "Majors and Minors." By this time he had become well known as a writer and reader of verse. For a complete list of his works see in section below, Bibliographies, under "Books by Negro Authors."

Braithwaite, William Stanley.—Born, Boston, December, 1868. Noted lyrical poet. At twelve years of age his father having died he had to leave school to assist his mother provide for the family. Since that time he has not attended school.

"At fifteen," he says, "like a revelation, there broke out in me a great passion for poetry, an intense love for literature, and a yearning for the ideal life which fosters the creation of things that come out of dreams and visions and symbols. I dedicated my future to literature, though the altar upon which I was to lay my sacrificial life seemed beyond all likelihood of opportunity and strength and equipment to reach. I set about it, however, with fortitude, hope, and patience,'

His works include "Lyrics of Life and Love," "The Book of Elizabethan Verse," 1906, "The House of Falling Leaves," 1908; "The Book of Georgian Verse," 1908; "The Book of Restoration Verse," 1909; "The Book of Victorian Verse," 1910. At the end of each year Mr. Braithwaite writes a review of the poetry that appears in the standard magazines. His estimate of the value of this poetry is accepted as a criterion of its worth. He has published for each year since 1913, "The Anthology of Magazine Verse." In 1916 he became editor of "The New Poetry Review" of Cambridge. He is the general editor of "The Contemporary American Poets Series." The 1918 Spingarn Medal award was given to him.

Johnson, James W., New York, Field Secretary for National Association for The Advancement of Colored People, Editorial writer He is gifted as a poet. He has contributed verse to the leading magazines and daily papers. His poem, "Fifty Years," in Commemoration of the Fiftieth Anniversary of Emancipation, published in the New York Times, January 1, 1913, was widely commented upon. For eight years Mr. Johnson was in the United States Consular service. He held for a considerable part of this time the important post of consul at Corinto, Nicaragua. His poem the "Young Warrior," set to music by H. T. Burleigh almost became the national hymnal of Italy during the World War. Mr. Johnson has published collection of his verses under the title, "Fifty Years and Other Poems."

Corrothers, James D.—Born, Cass County, Michigan, July 2, 1869; died February 12, 1917. He was a poet and writer of some distinction. He was a Baptist minister of Washington, D. C. For the fifteen years he contributed verse to the Century and other magazines.

Margeston, George Reginald, Cambridge, Massachusetts. He is said to be a promising writer. He has recently published a volume entitled, "Songs of Life."

Johnson, Fenton.—Born, Chicago, 1888. He is attracting attention as a poet. His recent volume of poetry, "A Little Dreaming," has received favorable mention in this country and in Europe.

Anderson, Alfred, Chicago, has also written some good verse. He is associate editor of the Chicago Defender.

Among other poets for whom there is not opportunity to give space should be mentioned the following:—James Edwin Campbell, Daniel Webster Davis (deceased), William H. A. Moore, George Marion McClellan, John Wesley Holloway, Leslie Pinckney Hill, Edward Smyth Jones, Ray G. Dandrige, Georgia Douglas Johnson, Claude McKay, Joseph S. Cotter, jr., (deceased), Roscoe C. Jamison, Jessie Faucet, Anne Spencer, Alex Rogers, Waverly Turner Carmicheal, Alice Dunbar Nelson, Charles Bertram Johnson, Otto Leland Bohanan, Theodore Henry Shackleford, Lucian B. Watkins, (deceased), Joshua Henry Jones, Jr

ACTORS.

Aldridge, Ira.—Born about 1810 at Bel Air, Maryland. Died at Lodz, Poland, in 1867. He is the most famous of Negro actors. He has had few equals in the part of Othello, the Moor.

Aldridge's grandfather, who was a ruling prince in the Senegal Country in Africa, was with all his family except one son, murdered in an uprising. This son came to America and was educated for the ministry. In time he married. The son Ira was also intended for the ministry. He was sent to Schenectady College in New York. Thence he was sent to Glasgow University, Scotland, where he carried off many prizes, including the medal for composition. He, however, abandoned theology for the stage. After many disappointments he made his debut at the Royal Theatre, London, in 1873, as Othello, the Moor.

He also appeared at the Coburg, Sadler's Wells, Olympia, and Covent Garden Theaters in London, playing Othello, Gambia (in "The Slave"), and other characters with great success. After this he made a provincial tour, playing in most of the principal towns from one end of the kingdom to the other, his reception in every instance being of the most flattering kind. At Belfast, Edmund Kean showed his admiration by playing Iago to Aldridge's Othello. At Manchester, the famous singer, Madame Malibran, wrote him that never in her whole professional career had she witnessed such an interesting and powerful performance. Lady Beecher (famous as Miss 'Niel' the actress) wrote: "During my professional as well as private life I never have seen so correct a portraiture of Othello." The King of Prussia presented him the Prussian "Gold Medal of the first class for Art and Science," which had been previously awarded only to the great philosopher Humboldt, the composer Spontini and the musician Liszt. The Emperor of Austria conferred on him the Grand Cross of the Order of Leopold. The City of Berne gave him a magnificent Maltese Cross with Medal of Merit. He also received the "Royal Saxe-Ernest House Order" which confers a title higher than that of "Sir" so much coveted in England. Aldridge had a reception even more flattering in Russia. He was made a member of the Imperial Academy of Arts and Sciences in St. Petersburg, and of many other honorable and learned societies. In most cases the membership was conveyed by means of handsome medals, accompanied in many cases by autograph letters. His widow and his two gifted daughters, Amanda Ira (Montague Ring,) and Luranah, reside in London. See sketches above under composers and singers.

Cole, Robert Allen, "Bob Cole."—Noted comedian and playright. Born Athens, Georgia, July 1, 1868. Died New York City, August 2, 1911. One of the most versatile and gifted colored actors that America has produced. A member of the famous Cole and Johnson Team and Company.

He was a pioneer in the effort to have the Negro show an entity in itself with a plot and atmosphere of its own. Among the plays which he wrote are "A Trip to Coontown," "A Shoo Fly Regiment," and "The Red Moon." Among the songs which he composed are "Louisiana Lize," "I Must Have Been A Dreaming," "No One Can Fill Her Place," "Katydid," "The Cricket and The Frog," and "The Maiden With Dreamy Eyes." He and his partner, J. Rosamond Johnson together wrote "Under The Bamboo Tree," "Big Indian Chief," Bleeding Moon," and "Oh, Didn't He Ramble."

Williams, (Bert) Egbert Austin.—Born, New Providence, Nassau, British Bahama Islands, 1876. Died, New York City March 4, 1922. Most noted comedian of the present day American stage. The Billboard of March 11, 1922 the chief organ of the theatrical and the show profession carried the following obituary concerning him.

Egbert Austin Williams, known to the theatrical profession and the public as Bert Williams, and regarded by many as the greatest comedian on the American stage, died at his home in New York City, March 4th, a victim of pneumonia. He collapsed on the stage in Detroit, Monday, February 27th while appearing in "Under the Bamboo Tree," and was taken to New York on Thursday, when it was found he was suffering from pneumonia. Blood transfusion was ordered, but Williams failed to react.

"Bert Williams was born in New Providence, British Bahamas, in 1876, and was taken to New York by his father, a papier mache maker, at the age of two years. Soon afterward the family moved to Riverside, Cal., where young Williams grew up and graduated from the local high school. He studied civil engineering in San Francisco. His first theatrical experience was with a mountebank minstrel company that played the mining and lumber camps in that section. In 1895 he joined George Walker in a partnership which lasted until the latter's death in 1909. They made the name of Williams and Walker famous throughout the English-speaking world. Their first appearance in New York was in 1896 and 1897, at Tony Pastor's and Koster and Bial's. Later they headed their own company."

Among the productions made famous by this team were: "The Policy Players, "Bandanna Land," and "Abyssinia." The latter attraction ran ten weeks on Broadway, in those days a record for a colored attraction. In 1902 the company was taken to England, where it duplicated its American success. On June 23 of that year a command appearance was made at Buckingham Palace."

When illness compelled the retirement of George Walker, Williams took out "Mr. Lode of Coal" with indifferent success. This was his last appearance with with colored support. After its close he played for a time in vaudeville, and then joined the Ziegfeld "Follies," remaining as the feature attraction for seven years. During 1918-19 he was with "Broadway Brevities," and opened last season in "The Pink Slip," which, after some unfavorable criticism, closed on the road. The piece was rewritten and named, "Under the Bamboo Tree," opening in Cincinnati last December, and enjoying a successful run in Chicago later. It was due in New York in three weeks, and it was Williams' great ambition to reach Broadway with this show.

While playing in Edinburgh, Scotland, Williams and other members of his company were made members of the Waverly Lodge of Masons. Williams also was a member of the Actors' Equity Association, and held the rank of Captain in the Eighth Regiment, National Guard of Illinois. He was married in 1900, and is survived by his widow, two nieces and his mother.

Gilpin, Charles S.—Actor. He has achieved notable distinction in the drama and was the most talked of actor on the stage in America in 1921. He was born in Richmond, Virginia in the early seventies. His first occupation was as "printer's devil," on the Richmond Planet. His own statement is that he drifted into acting, (fourth rate comedian work), because he earned so little money in the printing trade. In time he had a desire to do serious dramatic work and was one of the organizers in 1906 of the Pekin Players in Chicago. His efforts with reference to the serious drama were later continued in New York City. He says, "In 1916 I began producing last year's Broadway shows at the Lafayette Theater in 132nd Street. When Drinkwater's Abraham Lincoln was being staged difficulty was experienced in securing an actor to play William Custis, the Negro character in the play. This unimportant role was given to Gilpin and attracted attention to his ability.

When the Provincetown Players staged, "Emperor Jones," Gilpin was secured to take the leading part. The play was to go on for two weeks and is still running. Concerning Mr. Gilpin's ability as an actor, the critic in the New York Times said, "Of course Charles S. Gilpin continues to give his amazing unforgettable performance. It is superb acting and the success of the O'Neil play is dependent upon it." Gilpin was selected by the Drama League of New York City as one of the persons who had contributed the most during the year to the art of the theater. The other nine persons selected for this honor were: Dudley Digges, director of "Heartbreak House;" Gilda Varesi, for her work in "Enter Madame;" Lionel Atwill, for his acting in "Deburau;" Lee Simonson, scenic artist for "Heartbreak House;" Margaret Severn, for her use of masks in the "Greenwich Village Follies;" Jacob Ben-Ami, for his work in "Samson and Delilah;" David Belasco, as manager and director; and Fred Stone, for being the leading American comedian.

Johnson, Noble M.—Most noted moving picture actor of the race. He has had years of experience before the camera and has been employed by the largest moving picture company in the World.

He gained much publicity as the star in the "Trooper of Troop K," a three part photo play, commemorating the bravery of the Tenth Calvary Battalion at Carrizal. Johnson was featured in the great Universal serial, the "Bulls Eye," as "Sweenie Bodin" a renegade cow puncher. He had already starred in such well known photo dramas as "Intolerance" "The Western Governor's Humanity" and "The Death Warrant."

Dramatic Art Readers.—A number of Negroes have achieved considerable distinction in the field of dramatic art as readers. Among the more famous and prominent of these are: Miss Hallie Q. Brown, Wilberforce, Ohio; Mrs. Henrietta Vinton Davis, Washington; Mrs. Francis E. Motin, St. Louis; Richard B. Harrison, Chicago, Charles Winter Wood, Tuskegee, Alabama; and Miss Ruby C. Pelleford, Sabina, Ohio.

SPORTS.

Pugilism.

It is said that Negroes were the pioneers in American pugilism and the first Champion in America was a Negro slave, Tom Molineaux, of Richmond, Virginia, who in the first part of the eighteenth century won his freedom by winning a $100,000 stake for his master, Algeron Molineaux who had wagered this amount that he could produce a black man that could whip any other slave that could be produced.

Tom Molineaux, after defeating all comers in America went to England 1810, where he was defeated by Tom Cribb, the British Champion on December 8, 1810. The most noted of the Negro pugilists are Peter Jackson contemporary of (John L. Sullivan and James Corbett,) George Dixon, Joe Gans, Joe Walcott, Dixie Kidd, Joe Jeannette, Sam Langford, Sam McVea, Henry Wills and Jack Johnson.

Pugilistic Champions.

Heavy weights, (158 lbs.) Jackson, 1908-1915.
Welter weights 145 lbs.) Joe Walcott, 1901-1904; Dixie Kid, 1904-1908.
Light weights (133 lbs.) Joe Gans, 1902-1908.
Feather weights (122 lbs.) George Dixon, 1892-1897 and 1898-1900.
Bantam weights (116 lbs.) George Dixon, 1890-1892.

Baseball.

Some of the best professional baseball teams are composed of Negroes such as the American Giants of Chicago, The Lincoln Giants of New York City, etc. It is generally conceded that there are many Negro players who are equals of the big League players and it is only their color which keeps them out of the big Leagues.

When the first National Association of baseball players was organized in Philadelphia, December 11, 1867, it was recommended that colored clubs be excluded from representation in the Association. The precedent then established has since been followed and was construed to include individuals as well as Clubs. Some Negroes, however, in spite of these restrictions became members of professional teams. Moses F. Walker, a Negro was catcher for Toledo of the Northwestern League in 1883 and remained with Toledo, when in 1884 it became a member of the American Association, a major League Organization. Frank Grant, a Negro was a second base man, in 1886, on the Meriden (Connecticut) team of the Eastern League which dropped out before the close of the season. Grant finished that season with a Buffalo team, also of the Eastern League. He played four years with this team and is said to have been regarded as the equal of any second base man in the country. In 1890 he was with the Harrisburg team of the Pennsylvania State League. He then dropped out and was the last Negro in organized baseball.

Foot Ball.

A number of Negroes have achieved distinction as foot ball players on leading University and College teams. Among the players who achieved distinction in former days were:

Lewis, at Harvard, (One of the greatest centers the game has ever produced); Taylor, at Pennsylvania; Marshall, at Minnesota (All American left end, 1905-1906); Bullock, at Dartmouth; Grey and Pinkett, at Amherst; Ayler at Brown; Chadwell at Williams; Craighead at Masschusetts Agriculture College; Jones at Harvard; Ransom at Beloit; Young and Wheeler, at Illinois; Johnson and Ross at Nebraska, Green at Western Reserve and Roberts at Colorado College.

Among the Negro foot ball players who have achieved distinction in more recent days are: Tibbs, at Syracuse; Smith at Michigan Agriculture College, (Tackle, All Western Eleven); Brown and Morrison at Tufts; Pollard at Brown (All American Half Back, 1916) Robeson, at Rutgers (All American end, 1918.); West at Washington and Jefferson and Slater at Iowa; (Tackle, All Western Eleven and All American Eleven 1921.)

Track and Field.

Some of the best performers in Track and Field work in Universities and Colleges have been Negroes. The most notable of these are: J. B. Taylor, at Pennsylvania, 440 yards; Fred White, at Pennsylvania, short and middle distance runner; W. R. Granger at Dartmouth, half miler. A. L. Jackson, at Harvard, Hurdles. Theodore Cable, at Harvard, Hammer Throw; Irving Howe, at Colby, short distance runner; Fritz Pollard, at Brown, Hurdles; Binga Dismond at Chicago, 440 yards; Sol Butler at Drake, all round athlete, short and middle distance runs and jumping; Howard P. Drew, at Springfield, Y. M. C. A. College and University Southern California, short distance runner. R. C. Craig, Michigan Agricultural College, Short distance runner; and Edwin O. OCCUPATIONS.

The 1920 Census reports on occupations are not yet available. For this reason the figures from the 1910 Census are used. During the period of the World War the number of Negroes in the trades and industries greatly increased. Available information indicates that there is a tendency to continue to employ a considerable number of these Negroes. Bulletin Number 20 of the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, issued in 1922, gives suggestive and confirmatory information along this line. The bulletin gives the results of investigations of Negro women in industry before, during and since the War. The following is the summary of the conclusions reached.

> "We wouldn't continue to employ Negro women if their production was not satisfactory.' This is the tenor of the remarks made by employers of Negro women to agents of the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, who set out to discover the conditions under which Negro women were working in industry. Four-fifths of the employers of Negro women whose establishments were investigated by the Women's Bureau expressed this idea and said that Negro women in industry had no faults which were not common to all other labor. About 90 per cent of the employers interviewed said they expected to continue to employ Negro women, and many of them stated that there was no difference in the quantity and quality of the product of their Negro and white women employees and that the Negro women caused no greater loss of material in the processes of production. Of 63 managers who reported on the subject of punctuality 54 found no difference in the punctuality of the two groups. The majority of the managers considered that labor turnover was about equal for the two races. What complaints were made about Negro women as industrial workers can be accounted for, the Women's Bureau thinks, by the lack of industrial experience and routine working habits among these women. Labor turnover and unreliability as to attendance the Negro women themselves often attributed to undesirable conditions on a job which had been taken merely to tide over until something better could be found."

In 1910 the number of Negroes 10 years of age and over in gainful occupations was: 5,192,535, or 71.0 per cent of total Negro population of this age; by sex the number was, males, 3,187,554; females, 2,013,981. Negroes constitute 13.6 per cent of all persons in gainful occupations.

Negroes Making Gains in the Trades.

The census report on occupations for 1900 appeared to indicate that in such trades as carpentry, plastering, blacksmithing, etc., Negroes were losing ground. The 1910 report of the census on occupations indicates that the Negro has made gains in practically all the trades in which he appeared in 1900 to be losing ground.

Negroes Increasing As Factory Workers.

In recent years there has been a large increase in the number of Negroes working in factories. The Negro workers in factories are to a large extent doing the rougher, cruder, and semi-skilled work. Many, however, in every phase of factory industries are doing the most highly skilled work. The general tendency for the Negro factory worker appears to be upward. In 1900 the number was 131,216; in 1910, the number was 358,180, an increase of 226,964; or 173 per cent. The number of Negroes employed in textile industry factories in 1900 was 2,949; in 1910 the number was 11,333, an increase of 283 per cent.

A Large Number of Negroes Engaged in Business.

Excluding 10,601 boarding and lodging housekeepers, there were in 1910 according to the census 38,382 Negroes engaged in business enterprises of various sorts. This did not include those operating barber, blacksmith and shoe shops, and several other classes of business connected with trades for which separate returns for proprietors and employees were not made. Probably 5,000 or more should have been added for persons operating those businesses, making the total about 43,000. It is estimated that there are now 50,000 or more Negroes engaged in business.

The World War Conditions and Negro Occupations.

The general effect on the Negroes of the United States, of the conditions brought about by the World War, was to greatly increase the number of occupations in which they are engaged. Just how great this effect has been can not be definitely ascertained, until the 1920 census reports are available. That the changes however, have been very great is indicated by the following:

A study of the occupations of Negro women in New York under the title "A New Day for the Colored Woman Worker (2)," said: "Two years ago any discussion of Colored women in industry would have been met with the question, 'But are there any Colored women working in shops and factories?' And with good reason, for the Colored woman is a newcomer in the field of industry. Individuals, it is true, had found their way into special places long ago, but industry as a whole had never accepted them. The following table indicates in general the hospitality of the trades covered to the experiment of employing Colored women."

The Negro And The Trades Union.

The Negro is making gains in the unions. At the 1910 annual meeting of the National Council of the American Federation of Labor a resolution was unanimously passed inviting Negroes and all other races into the Labor Federation. The officers of the Federation were instructed to take measures to see that Negro workmen as well as workmen of other races were brought into the union. In 1913 this action was reaffirmed.

Many years ago the American Federation of Labor declared for the thorough organization of all working people without regard to sex, religion, race, politics, or nationality; that many organizations affiliated with the A. F. of L. have within their membership Negro workmen with all other workers of their trades, and the A. F. of L. has made and is making every effort within its power for the organization of these workmen.

In 1913 nine out of sixty of the most important unions barred Negroes from membership. These unions are: "The International Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees," "Switchmen's Union," "Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen," "Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen," "Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineer," "Order of Railway Conductors of America," "Order of Railway Telegraphers," "American Wire Weavers' Protective Association" and the "International Brotherhood Boiler Makers, Iron Shipbuilders and Helpers of America." Fifty-one national labor organizations, several of which are the strongest in the country, reported that there was nothing in their Constitution prohibiting the admittance of Negroes.

The question of the Negroes and the Labor Unions was considered at the 1916, the 1917 and the 1918 annual conventions of the American Federation of Labor and steps were taken to organize Negroes not then affiliated with the Unions. At the 1919 Annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, it was formally decided to open the doors of organized labor unconditionally to Negroes.

At the 1921 convention of the American Federation of Labor efforts to wipe out the color line in organized labor failed. In the course of the discussion President Gompers said, "The American Federation of Labor has previously declared that it is the duty of all workers to organize regardless of sex, nationality, political belief or color." Continuing he said, "The Federation, however, cannot force this view upon individual or affiliated unions without their consent.

One of the significant aspects of the problem of the Negro and organized labor is the recently developed tendency of Negro labor to organize itself independent of white labor unions. The chief reasons for the development of these independent Negro labor unions are that it is felt that Negro labor is not receiving a square deal at the hands of white labor and that although the American Federation of Labor advises that Negroes be received into labor unions on the same footing as whites there is no effective means of enforcing this recommendation.

INVENTIONS.

Benjamin Banneker.—Noted Negro Astronomer. Born free, November 9, 1731, in Baltimore County, Maryland. Received some education in a pay school. Early showed an inclination for mechanics. About 1754, with imperfect tools, constructed a clock which told the time and struck the hour. This was the first clock constructed in America.

James Forten, of Philadelphia, who died in 1842, is credited with the invention of apparatus for managing sails. Robert Benjamin Lewis, born in Gardiner, Maine, 1802, invented a machine for picking oakum. This machine, in all its essential particulars, is said to still be used by the ship-building interests of Maine.

The first Negro to receive a patent on an invention was Henry Blair, of Maryland, who, in 1834 and 1836, was granted patents on a corn harvester. He is supposed to have been a free Negro. A number of inventions were made by slaves. It has been claimed, but not verified that a slave either invented the cotton gin or gave to Eli Whitney who obtained a patent for it, valuable suggestions to aid in the completion of that invention.

In 1858 the Commissioner of patents ruled and the Attorney General of the United States concurred that a slave could neither take out a patent on an invention nor assign his invention to his master. The same question came up in connection with the invention of a boat propeller by Benjamin T. Montgomery, a slave of Jefferson Davis, President of the late Confederate States. Having unsuccessfully tried to have his slave's invention patented, President Davis had the Confederate Congress pass a law permitting a slave to assign his invention to his master. The law was:

"And be it further enacted, that in case the original inventor or discoverer of art, machine or improvement for which a patent is solicited is a slave, the master of such slave may take an oath that the said slave was the original; and on complying with the requisites of the law shall receive a patent for said discovery or invention, and have all the rights to which a patentee is entitled by law."

Sometime after the Dred Scott Decision, 1857, The Patent Office refused a a Negro of Boston a patent on an invention on the ground that according to this decision he was not a citizen of the United States and therefore a patent could not be issued to him. December 16, 1861, Senator Charles Summer, on behalf of this Negro inventor, offered the following resolution in the Senate:

"Resolved, That the Committee on Patents and the Patent office be directed to consider if any further legislation is necessary in order to secure to persons of African descent, in our country, the right to take out patents for useful inventions, under the Constitution of the United States."

The Committee made no report on the resolution. It was a case for interpretation rather than legislation. The matter was settled in 1862 by an opinion of the Attorney-General, relating to passports, that a free man of color born in the United States is a citizen. It is reported that ice cream was invented by Augustus Jackson, a Negro confectionery dealer of Philadelphia.

The Patent Office, which does not record the race of the patentees has, by investigation, verified over 800 patents which have been granted to Negroes. It estimated that more than this number which are unverified, have been granted, and that Negroes hold patents on over 2,000 inventions.

The records of the Patent Office show that Negroes have applied their inventive talent to a wide range of subjects; in agricultural implements, in wood and metal-working machines, in land conveyances on road and track, in sea-going vessels, in chemical compounds, in electricity through all its wide range of uses, in aeronautics, in new designs of house furniture and bric-a-brac, in mechanical toys and amusement devices.*

William, B. Purvis, of Philadelphia, has inventions covering a variety of subjects, but directed mainly along a single line of experiment and improvement.

He began in 1912, the invention of machines for making paper bags, and his improvements in this line of machinery are covered by a dozen patents. Some half dozen other patents granted Mr. Purvis, include three patents on electric railways, one on a fountain pen, another on a magnetic car-balancing device, and still another for a cutter for roll holders.

Joseph Hunter Dickinson, of New Jersey, specializes in the line of musical instruments, particularly playing the piano. He began more than fifteen years ago to invent devices for automatically playing the piano.

He is at present in the employ of a large piano factory. His various inventions in piano-player mechanism are adopted in the construction of some of the finest piano-players on the market. He has more than a dozen patents to his credit already, and is still devoting his energies to that line of invention.

Frank J. Ferrell, of New York, has obtained about a dozen patents for his inventions, the larger number of them being for improvement in valves for steam engines.

Benjamin F. Jackson, of Massachusetts, is the inventor of a dozen different improvements in heating and lighting devices, including a controller for a trolly wheel.

Charles V. Richey, of Washington, D. C., has obtained about a dozen patents on his inventions, the last of which was a most ingenious device for registering the calls on a telephone and detecting the unauthorized use of that instrument.

*The Negro in the Field of Invention. Henry E. Baker, Journal of Negro History, January, 1917.

George W. Murray of South Carolina, former member of Congress, from that State, has received eight patents for his inventions on agricultural implements, including mostly such different attachments as readily adapt a single implement to a variety of uses.

Henry Creamer of New York, has made seven different inventions in steam traps, covered by as many patents, and Andrew J. Beard, of Alabama had about the same number to his credit for inventions in car-coupling devices—William Douglass, of Arkansas, was granted about half a dozen patents for various inventions for harvesting machines.

James Doyle of Pittsburgh, has obtained several patents for his inventions one of them being for an automatic serving system. This latter device is a scheme for dispensing with the use of waiters in dining rooms, restaurants and at railroad lunch counters. It was recently exhibited with the Pennsylvania Exposition Society's exhibit at Pittsburgh, where it attracted widespread attention from the press and public.

In the Civil service, at Washington, D. C., there are several colored men who have made inventions of more or less importance which were suggested by the mechanical problems arising in their daily occupations.

Shelby J. Davidson, of Kentucky, a clerk in the office of the Auditor for the Post Office Dept., operated a machine for tabulating and totalizing the quarterly accounts which were regularly submitted by the postmasters of the country. Mr. Davidson's attention was first directed to the loss in time through the necessity for periodically stopping to manually dispose of the paper coming from the machine. He invented a rewind device which served as an attachment for automatically taking up the paper as it issued from the machines and adapted it for use again on the reverse side, thus effecting a very considerable economy of time and material. His main invention, however was a novel attachment for adding machines which was designed to automatically include the government fee, as well as the amount sent, when totalizing the money orders in the reports submitted by postmasters. This was a distinct improvement in the efficiency and value of the machine he was operating, and the government granted him patents on both inventions.

Robert Pelham, of Detroit, is employed in the Census Office Bureau where his duties include the compilation of groups of statistics on sheets from data sent into the office from the thousands of manufactures of the country.

He devised a machine used as an adjunct in tabulating the statistics from the manufacturer's schedules in a way that displaced a dozen men in a given quantity of work, doing the work economically, speedily and with faultless precision. Mr. Pelham has been granted a patent for his inventions, and the improved efficiency of his devices induced the United States Government to lease them from him, paying him a royalty for their use, in addition to his salary for operating them.

The late Granville T. Woods, of New York, and his brother, Lyates took out some fifty or more patents.

Wood's inventions principally relate to electrical subjects, such as telegraph and telephone instruments, electric railways and general systems of electrical control. Several are on devices for transmitting telegraphic messages between moving trains. According to Patent Office Records, several of Wood's patents have for valuable considerations been assigned to the foremost electrical corporations, such as the General Electric Company, of New York and the American Bell Telephone Company, of New York. Mr. Wood's inventive faculty also worked along other lines. He devised an incubator, a complicated amusement device, a steam boiler furnace and a mechanical brake.

The largest number of patents received on inventions, by a Negro was by Elijah McCoy, of Detroit, Michigan.

McCoy obtained his first patent in July, 1872, and his last one in 1920. During this period of forty-eight years he invented one thing after another and has fifty-seven patents to his credit. His inventions cover a wide range of subjects, but relate particularly to the lubricating of machinery. He was a poineer in the art of steadily supplying oil to machinery in intermittent drops from a cup so as to avoid the necessity for stopping the machine to oil it. McCoy's lubricating cup was famous forty years ago as a necessary equipment for all up-to-date machinery.

John Ernest Matzeliger, born Dutch Guiana, 1852, died, Lynn, Massachusetts, 1889. He is the inventor of the first machine that performed automatically all the operations involved in attaching soles to shoes.

Other machines had previously been made for performing a part of these operations, but Matzeliger's machine was the only one then known to the mechanical world that could simultaneously hold the last in place to receive the leather, move it forward step by step so that other co-acting parts might draw the leather over the heel, properly punch the grip and grip the upper and draw it down over the last, plait the leather properly at the heel and toe, feed the nails to the driving point, hold them in position while being driven, and then discharge the completely soled shoe from the machine. everything being done automatically, and requiring less than a minute to complete a single shoe. This wonderful achievement marked the beginning of a distinct revolution in the art of making shoes by machinery. Matzeliger realized this, and attempted to capitalize it by organizing a stock company to market his invention; but his plans were frustrated through failing health and lack of business experience and shortly thereafter died. The patent and much of the stock of the company organized by Matzeliger was bought up. The purchase laid the foundation for the organization of the United Shoe Machinery Company, the largest and richest corporation of the kind in the world. The United Shoe Machinery Company established at Lynn, Massachusetts, a school, the only one of its kind in the world, where boys are taught exclusively to operate the Matzeliger type of machine. Some years before his death Matzeliger became a member of a white church in Lynn, called the North Congregational Society and bequeathed to this church some of the stock of the Company he had organized. Years afterwards this church became heavily involved in debt, and remembering the stock that had been left by this colored member, found, upon inquiry, that it had become very valuable through the importance of the patent under the management of the large company then controlling it. The church sold the stock and realized from the sale more than enough to pay off the entire debt of the church, amounting to $10,860.

AGRICULTURE.

The number of farmers in the United States in 1920 were 6,448,343. Of these 5,498,454 or 85.3 per cent were white and 925, 708 or 14.3 per cent were Negroes. There were also 24,181 farmers of other nationalities as follows: 16,680 Indians, 6,892 Japanese and 609 Chinese. The number of Negro farmers by tenure were: owners, 218,612, managers, 2,026, and tenants, 705,070.

Slight Increase In Proportion Farm Tenants.

The per cent division of Negro farmers in 1900, were: owners, 25.1; managers, 0.2; tenants, 74.6. The per cent division in 1910, were: owners, 24.5; managers 0.2; tenants, 75.3. The per cent division in 1920 were: owners, 23.5; managers, 0.2; tenants, 76.3.

Value Farm Property Rapidly Increasing.

In the 20 years, 1900-1920, the value of farm property owned by Negro farmers of the South has rapidly increased. This is true with reference to the value of the live stock, poultry, and implements and machinery owned. The value of land and buildings increased from $69,636,420 in 1900 to $273,501,665 in 1910, or 293 per cent. The value of the land and buildings owned by the Negro farmers of the South in 1920 was $522,178,137 an increase for the 10 years of $248,676, 472 or 91 per cent.

Negro Farmers Decrease In North But Increase In South And West.

In the 20 year period 1900-1920, there was a marked decrease in the number of Negro farmers in the North, that is, what the census designates as the New England, the Middle Atlantic, the East North Central and the West North Central sections.

In 1900 the number of Negro farmers reported in the North was 14,016. In 1920 the number reported was 9,380, a decrease of 4,636 or 33.0 per cent.

The number of Negro farmers in the West increased from 337 in 1900 to 733 in 1920. The number of Negro farmers in the South increased from 732,362 in 1900 to 915,595 in 1920. The decrease in the number of Negro farm owners for the country as a whole was due to the decrease of this class of farmers in the North. In 1920 there were for the whole country, 218,612 Negroes owning their farms. This was 360 less than the number 218,972 reported for 1910. In 1910 there were in the North 7,498 Negroes owning their farms. In 1920 the number was 5,749, a decrease of 1,749. In 1910 there were in the South 211,087 Negro farm owners. In 1920 the number was 212,365, an increase of 1,278.

Increase And Decrease By States Negro Farmers, Total And By Tenure 1900-1910 And 1910-1920.

In fifteen states: Vermont, New Jersey, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Colorado, Washington, California, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Kentucky, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas, there was for the twenty year period, 1900-1920, an increase in the total number of Negro farmers.

In thirteen states: Vermont, New Jersey, Delaware, South Dakota, Colorado, Arizona, Washington, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Arkansas, Tennessee, and Texas, there was for the twenty year period, 1900-1920 an increase in the number of Negro farm tenants.

In sixteen states: New Hampshire, Vermont, Montana, Idaho, Colorado, Utah, Washington, California, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, and Texas, there was for the twenty year period, 1900-1920, an increase in the number of Negro farm owners.

There were during the twenty year period 1900-1920, only eight states: Vermont, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Arkansas, Texas, Colorado and Washington in which there was no decrease in either the total number of Negro farmers, in the total number of Negro farm owners, or in the total number of Negro farm tenants.

The following states: Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Missouri and Kansas had a decrease for the twenty year period, 1900-1920, in the total number of Negro farmers; in the number of Negro farm owners and in the number of Negro farm tenants. The following states: Maine, Rhode Island, Florida, Mississippi and Oregon had a decrease for the ten year period, 1910-1920, in the total number of Negro farmers, in the number of Negro farm owners and in the number of Negro farm tenants.

In the following states: South Dakota, Nebraska, Delaware, Maryland, Tennessee, New Mexico and Nevada there was for the ten year period, 1910-1920, an increase in the number of Negro tenants, but a decrease in the total number of Negro farmers and Negro farm owners.

For the twenty year period, 1900-1920 in West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois and Wisconsin; for the ten year period 1900-1910, in Louisiana; and for the ten year period, 1910-1920, in Alabama, there was a decrease in the total number of Negro farmers and in the number of Negro tenants but an increase in the number of Negro farm owners.

Increase And Decrease White And Negro Farmers Show Similar Tendencies.

Where there was not a decrease in actual numbers there was a similarly marked decrease in the rate of increase of all classes of farmers both whites and Negroes, as for example, the increase in the total number of white farmers in the ten year period, 1900-1910 was 471,011. In contrast the increase of white farmers for the ten year period 1910-1920 was 57,835. The increase in the total number of Negro farmers for the ten year period 1900-1910 was 146,655. In contrast the increase for the ten year period 1910-1920 was 32,338.

The increase in the number of white tenants from 1900-1910 was 211,017. From 1910-1920 the increase was 63,805. The increase in the number of Negro tenants from 1900-1910 was 115,790. The increase in the number of Negro tenants from 1910-1920 was 32,106.

There was a decrease from 1910-1920 in the number of both white and Negro farm owners. In the period 1900-1910 the increase in the number of white owners was 260,695. In 1920 there were 15,633 less white farm owners in the country than was reported in 1910. The increase in the number of Negro owners from 1900-1910 was 31,175. In 1920 there were 360 less Negro farm owners in the country than was reported for 1910.

In 1910, as compared with 1900, there was a decrease of white farm owners in ten states, and of Negro farm owners in ten states. In 1920 as compared with 1910 there was a decrease of white farm owners in 23 states and of Negro farm owners in 25 states.

In 1910, as compared with 1900 there was a decrease of white farm tenants in 15 states and of Negro farm tenants in 23 states. In 1920 as compared with 1910, there was a decrease of white farm tenants in 17 states and of Negro farm tenants in 23 states.

In 1910 as compared with 1900, there was a decrease of white farm managers in 25 states and of Negro farm managers in 19 states. In 1920, as compared with 1910, there was a decrease of white farm managers in 13 states and of Negro farm managers in 16 states.

Relative Value Cash And Share Farm Tenancy.

Recently a very important discussion has arisen concerning the relative value of cash tenancy and share tenancy. The landlords and those speaking from their standpoint point to the fact that in general, because of supervision, the lands of the share tenants produce a larger yield than does the land of the cash tenants. Therefore, the share system should prevail. Account, however, is not taken of the fact that in general, the share tenants are on better land than the cash tenants.

On the other hand, Negro tenants and those speaking for them hold that the the cash system gives more of an opportunity for the renters themselves as well as their land. That is, the landlord stresses the improvement of the land while the tenant keeps in mind his personal welfare. When the late Dr. Seaman A. Knapp was questioned concerning this matter, he said: "They are both right and they are both wrong. The landlord must be interested not only in his land but in his tenant. The tenant must be interested not only in himself but in the landlord and his land. Land and labor must be developed side by side. A system that favors the tenant to the injury of the land is bad. A system that favors the land to the injury of the tenant is equally harmful. Either system will result in the poverty of both landlord and the tenant." He pointed out that the way out of the dilemma was to have a longer tenure contract, which would guarantee to the landlord a fair treatment of his land and assure to the tenant "The certain return to him of a fair return for his labor."

Farm Demonstration Work Improves Negro Farming.

Negro farming in the South is being greatly improved by the farmers cooperative demonstration work. This work was begun in 1907. The plan is to have a number of farmers in selected communities cultivate a small portion of their land under the direction of and with seed provided or selected by the Department of agriculture. Other farmers in the community designated as colaborators are invited to see how the demonstration is carried on and are induced to follow the same plan in their own farming. This work since 1914 has been done under the Smith-Lever Extension Act, a description of which was given in section on Educational Funds.

FEDERAL FARM LOANS.

In 1916 the United States Government, through the Treasury Department, established Federal Farm Banks through which owners of farm lands might borrow money on their lands at a rate not to exceed 6 per cent. These loans may run from 5 to 40 years. The loans are to be repaid to the government on the amortization plan; that is, by installments through a period of years which payments would include the interest and a specified part of the payment, so that at the end of a stated period both the principal and the interest would be paid.

To borrow from a Federal Land Bank a farmer should apply for membership in the nearest National Farm Loan Association; or, ten or more farmers, in a community may form a National Farm Loan Association. The prospective borrowers should hold an organization meeting and elect from their members a board of five or more directors and this board should elect a loan committee of three, a president, a vice-president, and a secretary-treasurer, who is a bonded officer. The secretary-treasurer may or may not be a member of the association.

These ten or more farmers should make application in writing to the Federal land bank for loans to the aggregate amount of $20,000 and for a charter to do business They must sign and acknowledge articles of association and forward them to the Federal land bank. The loan committee is to agree upon the valuations of the property to be offered as security and send a report of these valuations with the application for the loans. The Federal land bank will then send its appraiser to inspect the land offered as security for the loans applied for, and, if satisfactory, the loans will be authorized when the charter is granted to the association. The bank then advances the money through the secretary-treasurer of the local association. In the application signed by borrowers each must indicate how much money he desires and must list the value of the land to be mortgaged as security.

The money may be spent only to discharge indebtedness incurred for the purchase of land, for the payment of a mortgage or debt already existing, for purposes specified in the law, for the purchase of live stock or for any kind of productive improvements such as fertilizer, needed buildings, drainage, etc.

No one farmer may borrow more than $10,000 nor less than $100. No National Farm Loan Association may start with less than $20,000. Prospective farm owners, that is, those who are about to purchase land for their own use may, under certain conditions, join a farm loan association. Loans up to 50 per cent of the value of the land and 20 per cent of the value of the improvements may be secured. That is, if a farmers's land is appraised at $10,000 he would be entitled to borrow $5,000 and if the improvements were worth $2,000 he could borrow $1,000 more or a total of $6,000. Many Negro farmers through farm loan associations of their own or through farm loan associations of white farmers are taking advantage of the Federal Farm Loan opportunities.

The location of the Federal Farm Loan Banks through which Negro farmers in the South may secure loans and the states comprising the district each bank serves are as follows: The Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, for Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia; the Federal Land Bank of Columbia, for North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida; the Federal Land Bank of Louisville, for Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio; the Federal Land Bank of New Orleans, for Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi; the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, for Illinois, Missouri, and Arkansas; the Federal Land Bank of Wichita, for Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, and Oklahoma; the Federal Land Bank of Houston, for Texas. For further information about how to organize farm loan associations, etc., write: "The Secretary of the Federal Land Bank" of the district in which you reside.

LANDMARKS IN NEGRO BUSINESS ENTERPRISES

1868 The Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution adopted. Legalized right of Negroes, anywhere in the country, to engage in any occupation in which other persons are engaged.

1873 The Freedmen's Saving Bank and Trust Company fails. The loss thereby of many millions of dollars greatly retards the development of Negro enterprises.

1880-85 About this time the operating of Negro beneficial societies develops into a regular business. The operating of industrial insurance companies by Negroes becomes a regular business.

1888-90 First Negro banks organized. 1888, the Capital Savings Bank of Washington begins business. 1889, the True Reformers Bank of Richmond and the Mutual Bank and Trust Company of Chattanooga begin business. 1890, the Penny Savings Bank of Birmingham begins business.

1900 The National Negro Business League organized.

1912 First reserve legal (old line) insurance company among Negroes, the Standard Life of Atlanta, Georgia, organized with a paid in capital of $100,000.

NEGRO INSURANCE COMPANIES.

The First Insurance Company.

Negro insurance companies grew out of sick and death benefit societies established among free Negroes during the days of slavery. The first Negro Insurance company organized in the United States was the American Insurance Company of Philadelphia. It was established in 1810. Its headquarters were at 159, now 529 Lombard Street. It had a capital of $5,000.

Insurance is one of the most flourishing lines of business in which Negroes are engaged and is today the largest field of business from the standpoint of capital concentrated. It is estimated that the assets, etc., of the insurance companies operated by Negroes amount to about the following: in assets, $6,500,000 in income, $9,000,000; in disbursements, $8,500,000; in annual amount of insurance written, $75,000,000; value of policies in force, $100,000,000.

The first Old Line Legal Reserve Insurance Company to be organized by Negroes is, the Standard Life Insurance Company of Atlanta, Georgia. Among the companies which now issue Old Line Legal Reserve policies are: The North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, Durham, N. C., the National Benefit Life Insurance Company, Washington, D. C., the Liberty Life Insurance Company, Chicago, Ill., the Mississippi Beneficial, Life Insurance Company, Indianola, Miss., and the Supreme Life and Casualty Company, Columbus, Ohio. There are five Negro fire insurance companies: The Mutual Fire Insurance Association, Camden, Ark., the Western Mutual Fire Insurance Company, San Antonio, Tex., the Mexia Mutual Fire Insurance Company, Mexia Tex., the Bankers' Fire Insurance Company, Durham, N. C. and the Great Southern Fire Insurance Company, Atlanta, Ga.

SOME NEGRO BUSINESS MEN.

Boyd, Dr. R. H., (deceased)-Prominent minister in the Baptist denomination. He established in 1896, the National Baptist Publishing House at Nashville, Tennessee. The printing plant occupies a half block in the business portion of the city. It pays its employees over $200,000 a year for labor. According to an inventory made by Bradstreet's Agency, the value of stock, equipment and property of the concern is about $350,000. Here all the books and pamphlets needed in the Sunday School and church work of the Negro Baptists are published. Dr. Boyd was the president of the National Negro Doll Company, which manufactures high class Negro dolls.

Brown, William Washington.—Founder in 1881 of the Grand United Order of True Reformers. This is one of the largest and most interesting of the benevolent and secret orders. The headquarters of the Association were placed in Richmond, Virginia, and here in 1896, Mr. Brown established the True Reformers' Bank which was the second bank established privately for Negroes. Did much to promote banking by Negroes. Before taking up the work of the True Reformers, Mr. Brown was a minister of the Baptist Church. He was born in Alabama.

Groves, Junius G. "The Potato King."—Born a slave in Green County, Kentucky, 1859. In 1879 during the Kansas exodus, emigrated to that State. Hired out at Edwardsville as a farm laborer at forty cents per day. The next year he rented nine acres of land and planted three acres each in white potatoes, in sweet potatoes, and in watermelons. He cleared $125. The next year he rented twenty acres, and the next year sixty-six acres. In 1884, after all debts had been paid, Mr. Groves had to his credit in the local bank, as the result of three years' labor, $2,200. He now bought eighty acres of land. His prosperity continued until he owned 500 acres of the finest land in the State, worth from $125 to $250 an acre. Mr. Groves got the title of "Potato King," because he raises and ships potatoes on a large scale. In one year upon his own farm he produced over 100,000 bushels of white potatoes. In addition to this he bought from other growers and shipped away twenty-two cars of potatoes. He is worth about $80,000.

Jackson, Deal Albany, Georgia.—Died 1913. The most noted Negro farmer in the State. For over ten years he had the distinction of marketing the first bale of cotton for the season, winning by this fact the title of the "first bale man." He owned and worked 2,000 acres of land. He had forty tenant families on his plantation.

Merrick, John.—One of the most successful Negro business men in the United States. He was born in Clinton, North Carolina, September 7, 1859; died August 6, 1919; was a bricklayer by trade, and later, became a barber. In 1898 he founded the North Carolina Mutual and Provident Association, which is one of the strongest Negro insurance companies in the world. He was one of the wealthiest Negroes in North Carolina. He owned a large amount of real estate. His monthly rent income was over $500.

Montgomery, Isaiah T.—The founder in 1888 of Mound Bayou, Mississippi, in many ways the most noted Negro town in the United States. He was a slave, in Mississippi, of Joseph Davis, the brother of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America.

Smith, Robert L.—Born in Charleston, South Carolina, 1861. Founder of the Farmers' Improvement Society of Texas. He graduated from Atlanta University, and for a time was editor of a paper in Charleston. He then went to Texas and became a teacher. In 1895 he was elected a member of the Texas Legislature. Wishing to help the people, he organized in 1890, the Farmers' Improvement Society. The members of the Association now own over 75,000 acres of land worth considerably over $1,000,000. In 1906 the Society founded an agricultural college at Ladonia, Texas, and in 1911, they organized a bank at Waco, Texas. The Society also operates an overall factory at Waco. Under the auspices of the Society farmers' institutes and fairs are held.

BUSINESS LEAGUES.

The National Negro Business League was organized at Boston in 1900, for the purpose of stimulating and increasing Negro business enterprises. At its annual meetings, which are held in various parts of the country, successful Negro business men are brought before the public. In this way what Negroes are doing in business becomes known, and many Negroes, who otherwise would not have been, are influenced.

NEGRO BANKS

The Freedmen's Bank

During the Civil War, military savings banks were established at Beaufort, South Carolina, and Norfolk, Virginia, in order to give the colored troops centered at these points an opportunity to save their pay. These banks were so successful that the friends of the Negro decided to provide an opportunity for all the emancipated slaves to save their earnings. The matter was laid before Congress, and on March 3, 1865, by Congressional enactment, "The Freedmen's Savings Bank and Trust Company was established."

Section V of the Act of Incorporation of the Freedmen's Bank said "that the general business and object of the Corporation hereby created shall be to receive on desposit such sums of money as may from time to time be offered therefore by or on behalf of persons heretofore held in slavery in the United States or their descendants, and investing the same in stocks, bonds, treasury notes and other securities of the United States."

In 1870 an amendment to the charter was secured by which one-half of the funds subject to investment might at the discretion of the trustees be invested "in bonds and notes secured by mortgage on real estate and double the value of the loan." This amendment permitted injudicious speculation and caused the suspension of the bank in 1873. During the time that the bank was in existence about $57,000,000 were desposited. Sixty-two per cent of the losses have been repaid to the depositors as follows: Nov. 1, 1875, 20 per cent

March 20, 1878, 10 per cent; Sept. 1, 1880, 10 per cent; June 1, 1882, 15 per cent; May 12, 1883, 7 percent; depositors who have not received these dividends, or only a portion, may receive them by making the proper certifications to the comptroller of the currency. Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.

The First Private Negro Banks

The Capital Savings Bank of Washington, D. C., began business October 17, 1888. After being run for about sixteen years it failed.

The True Reformers' Bank of Richmond was chartered March 2, 1888. It began business April 3, 1889. This bank failed in 1910.

The Mutual Bank and Trust Company of Chattanooga, Tennessee, was started in 1889 and failed in the panic of 1893.

The Alabama Penny Savings Bank, Birmingham, Alabama, began business October 15, 1890. Failed December 23, 1915.

Present Negro Banks.

A significant feature in the development of Negro banks is the increase in capital, in resources and in the volume of business done. In 1918, there were 72 Negro banks capitalized at $2,500,000. These banks were reported to be doing an annual business of about $35,000,000. In 1922 there are 74 Negro banks with a total capital of $6 250,000 and with resources of $20,000,000. These banks are doing an annual business of about $100,000,000.

CRIME

Differences in Number of Prisoners Considered Vitiate Comparison of Crime Rates

From time to time the Census Bureau collects data relating to crime. There has been in each case, however, a considerable variation in the number of prisons, that is jails, penitentiaries, etc., from which data were collected.

In 1904, the prisoners in 1,337 prisons were enumerated. There were in these prisons, at that time, 50,111 white and 26,661 colored persons. There were committed to these prisons that year 125,093 white persons and 24,598 colored persons. In 1910, the prisoners, in 3,198 prisons were enumerated. There were in these prisons, at that time, 72,797 white and 38,701 colored persons. There were committed to these prisons that year, 368,468 white persons and 110,319 colored persons. The number of penitentiaries and reformatories from which data were collected in 1904, 81; and in 1910, 82, was practically the same. There was, however, information from 1,764 more municipal prisons, jails, and work houses in 1910 than in 1904. The above variations in the number of prisons considered vitiate the comparisons of crime rates for different periods.

In 1890 the number of prisoners per 100,000 of the population was for whites, 104; for colored, 325. In 1904 the number was, for whites, 75; for colored, 277. In 1910, the number was, for whites, 89; for colored, 378.

In 1904 the number of commitments to prison per 100,000 of the population was, for whites, 171; colored, 256. In 1910 the number of commitments was for whites, 467; colored, 1,101. The number of colored prisoners in penitentiaries per 100,000 of the colored population was 225 in 1904 and 260 in 1910.

Crime Rates Appear To be Higher in the North than in the South.

It appears that there is a much higher rate of crime among Negroes in the North than in the South. This is to a large extent due to the fact that over seven-tenths of the Negroes in the North live in cities and a large proportion of these are of an age when persons have the most tendency to crime; that is unmarried persons or young people with one or two children.

Colored Persons in Prison:

1904	765	220

Proportion Commitments To Prisons Both Whites And Negroes Greater North Than South.

Some comparisons of commitments of white prisoners per 10,000 of the white population. Maine, 70; Massachusetts, 93; Connecticut, 75; New York, 50; Pennsylvania, 64; Colorado, 59; California, 70; other western states, 93. Southern states, North Carolina, 4; Mississippi, 7; South Carolina, 16; Alabama, 17; Louisiana, 17; Arkansas, 18; Georgia, 18; Texas, 19; Tennessee, 20; Oklahoma, 27; Virginia, 33; Kentucky, 35.

The commitments to prisons per ten thousand of the Negro population is for the North, 283; for the West, 366 and for the South, 88; that is to say, a Negro is 3 times more likely to get in jail in the North and 4 times more likely to be committed to jail in the West than in South. The commitments of Negroes per ten thousand of the Negro population is, for Massachusetts, 196; for Connecticut, 254; for Georgia, 82; for Alabama, 71; for South Carolina, 52; for Louisiana, 47; for Mississippi, 30; for North Carolina, 29.

Negro Crime Rate Lower Than Rate For Emigrant Races.

It is to be noted that the statistics of crimes of foreign born are deceptive for the reason that crimes are committed for the most part by adults and the rates for these crimes are based on the foreign born which is also mostly adult. On the other hand comparison of the criminal population of the white American born is based on the entire white American born population which includes the children of the white American born and also the children of the foreign born. When, however, due allowance is made for this it is still interesting to find that the Negro has a relatively lower percentage of crime than some of the emigrant races who during the past two decades came to this country.

The commitments to prison in 1904 per 1,000 of certain nationalities were: Mexicans, 4.7; Italians, 4.4; Austrians, 3.6; French, 3.4; Canadians, 3.0; Russians, 2.8; Poles, 2.7; Negroes, 2.7.

It is of still greater interest to compare the commitments for rape. In 1904 the commitments for this crime per 100,000 of the total population were: all whites, 0.6; colored, 1.8*; Italians, 5.3; Mexicans, 4.8; Austrians, 3.2; Hungarians, 2.0; French, 1.9; Russians, 1.9; of those committed to prison for major offenses in 1904, the per cent committed for rape was, for colored, 1.9; all whites 2.3; foreign white, 2.6; Irish, 1.3; Germans, 1.8; Poles, 2.1; Mexicans, 2.7; Canadians, 3.0; Russians, 3.0; French, 3.1; Austrians, 4.2; Italians, 4.4; Hungarians, 4.7†; The report, 1911, of the Immigration Commission on "Immigration and Crime" gives the following concerning the per cent rape forms of all offenses by Negroes and Whites: of convictions, New York City Court of General Sessions Negro, 0.5; foreign whites, 1.8; native whites, 0.8; of Chicago police arrests, Negro, 0.34; foreign whites, 0.35; native whites, 0.30; of alien white prisoners, 1908 in the United States, 2.9.†

*If to the colored all those who are lynched for rape were added, the change in the figures would be less than one-fourth of one per cent.

†The 1904 census figures with reference to rape are used because in the 1910 report: "The term 'rape' was interpreted rather broadly to include offenses defined as 'defiling child,' 'indecent assault,' 'indecent liberties with child,' etc., and also those cases where rape was not actually committed, but only attempted or intended. Perhaps this is one reason why the number of commitments for rape reported at the census of 1910—1,337, after excluding for purposes of comparison the juvenile delinquents (74) and prisoners committed for nonpayment of fine (29)—is so much larger than the number reported in 1904, which was 620. No record, however, has been preserved showing what this offense included in 1904, but in any event the increase is altogether too large to represent an actual increase in the occurrence of the offense."

"It is noticeable that the ratios for the colored are very much higher in the Northern states than in the Southern. The difference may be explained partly by the fact that in the North the provisions made for juvenile delinquents are much more extensive for both the white and the colored than in the South, and partly by the fact that the colored in the South live for the most part in rural districts, while in the North they are mainly in cities. Truancy and similar offenses for which most of the juvenile delinquents are committed are more often punished in cities than in rural communities." (Page 230 Prisoners and Juvenile Delinquents in Institutions 1904.)

LYNCHING.

Phillips in his "American Negro Slavery," pages 458-563 and 511-572 gives extended information about rapes and the lynchings of Negroes in the days of slavery. He points out that in Virginia from 1780 to 1864 there were seventy-three slaves convicted for rape and thirty-two convicted for attempted rape. In Baldwin County, Georgia, in 1812 a Negro was convicted of rape and sentenced to be hanged. Near Gallatin, Mississippi in 1843 two slaves were lynched for rape and murder.

According to the files of the Liberator, three slaves and one free Negro were legally executed for rape and two slaves legally executed for attempted rape. Near Mobile, Alabama, in May, 1835, two Negroes were burned to death for the murder of two children. On April 28, 1836, a Negro was burned to death at St. Louis, for killing a deputy sheriff. From 1850 to 1860, according to the records of the Liberator, there appears to have been more of a tendency for the people to take the law in their own hands. Out of forty-six Negroes put to death for the murder of owners and overseers, twenty were legally executed and twenty-six were summarily executed. Nine of these were burned at the stake. For the crime of rape upon white women, three Negroes were legally executed, and four were burned at the stake.

Four-Fifths Lynchings For Crimes Other Than Rape.

In the thirty-seven years, 1885-1921, there were 829 persons, 60 whites and 769 Negroes put to death by mobs, under the charge of rape or attempted rape. This is one-fifth or 20.2 per cent of the total number of persons, 4,097, who were lynched during that period. On the other hand 3,268, or four-fifth of those lynched were put to death for causes other than rape. This refutes the charge that the majority of lynchings are for the crime of rape. Over ten per cent of the Negroes lynched are for minor offenses.

Of the 64 persons lynched in 1921, 19 were charged with rape. Other offenses and the number lynched for in 1921 were: murder, 15; attempted murder, 3; killing men in altercation, 4; no special charge, 3; wounding men, 4; furnishing ammunition to man resisting arrest, 2; leaders in race clash, 2; charge not reported 3; assisting man to escape who had killed officer of law, 1; making improper remarks to woman, 1; threatening to kill another, 1; entering young woman's room, 1; insulting woman, 1; writing note to woman, 1; attacking a man and woman, 1.

MORTALITY STATISTICS.

Death Rates.

The registration area from which the death rates of whites and Negroes is derived consists of twenty-five northern and western states of the District of Columbia, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia and sixteen cities in non-registration states. The population of this area is white, 79, 402, 952 or 84 per cent of the total white population; Negro, 6, 875, 639 or 66 per cent of the total Negro population. The total number of deaths in the registration area in 1920 was, white, 1, 007, 117; Negro, 130,147.

In 1916 the death-rates per 1,000 of the population for the whole registration area was: white, 13 .5; colored, 20 .5. In the registration states it was: white 13.5; colored 20.0. In the rural parts of registration States it was white, 12 .5; colored, 17 .3. In registration cities it was: white, 14 .1; colored, 25 .1.

DEATH RATE PER 1 ,000 FOR WHOLE REGISTRATION AREA

COLOR	1910	1911	1912	1916	1920

Colored	24 .2	23 .6	22 .9	20 .5	18 .4

Conclusions drawn from military examinations and experiences of the past few years appear to indicate that the Negro is constitutionally a better physiological machine than the white man. This conclusion was expressed in the Journal of the American Medical Association, May 17, 1919. In discussing the relative resistance to disease it was pointed out that:

"That many maladies the morbidity-rate is the same in the two races. The army officers have, however, ascertained from the statistics that the colored troops are relatively less resistant to diseases of the lungs and pleura as well as to certain general diseases, like tuberculosis and smallpox; they are also much more frequently infected with venereal diseases and suffer wide-spread complications of these diseases. On the other hand, in general the skin not only on the surface of the body, but also that which is unfolded to form the lining of the mouth and nasopharynx, is much more resistant to micro-organisms in Negroes than in white men. The white skin seems to be relatively a degenerate skin in this respect. Futhermore, the nervous systems of the uninfected Negroes show fewer cases of instability than those of white men. Thus there is far less neurasthenia; there are fewer instances of psychopathic states, and there is only half as much alcoholism in colored as in white troops. Nutritional disorders are also less common among the Negroes. As Love and Davenport describe the uninfected Negro, "He seems to have more stable nerves, have better eyes, and metabolizes better. Thus, in many respects the uninfected colored troops show themselves to be constitutionally better physiological machines than the white men."

Birth Statistics.

The registration area from which the birth rates of whites and Negroes is derived consists of the following states: California, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin. The population of this area is: white, 59,468,918, and Negro, 3,945,422.

	Total Births	Birth Rates	Death Rates
White	1,395,523	23.5	12.8
Negro	103,796	26.3	18.4

The Census Bureau notes that in only eight states and the District of Columbia do the births exceed the deaths. It was not noted, however, that these eight states, Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Virginia and the District of Columbia, had 3,238,082 or 80.7 per cent of the total Negro population, and 90,723 or 87.4 per cent of the total births of the registration area.

ESTIMATES MADE BY THE EDITOR OF THE NEGRO YEAR BOOK APPEAR TO INDICATE:

I

That about 450,000 Negroes in the South are seriously ill all the time.

This is an average of about 18 days per year for each Negro inhabitant.

II

That annual cost of sickness of these 450,000 Negroes is about $75,000,000.

III

That there are over 100,000 Negro workers in the South sick all the time.

That their annual loss in earnings is probably $45,000,000.

IV

That 45 per cent of the annual deaths among Negroes are preventable.

V

That 225,000 Negroes in the South die annually.

That 100,000 of these deaths can be prevented.

VI

That probably 600,000 Negroes of the present population will die with tuberculosis.

That 150,000 of these deaths can be prevented.

VII

That the annual funeral expenses of the Negroes in the South are about $15,000,000.

That health improvement would save $6,500,000 of these expenses.

VIII

That sickness and deaths cost Negroes of the South $100,000,000 annually.

It is probable that through health improvement $50,000,000 of this amount could be saved.

IX

That the annual economic loss to the South from sickness and death among Negroes is probably $300,000,000.

That through health improvement $150,000,000 of this amount could be saved.

X

That this $150,000,000 would provide good school houses and 6 months schooling for every child, white and black in the South.

XI

That it would pay the South to spend $100,000,000 annually to improve Negro health.

NEGRO PHYSICIANS.

Derham, James.—First Negro physician in the United States Born a slave in Philadelphia in 1767. He was taught by his master to read and write and was employed in compounding medicines. He became so skilled that when sold to a new master he was employed as his assistant.

Derham eventually purchased his freedom, moved to New Orleans, and built up a lucrative practice. Dr. Benjamin Rush, the celebrated physician, published an account of Derham, and spoke in the highest terms of his character and skill as a physician.

Smith, James McCune.—He was a prominent Negro physician in New York City in ante-bellum days. Being unable to enter a medical school in this country, he went to Scotland, and there obtained a medical education. He returned to New York and practiced his profession there for twenty-five years and became one of the most influential members of his race. He is said to have been the first colored man to establish a pharmacy in the United States. He was one of the principal agents for the Underground Railroad in New York, and was also an active writer for newspapers and magazines.

DeGrasse, Dr. John V.—First Negro in the United States to become a member of a medical Association. In 1854 he was admitted in due form as a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society.

It is only since the Civil War that there has been any number of Negro physicians. The census of 1900 reported 1,734, and of 1910, 3,777. There were also 478 dentists and 2,433 trained nurses. Several Negro physicians have achieved national reputations. Among these are Dr. Daniel H. Williams and Dr. George C. Hall, of Chicago, and Dr. A. M. Curtis, of Washington, D. C. Some of the most difficult operations performed by surgeons of any race are to their credit. Dr. Daniel H. Williams was the first surgeon to successfully perform an operation on the human heart. In the organization at Chicago in 1913, of the American College of Surgeons, which is modeled after the Royal College of Surgeons of England, Dr. Williams was chosen from among the many surgeons of America, who are of note as one of the "two thousand of the fittest morally, technically, and surgically" to become the charter members of the college. Dr. Algernon B. Jackson, head of the Mercy Hospital, Philadelphia, has discovered a cure for articular rheumatism that has attracted wide attention in medical circles. In the July, 1911, number of the New York Medical Journal, Dr. Jackson describes the results of his experiments.

First Negro Medical Journal.—It was the Medical and Surgical Observer. It was established in December, 1892, at Jackson, Tennessee by M. V. Lynk, M. D., the founder and president of the University of West Tennessee. It was a monthly publication and was issued for about eighteen months.

*Includes 18,636 enumerated in Indian Territory, not distinguished as Black and Mulatto.

Concerning the above the Census report for 1910, General report and analysis page 129 says:

"Considerable uncertainty necessarily attaches to this classification, however since the accuracy of the distinction made depends largely upon the judgment and care of the enumerators. Moreover, the fact that the definition of the term, "mulatto" adopted at different censuses has not been entirely uniform may affect the comparability of the figures in some degree. At the census of 1910 the instructions were to report as "black" all persons who were "evidently full-blood Negroes" and as "mulatto" all other persons having "some proportion or perceptible trace of Negro blood." The instructions were substantially the same at the census of 1870; but at the census of 1890 the term "black" included all persons "having three-fourths or more black blood," other persons with any proportion of "black" blood being classified as "mulattoes," "quadroons," or "octoroons;" and at the censuses of 1850 and 1860 the terms "black" and "mulatto" appear not to have been defined.†

MIGRATION OF THE NATIVE NEGRO POPULATION.

In Spite of Migration No Great Change In Percentage Number Persons Living Outside State of Birth.

Of the 10,381,309 Negroes reported by the 1920 census as being born in the United States, the state of birth of 38,575 was not ascertained by the enumerators. The total number for whom the state of birth was reported, 10,342,734, comprised 8,288,492 or 80.1 per cent who were living in the states in which they were born and 2,054,242 or 19.9 per cent who were living in other states. In spite of the migration of 1916-1920 the number of Negroes living outside of the state of birth is but little greater than it was in the two previous decades. In 1910 the percentage living in other states was 16.6 and in 1900 it was 15.6.

Of the total number of Negroes reported as being born in the South, 9,600,943, it was found that 7,751,361 or 80.7 per cent were living in their native states and 1,068,788 or 11.1 per cent were living in other Southern States and 780,794, or 8.1 per cent were living in the North or West. The number born in the South and now living in the North, 780,794 is 330,260 more than the number from the South, 440,534, who were living in the North in 1910. Of the number of Negroes reported as being born in the North and West, 741,791, it was found that 537,131 or 72.4 per cent were living in the States in which they were born; 157,437 or 21.2 per cent were living in other northern or western States and 47,223 or 6.4 per cent were living in the South.

Migration Negroes North Migration Negroes South Both Go On At Same Time.

The 1920 census shows that the proportion of southern born Negroes who had migrated to the North or West was 8.1 per cent of the total Negroes born in the South and that this was only about one-fourth larger than the proportion of Negroes who were born in the North or West and had migrated to the South, 6.4 per cent. It is noteworthy that while the migration of Negroes to the North goes on, the migration of Negroes to the South continues and that the number of Negroes, 47,223, living in the South in 1920 was 5,734 more than the number, 41,489 from the North or West who were living in the South in 1910.

The census statistics indicate that in general Negroes born in the North or West and in the northern part of the South have migrated to a much larger extent than those born in the far South. It is found that 27.6 per cent of Negroes born in the North or West are living in other states than those in which they were born. Of those born in the states of the upper South that is, Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas and Oklahoma, the corresponding percentage was 24.8 per cent. Of the Negroes born in the lower southern states, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, only 16.2 per cent were living outside of the states in which they were born.

(3) Less than one-tenth of one per cent.

MIGRATION 1916-1920.

Greatest Movement Negroes Within Southern States Has Been To South And West.

It is found that as a result of the recent migration that there has been a pronounced increase in the migration from the far south as for example: the Negroes who were born in South Carolina and had migrated from that state to Pennsylvania increased from 2,113 in 1910 to 11,624 in 1920; those fro m Georgia to Pennsylvania, from 1,578 to 16,196; those from Florida to Pennsylvania, from 393 to 5,370; those from Alabama to Ohio, from 781 to 17,588; those from Mississippi to Illinois, from 4,612 to 19,485; those from Louisiana to Illinois, from 1,609 to 8,078; and those from Texas to Missouri from 1,907 to 4,344.

In spite of the large number of Negroes who have recently migrated from the South to the North it is a fact that when the 130 years since the first census was taken is considered that the greatest movement of Negroes within the South has been to the South and West.

The Center of Negro Population Has Moved 478 Miles To Southwest In 130 Years.

In 1790 the center of Negro population was 25 miles southwest of Petersburg in Dinwiddie county, Virginia. In 1910 it had moved to the southwest 478 miles and was then located in the northeastern part of Alabama. Estimates appear to indicate that in 1920 the center of Negro population is still somewhere near the northeastern part of Alabama.

Movement To Cities.

From 1910 to 1920 the trend of population from the country to the city was greatly accentuated. For the first time in the country's history more than half the entire population is now living in urban territory. Of the 105,710,620 persons in the nation, 54,304,603 or 51.9 per cent are living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and 51,406,017 or 48.1 per cent in rural territory.

In 1910 the per cent of the population urban was 46.3 and rural 53.7. The number of Negroes living in the urban territory increased by 870,244 that is from 2,689,229, to 3,559,473. More than one-third, 34.0 per cent, of the total Negro populaion is living in urban territory. The census reports indicate an actual decrease of 234,876 or 3.4 per cent in Negro rural population of the country. In 1910 the number of Negroes reported as living in rural territory was 6,894,972. In 1920 the number thus living was reported to be 6,661,332.

STATES, COUNTIES, AND CITIES HAVING THE LARGEST NUMBER AND PERCENTAGE OF NEGROES.

The State of Georgia has the largest Negro population of any State. In 1920 it was 1,206,365. The State of Mississippi has the largest percentage of Negroes 52.2 per cent of the total population. Negro population in Mississippi in 1920 was 935,184.

The three counties in the United States having the largest percentage of Negroes are Issequena County, Mississippi, 90.7 per cent, 6,915 Negroes and 703 whites; Tensas County, Louisiana, 85.3 per cent, 12,085 Negroes and 1,769 whites; and Tunica County, Mississippi, 89.0 per cent, 18,207 Negroes and 2,179 whites.

The five cities in the United States having the largest Negro population are: New York, 152,467; Washington, 109,966; Chicago, 109,485; Baltimore, 108,322; and New Orleans, 100,930. There are now no cities in the United States in which 50 per cent or more of the population are Negroes. In 1910 there were four cities in the United States having 25,000 inhabitants or more, with at least half of the population Negro. They were: Jacksonville, Fla., 50.8 per cent, 29,293 Negro and 28,329 white; Montgomery, Ala., 50.6 per cent, 19,322 Negro and 18,802 white; Charleston, S. C., 52.8 per cent, 31,056 Negro and 27,764 white; Savannah, Ga., 51.1 per cent, 33,246 Negro and 31,784 whites.

CLASSIFICATION OF COUNTIES BY NEGRO POPULATION: 1910.

The classification of counties by Negro population for 1920 was not available when this matter was sent to press. The aggregate number of counties in the United States in 1910 was 2,953, of which 1,351 were in the South, 1,265 in the North, and 337 in the West.

Negro population was reported from 2,843 of these counties, the number reporting no Negro population being 110, of which 32 were in the South and 78 in the North and West. Of the 32 Southern counties which reported no Negro population, 28 were in Texas, 2 in Oklahoma, 1 in Arkansas, and 1 in North Carolina. Outside of Texas, therefore, there were in the South only 4 counties which reported no Negro population in 1910.

"The Negro population increased during the decade 1900-1910 in 1,433 county or combination-county areas, decreased in 1,229 areas, and remained unchanged in 44 areas, there being 45 areas which reported no Negro population either at the beginning or at the end of the decade.

"It is equally true of the total population of the country, all classes combined that it decreased during the decade 1900-1910 in a large number of counties, including counties in those sections in which the total population is almost entirely white. Of this decreasing area, 338,334 square miles were in the North and West, and 134,128 square miles were in the South, the area of decreasing population in the South constituting 15.3 per cent of the total area, or approximately one-sixth in the South as in the country as a whole.

"In every state for which data are presented there are areas in which the Negro population increased rapidly, other areas in which it increased slowly, and still others in which it remained stationary or decreased. The area of most rapid Negro increase embraces the greater part of Florida, and the southern counties of Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi, together with counties scattered in other sections of the South.

"In general, it is true that a wide belt of area in which Negro increase has been rapid encircles the Gulf from southern Florida to the Mississippi River. This lies south of the region of maximum density of Negro population in 1910. A number of counties in the black-belt area, in fact, decreased in Negro population or increased at a low rate during the decade, while counties of relatively low density along the Gulf coast showed generally high rates of increase. Throughout the greater portion of the region of relatively low density lying between the Appalachian Mountains and the Ohio River, on the other hand, the Negro population decreased during the decade.

"Considering the region east of the Mississippi River, the area of rapid increase lies to the south, and the area of decrease to the north of the area of maximum density, the increase within the "black belt" being generally below the average for the South.

"The decrease over large portions of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee is undoubtedly accounted for in part by migration into northern states, but the population changes for the decade in the South as a whole indicate for the Negro population of this section a decided drift southward. Considerable areas of rapid increase are scattered also in the region to the west of the lower Mississippi, in Louisiana, Texas, and Arkansas, indicating a net Negro migration westward across the Mississippi during the decade."

COUNTIES HAVING HALF OR MORE OF THEIR POPULATION NEGROES.

In 1860 there were in the South, 244 counties in which half or more of the population were Negroes. The number of these counties in 1880 was 300; in 1890 the number was 282; in 1900 the number was 286; in 1910 the number was 264 and in 1920 the number was 220; that is, the greatest number of these counties was in 1880 and the smallest number was in 1920.

The population of the counties having half or more of their population Negroes was in 1880, 3,392,235; in 1890, 3,555,970; in 1900, 4,057,619; in 1910, 3,932,484 and in 1920, 3,330,294. The 4 maps which follow show for the 4 census years, 1860, 1880, 1900, 1910 the counties having 50 per cent or more of their population Negroes.

It will be seen from an examination of these maps that while there has been a fluctuation in the number of counties having more than half of their population Negroes, the area occupied by these counties was practically the same in 1860 and in 1910 that is, at each census the area embraced a group of counties in eastern Virginia and North Carolina and a belt of counties extending from the South Carolina coast through South Carolina, Central Georgia and Alabama, and a detached area embracing a portion of the lower Mississippi Valley. The general contour and extent of these areas show remarkably little change in a period of 60 years.

FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS.

Secret societies among Negroes may be roughly divided into two classes: the old line societies, such as Masons, the Odd Fellows, and the Knights of Pythias and the benevolent secret societies, such as the True Reformers, the Grand United Order of Galilean Fisherman and the National Order of Mosaic Templars.

There are over sixty secret and fraternal organizations among Negroes in the United States of a more or less National scope. It is estimated that they have a total membership of about 2,200,000. Large sums of money have come into the treasuries of the various secret organizations. The Knights of Pythias have collected over $1,000,000 for endowment. There is over $50,000 in the Grand Lodge treasury. A considerable part of the money collected by the orders has been permanently invested. It is estimated that the Masons have about $1,000,000 worth of property; the Odd Fellows, $2,000,000; and the Pythians, $2,500,000. It is probable that altogether the Negro secret societies in the United States own $20,000,000 worth of property. The Odd Fellows have in New Orleans, a building that cost $36,000, and in Atlanta and Philadelphia, buildings that have cost $100,000 each. In Indianapolis, New Orleans and Chicago, Knights of Pythias own buildings each worth from $30,000 to $100,000. The Negro secret societies are paying attention to the improving of the health of their members. The Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Pythias has erected a sanitarium at Hot Springs, Arkansas; the Mosaic Templars and other societies have established health bureaus.

There was a general movement throughout the Southern States to estrain Negro secret societies from using the names and emblems of white orders. The white Pythians of Georgia entered a restraining order against the Negro Pythians of that State. The case was carried to the Supreme Court of the United States. Chief Justice White, in an important and far-reaching decision, handed down, June 10, 1912, declared that the Negro Knights of Pythias of Georgia had the right to use the name and emblems of the order. All the members of the court except Justice Holmes and Lurton concurred with the Chief Justice. Suits are now pending to restrict Negro Mystic Shriners from using the emblem of that order.

Negro Fraternal Congress, made up of representatives of secret and fraternal organizations.

Officers: President, J. L. Jones, Cincinnati, Ohio; Secretary, R. A. Byrd, Springfield, Ill.

PERIODICAL PUBLICATIONS

In 1863 there were only two newspapers in the United States published by colored persons. The first Negro newspaper published in the South, the Colored American, began publication at Augusta, Georgia, the first week in October, 1865. J. T. Shuftin was editor.

Only one of the Negro periodicals now being published, the Christian Recorder was established before 1865.

There are now about 400 periodicals published by or for Negroes. Their classification is as follows: Religious periodicals 70, school periodicals 85, organs of National Associations, and magazines of general literature 7, fraternal organs 30; newspapers 220.

Livingstone College

SALISBURY, NORTH CAROLINA

Livingstone College is a Christian Co-educational School, whose aim is to aid, encourage and inspire Negro Youth toward the development of their native ability.

It has the distinction of being the oldest School in America established by Negroes for Negroes, with money furnished by Negroes, and manned entirely by members of the Negro race.

It is fostered as the chief educational institution of the A. M. E. Zion Church, but in its operation is entirely non-sectarian.

It commends itself as worthy of benevolent consideration, in that it is a concrete and striking illustration of the Negro's organized effort to help himself.

It offers the following Courses of Study:

1. A standardized four years High School Course—preparatory to College.
2. A Teacher Training Course for which the State grants Teachers' Certificates without examination.
3. A Commercial Course, embracing Stenography, Typewriting and Bookkeeping.
4. A Standard College Course leading to the Degree of Bachelor of Arts.
5. A Scientific Course, leading to the Degree of Bachelor of Science.
6. An English Course in Theology designed to help Ministers who have not had College training, to better prepare themselves for their chosen life work—preaching.
7. A regular three years Course in Theology upon an A. B. Degree, and leading to the Degree of Bachelor of Divinity.
8. A Course in Vocal and Instrumental Music.
9. Industrial Courses embracing Carpentry, Brick-masonry, Printing and Practical Agriculture, Dressmaking, Cooking and Laundering.

Athletic sports are encouraged with a view of aiding discipline and developing sound bodies.

The Literary Societies for the High School, College and Theological Departments afford splendid opportunity for developing the art of writing and speaking.

The regular religious services, together with the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Christian Endeavor and other voluntary religious Organizations, greatly aid in developing character, and afford ample opportunity for practicing Christian graces.

A Campus of broad acres and shady groves liberally dotted with well-equipped dormitories, a splendid library building, stocked with useful books and papers, a large and well-appointed auditorium, a mild and healthful climate, furnish the physical equipment and surrounding that make Livingstone College an ideal retreat for study.

The Mayesville Educational and Industrial Institute

AT MAYESVILLE,
SOUTH CAROLINA

Has a strong Faculty, and offers training in the various literary and industrial branches. The course of study ranges from the kindergarten through the High School and Normal. Elective courses are provided for those desiring special training for a chosen profession. The regular course includes Domestic Science and Art, Music, Trades, Agriculture, etc.

Students completing the course here are prepared to teach in the public schools, or to begin a profession or business career.

Strong emphasis is placed upon the moral and religious life, but no sectarian doctrine is taught. The standards are high; the discipline firm and reasonable. The social atmosphere is inspiring.

No better place for study and development can be found in the South than this quiet and healthful spot where the climate is mild and springs of pure water run continuously. Since 1896, hundreds of students have annually enjoyed the benefits offered here, and their constant increase is testimony showing the worth and merit of this institution.

These advantages, together with our equipment in beautiful buildings and grounds, are offered for a very reasonable price.

The Southern Workman

AN ILLUSTRATED 48 - PAGE,
MONTHLY MAGAZINE

Published since 1872 by Hampton Institute, at Hampton, Va.
Price, One Dollar per year; Single Copy, Ten Cents

The Southern Workman deals in a constructive way with the vital problems affecting the Negro and Indian races. It gives the latest developments in the race adjustment now going on in the United States.

"This magazine is now counted an authority on race questions, and is sought for by libraries, schools, and organizations everywhere. Its policy has always been conservative. Its aim has been, and continues to be, to set before its readers everything that is calculated to narrow rather than broaden the rift between the races."

OTHER HAMPTON PUBLICATIONS

The Hampton Leaflets—A quarterly publication, which aims to assist rural teachers in introducing hygiene, agriculture, nature study, and handwork into their schools. Seventy-six old and four new ones annually, covering academic subjects, agriculture, health, school and home improvement, Southern crops and industries. Price, One Dollar per dozen; single copies, Ten Cents; annual subscription (four numbers), Forty Cents; three year subscription, One Dollar.

The Hampton Bulletin—Includes the annual catalog, reports of the principal and treasurer, summer school announcement and occasional pamphlets.

Pamphlets—An Apostle of Good-Will by Robert R. Moton; Armstrong's Contribution to World Peace, Talcott Williams; Building a Rural Civilization, Jackson Davis; Contemporary Poetry of the Negro, R.T. Kerlin; Educational Ideals, General Armstrong; The Failure of Cunningham; Armstrong's Life and Work, Franklin Carter; A Hampton Girl's Training, Carrie A. Lyford; Hampton Men and Women; Human Improvability, Anson Phelps Stokes; Humanity of Armstrong, James H. Dillard; Hampton's Work for the Indians, Caroline W. Andrus; Lynching, a National Menace, James E. Gregg; Set of Twenty Hampton Pictures (25 Cents); Sketch of Hollis Burke Frissel, George Foster Peabody; and Hampton Trade Courses, William A. Aery.

These pamphlets are read by men and women who are seeking material on Hampton's founder, General Armstrong, and his famous educational principles; on industrial education, in which Hampton was a pioneer; or on the various aspects of race problems, on which Hampton is a recognized authority.

The Hampton Student—An illustrated magazine, issued monthly by the alumni and students of Hampton Institute at One Dollar per year; single copy, Ten Cents. Gives pictures of every-day life at Hampton, and covers all phases of under graduate work and play. Summarizes the activities of Hampton graduates.

THE material contrast between the structures with which he (Booker T. Washington) began and the present great, ample and commodious plant is sufficiently striking to be enough for one man to bring about. But satisfactory and encouraging as this is, it is but an imperfect measure of Dr. Washington's work and achievement. The education and annual turning out of two or three hundred young men and women for lives useful to themselves and their families is of course a most commendable and helpful work, but that was only one part of what he did and sought to do. His purpose was to radiate from a center like Tuskegee the light of the homely but ever-living truth which must form the basis of real advance for his race, or for any race.—WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, Chief Justice United States Supreme Court.

The Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute

The Annual Tuskegee Negro Conference

Meets annually at Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute the Third Wednesday and Thursday in January.

It was founded thirty-two years ago by the late Dr. Booker T. Washington, and it brings together representatives of both races, including farmers, doctors, business men, ministers and leaders in all walks of life, who come to Tuskegee Institute for the common purpose of establishing greater sympathy and understanding between the races and encouraging any and every movement looking towards progress along all lines of the South.

The first day is usually taken up for the most part with informal reports and personal experiences of farmers, the purpose of which is to give an indication of the real problems of the rural schools of the South. It has proved to be one of the best possible methods of finding out just what the actual conditions are among the people of the South as to their homes, their churches and their schools.

On the second day the Workers' Conference is held. At this time the teachers, ministers and social workers all assemble and thrash out the various problems, many of which have suggested themselves as a result of the first day's conference.
